The verb to get is one of our most misused words; it means to acquire, win, obtain; and, primarily, it signifies the putting forth of effort to attain something. Consequently it is not only superfluous, but incorrect, to speak of a man as "getting drowned" or "getting sick"; and you may, unfortunately "have a cold," but it is impossible that you "have got a cold." At this moment no exceptions occur to the writer to the rule that got should never be used in connection with have, which alone sufficiently expresses possession. Say "I have the picture"; "The dog has a broken leg." The irregular verbs lay and lie are frequently confounded. Lay is an active or transitive verb, and lie is passive or intransitive. We lay things down, or have laid them down; but we and things lie at rest. You lie down, have lain down, will lie down, or are lying down; she lay down yesterday and is going to lie down this afternoon. A frequent error is to confound the past tenses of these verbs. One should say "Mary laid the book on the table, and lay down herself," but the book lies on the table.—Demorest Magazine.

Divorce in Burmah.

Suppose a Burmese husband and wife quarrel and determine to separate. The wife—who always does all the marketing—goes out and buys two little candles of equal length, which are made especially for this use. She brings them home. She and her husband sit down on the floor and light them simultaneously. One candle stands for him, the other for her. The one whose candle burns out first rises and goes out of the house forever, with nothing but what he or she may have on. The one whose candle has survived the longest even by a second, takes everything. So the divorce and the division of the property—if you can call that a division—are settled.

The Empress of Japan.

The Empress of Japan is said to enjoy the largest washing of any royal or plebian personage in the round world. She is a very petite and winsome little lady. It does not take much to cover her, to be sure, but a Japanese Queen must change that covering many, many times a day, and her raiment must be of delicate, cobwebby, lacey silk, satin, crape or crepe de chine. Even if she never wears the same article twice she has it cleaned, washed, perfumed and either packed away in her wardrobe, presented to her ladies in waiting or her beloved female retainers. At one time during the last summer season, when her maids were busy putting away summer robes and bringing to light autumn ones, she had over 2,000 silk kamonas sent to her royal laundry and cleaning department of the imperial household. This, they say, was a very small amount indeed for the royal washerwomen.

Her funny little stockings, with arrangements like gloves' fingers for each toe, numbered many, many thousands and had to be attended to as carefully and thoroughly as though she had only one pair and never knew where the next one would come from. She dons European costume, to be sure, almost all of the time, and always at state festivals, and this fact, together with the necessary Japanese custom of donning a robe for every day in the year adds to her weekly laundry list.—Tokyo Letter.

Villages Besieged by Wolves.

A number of villages in the Mzensk district of the Government of Orel have for several weeks past been practically deprived of intercommunication by a kind of wolf siege. These ravenous pests, which are more than ordinarily numerous and pedatory this season, at first confined themselves to nocturnal raids upon horses, cattle, sheep and pigs; but since a better watch has been kept the daring animals have taken to harrying the peasants and besieging the villages during the day, as well as under cover of the night. Several children have been carried off or devoured on the spot, in stray places. The district authorities offer a reward of three roubles for every wolf's head brought in, but this incentive has so far proved of little avail, owing to the scarcity of arms among the people, and to the astute wariness of the wolves themselves. A few companies of troops are now being formed into battue parties in order the more effectually to rid the neighborhood of this harrassing wolf-plague.

The Ministerial Association

There was a good attendance at the Ministerial Association this morning The essay was by Rev. Mr. Roberts and was entitled: "The teachings of the pulpit in regard to morality." It was favorably discussed by all those present.

Easter Lilies, Music and Themes

That yesterday was Easter Sunday was noticeable in the churches by reason of the profusion of flowers, especially of the fragrant and graceful Easter lilies, the resurrection anthems by the choir and the themes of the sermons that in every pulpit were of the great event that created the first Easter morn, the corner stone of Christian doctrine and belief.

Christ Church

In Christ church yesterday there was Holy Communion in the morning and a special Easter service in the evening. There were large congregations present at both services. The interior of the church was very prettily decorated with flowers. The Rev. J. H. Hutton preached an eloquent sermon from the text: "After three days I will rise again," which is found in St. Matthew. The singing of the choir was also excellent. During the offertory Mr. Petty sang a solo.

Immanual Church

The Easter services were attended by good congregations both morning and evening. The number partaking of the Holy Communion being larger than for some years past. The pastor took for his text in the morning "The walk to Emmaus" taking from His conversation at that time many useful life lessons. The choir under the leadership of Madame Tourgis sang Jackson's Te Deum. The whole service being of a high order of merit.

LOST WOMEN

What Chance Have They of Escape?—A Case in Point

A contemporary writer who has got something like a near view of one of the present social problems, says:

Has it ever occurred to you what a commentary upon our civilization are these lost women, and the attitude of society towards them?

A little child strays from the home enclosure, and the whole community is on the alert to find the wanderer and restore it to its mother's arms. What rejoicing when it is found! What heartiness of congratulation! There are no harsh comments upon poor, tired feet, be they ever so miry; no reprimand for the soiled and torn garments; no lack of kisses for the tear-stained face.

But let the child be grown to womanhood, let her be led from it by the scourge of want; what happens then? Do Christian men and women go in search of her? Do they provide all possible help for her return? Or, if she returns of her own notion, do they receive her with delicacy as to secure her against wandering again? Far from it! At the first step she is denounced as lost—lost! echo friends and relatives: "We disown you; don't ever come near to disgrace us!" "Lost!" says society indifferently "How bad these girls are!" And "Lost, irretrievably lost!" is the prompt verdict of conventional morality, while one and all unite in bolting every door between her and respectability. Ah, will not these lost ones be required at our hands hereafter?

The truth of this was evidenced in this city the other evening. A young man and woman were attracting considerable attention on the streets by reason of their tipsy condition and the man was arrested. His partner walked away. Knowing neither what to do or where to go, she wandered about the streets alone for some time when a gentleman who saw her paramour arrested, surmising that she would, as soon as the shades of evening fell, become the prey of social wolves that infest this as other cities, took her in hand, secured from the police magistrate the release of her bacchanalian escort and sent them home.

It was perhaps only saving the girl, she was only nineteen, from the fire to keep her in the frying pan, but the fact that impressed itself upon the mind of the gentleman in question was the utter lack of care for such as she, or provision for their rescue.

The Carnival Out of Sight at Last.

The carnival committee have somewhat lost their "nerve" and taken up with a little common sense instead. This is vouched for by the wording of the last notice of meeting in which the "carnival" is not mentioned but instead it is called the "national regatta and boat race committee." This looks a good deal like the ONTARIO'S suggestion when the "carnival" was first mooted.

AN EASTER WEDDING

Mr W. J. Embury of this City Married in Peterboro this Morning

A quiet wedding took place this morning at 11 o'clock in George Street Methodist church, Peterboro, when Mr. W. J. Embury, of this city, was united in wedlock to Miss Ida Knight youngest daughter of Dr. Knight of Peterboro, formerly of Bloomfield. The ceremony was preformed by the Rev. Mr. Young in the presence of only a few relatives and intimate friends of the family. On account of the recent death of a near relative of the bride the wedding was as unostentatious as possible. After the interesting ceremony was completed the party drove to the residence of the bride's parents where a sumptuous wedding breakfast was partaken of and the happy couple took the afternoon train for this city taking with them the best wishes of their many friends in Peterboro. Mr. and Mrs. Embury will take up their residence on Dundas street. The ONTARIO joins with their many friends in wishing them a long and prosperous career.

A PURSE AND ADDRESS

A very pleasant gathering of the citizens of Trenton took place in the Masonic Lodge Rooms, last evening at 8 o'clock to bid farewell to our late chief constable, Wm. Hinde, who leaves with his family for Toronto on Saturday. The Rev. Mr. Wilkins was requested to take the chair. In opening the proceedings he stated the object of the meeting and said that the citizens of Trenton could not allow our late Chief to leave Trenton without in some way expressing their appreciation of the service he had rendered the town. When the chief came to Trenton over eleven years ago there was a good deal to contend with. It was nothing unusual to see drunkness and fighting on our streets which were of very rare occurrence now. He said the citizens of Trenton were very sorry to loose him now after so many years. He quite approved of economy when it didn't interfere with efficiency, but there appeared to be something more than this in the removal of a good officer like the late Chief Hinde. However, there was no doubt that he would not be long before he got a good position. Mr. Wilkins then on behalf of a large number of the citizens presented the Chief with an address and well filled purse. The Chief thanked the citizens who had so kindly thought of him on his having to leave town and he would never forget the many kindnesses he had received from the citizens of Trenton "I can assure you Mr. chairman and gentleman," said Mr. Hinde "I shall never forget the many pleasant hours I have spent in this lodge room and will never forget the beautiful principles of the Masonic Order, which are Brotherly Love, Relief and Truth the latter in particular. I may say with regard to the A. O. U. W. of which lodge I am a Past Master that I cannot forget the many pleasant hours I have spent there.

O. H. Bonter said.—I was Chairman of the Police Committee over eleven years ago when the Chief was appointed over twenty others and always found him a splendid officer willing and ready at all times to do his duty without fear or favor.

Mr. R. Fraser also spoke pleasantly and was followed by a number of other citizens.

The company dispersed after singing Auld Lang Sine.

Miss Coombs' Juliet

[From Times and Chronicle, Cincinnati.]

Miss Coombs' impersonation of Juliet, the heroine of "Romeo and Juliet," although familiar to our theater-goers. was never presented with such magnetic force and dramatic power, as it was last evening to one of the finest and largest audiences of the season. The parquette, dress-circle and balcony of the Grand Opera House were filled by our best people, who, from the rising to the falling of the curtain, gave out an unwonted enthusiasm of applause. We understandingly pronounce Miss Coombs' Juliet the most perfect conception of that role we have ever witnessed. In the intense situation of the fourth act she seemed inspired; her every movement when she takes the opiate which is to bring her Romeo, was the faultless coloring to an artistic depiction of the extreme horror of the tomb, and for reward drew forth tumultuous applause for her appearance three times before the curtain. Hers was a great triumph, which those who witnessed it will ever remember with pleasure, as it was the spontaneous offering of popular favor to a great actress.

Miss Coombs and her talented company will appear at the Queen's Opera House to-morrow night. There is every indication of a large house.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly For May

Flowers, birds, sunshine, and the open are conspicuous both in the matter and pictures of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for May. The number opens with a beautifully illustrated article "The Business of Blossoms, by Martha McCulloch Williams, showing that this country maintains greenhouses, hothouses and floral establishments whose aggregate value is over forty million dollars. Nelly Woodworth follows with some delightful "Star Leaves from the Book of Nature, illustrated by Joseph Becker. "A modern May Day," by Mrs. M. E. Leicester Addis, is full of the quaint legendry of this vernal festival, and gives a number of photographs of May queens crowned and enthroned, amidst the fairest rural scenes of Old England. Other picturesque and interesting contributions to this breezy number of Frank Leslie's are: "Altman: A Golden Eyrie," by Mrs Laban Smith; "A Laureate's Daughter," by Margaret B. Wright; "A night on the Great Pyramid," by James Ricalton; "A Western Prospecting Ranch," by W. P. Rowe; "On the Plains," by Edwin Emerson, Jr.; "Persian Shrines of the Shiahs," by the Rev James Bossett; San Marco" (Fort Marion, St. Augustine), by Charles H. Coe; and "The Reign of the Olive," by Frederick M. Turner. In addition there are good short stories, poems and departments.

A PECULIAR CASE.

AN ANXIOUS MAN

The Disease Disappears in Three Weeks by the use of B. B. B.—Letter From Manitoba Fully Describing it.

DEAR SIRS—During the winter of 1892-93, I was covered with pimples on the inside of my right leg between the knee and the ankle. As I never had anything of the kind before I was anxious about it, and sought medical advice, but getting no relief from the doctor I tried a bottle of B. B. B., applying some of it to my leg as well as using it internally, and to my surprise the nasty disease, whatever it was, disappeared within three weeks, and I am thankful to say it has never re-appeared.

To the Editor of The ONTARIO.

In your report of the medical evidence taken at the coroner's inquest the following statement occurs: "All the blood vessels in the left side of the neck had been cut through; he thought death would be instantaneous: the vagus nerve was cut and death would result from this; this vagus nerve being cut immediately stopped the action of the heart, this would keep the blood from gushing as it would when pumped from the heart." The part of this statement which has been put in italics might account for the facts stated in your report regarding the blood. Standard authorities in physiology, however, state that the vagi or as commonly called the pneumogastric nerves exercise a restraining influence over the action of the heart; for when by section their influence is withdrawn, the pulsations of the organ are increased in frequency and strength. It would seem then that some other explanation becomes necessary to elucidate the facts alluded to above.

FARMER'S LEVEL.

A New Instrument for Drainage Purposes.

A simple device for taking levels and running grades has been on exhibition for some days at the Massey, Harris implement establishment, Front street, Belleville, which has attracted considerable attention.

This "Farmers' Level" is the invention of A. R. Davis & Co., of Napanee and consists of two uprights of wood 12 feet long and hinged together at their upper end and held apart at their lower end by a cross arm to the centre of which is attached a brass scale with grade graduations. A plumb line is suspended from the centre of the hinge and when the feet of the uprights are level the plumb line covers the zero mark on the scale.

Fine needle sights project from the uprights at a height convenient for the eye, and these are level also when the plumb line covers the centre or zero mark of the scale. Any person can use these sights and determine the fall across a field and then without moving the instrument insert a wedge under one leg until the needle sights are on the grade of the drain then the drain is constructed parallel to the line of sight by means of a rod to which a target is attached. The instrument has a stay brace which holds it firmly in position until the drain is completed.

We notice in a recent issue of the "Farmers' Sun" an article giving the discussion of a paper on the "Farmers' Level" by the surveyors of Ontario at their annual meeting in Toronto in which this instrument is highly recommended for its great utility, its simplicity and its cheapness. The necessity for tile draining is becoming more and more recognized by our farmers and this inexpensive instrument will, we believe, fill a long felt want for this purpose especially. The old plan of laying tile by means of a spirit level 'by guess' has had its day and farmers would do well to examine into the merits of this cheap instrument, which any school boy can use, before laying any more tile.

We believe it merits a large sale and cordially recommend its general use.

The Evolution

Of medicinal agents is gradually relegating the old-time herbs, pills, draughts and vegetable extracts to the rear and bringing into general use the pleasant and effective liquid laxative, Syrup of Figs. To get the true remedy see that it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only. For sale by all leading druggists.

Warning to Women.

Ladies who appreciate the high quality Priestley's Dress Goods should make a point to see that Priestley's name is stamped on every five yards. Instances are not unknown where Priestley's trade mark the "Varnished Board" has been used the second time with inferior goods wrapped upon it.

The warm rain of the past couple of days has taken nearly all the ice out of the bay and in a week's time the several steamers and sailing crafts will likely be on their usual routes.

Miss Jane Coombs will appear here on Tuesday evening with one of the best companies that ever visited this city in Romeo and Juliet as played by her over 1000 nights.

The great favor in which Ayer's Pills are held all over the world has been well earned. They are easy and even pleasant to take, and for all complaints of the stomach and liver, and bowels, are the safest and most thorough medicine in pharmacy. Every dose effective.

If afflicted with scalp diseases, hair falling out, and premature baldness, do not use greese or alcoholic preparations, but apply Hall's Hair Renewer.

Henry Ward Beecher once informed a man who came to him complaining of gloomy and despondent feelings, that what he most needed, was a good cathartic, meaning, of course, such as Ayer's Cathartic Pills, every dose being effective.

Bicycle Riding

(From Harper's Weekly)

The bicycle is the fastest vehicle propelled by animal power. As for the distance that may be gone over in a given time, the bicycler and his machine have far outstripped both trotters and runners. Bicycling, moreover, has great charms for those who have neither the capacity nor desire to attain great bursts of speed. The exercise is as pleasant as horse back riding, and very much cheaper. But no matter how general the use of the bicycle may become, walking is not likely to lose its devotees. Daily walks must be taken within a limited horizon, however, while the regular bicycle-rider's area is extended amazingly. It has been asserted with some authority that the same effort that is required to walk one mile will propel a bicycle six miles. Bicycle-riders, at least, will not dispute this assumption. Now let us see what are the consequences of this increased capacity. A man who lives in a suburban district, in his walks around his home, if he be an average walker, will go two and a half miles out and the same distance, making his walk five miles. In his various excursions he is likely to explore the district about his home for two and a half miles in every direction, and if roads be plenty he may become acquainted with the general features of the landscape within an area of about twenty square miles. The same man on a bicycle will extend his radius to six times two and a half miles and will therefore make fifteen miles out and fifteen miles back. He will thus have broadened the domain of his observation that he may explore the country embraced within 707 sq. miles. Vigorous walkers who go five miles out and back enjoy a territory of seventy-eight miles; but this vigorous and ambitious man, if the six to one assumption hold good, would on the bicycle extend his excursions to thirty miles out and thirty back, so that he in time would have for his own all there is of beauty and instruction in 2827.4 square miles.

The cheapness of bicycling as compared with horse-back-riding is worthy of consideration. A bicycle costs from $100 to $150; a horse costs from $200 to very much larger sums. The keep of a horse is at least $30 a month; including the charges of the farrier and veterinary; the cost of a bicycle for repairs ought not to be $3 a month; indeed, many of the makers guarantee them for a certain time, and make repairs without charge. So first cost and maintenance are both in favor of the machine.

A YOUNG LAD AND HIS FAITHFUL FRIEND.

WORST KIND OF DYSPEPSIA

GENTLEMEN,—I write to inform you that for years I had been troubled with Dyspepsia, and having tried other medicines which entirely failed, I at last found relief and cure in Burdock Blood Bitters, of which I took two bottles, the result being a perfect cure. Although only a young lad I had been troubled with Dyspepsia for four or five years, but I can say now that B.B.B. does its work faithfully in the worst kind of Dyspepsia, and has proved itself the only cure for me.

ERNEST MCGREGOR,
Whitby, Ont.

On The Inside.

As a remedy for internal use Hagyard's Yellow Oil is wonderful in its curative power. One or two doses cure Hoarseness and Sore Throat. Asthma, Bronchitis and Swelled Tonsi are quickly relieved. For Quinsy, Colds etc., it is the best remedy.

UTILIZING OLD SHOES.

How Cast-Off Footwear is Made to Serve Useful Purposes.

A new use has been found, it is said, for old boots and shoes. This is how they are treated in the process of conversion into a novel kind of house carpet.

The shoes are thrown promiscuously into an immense tank. into which steam and dissolving compounds are run, thereby causing the old shoes to take a thick liquid form. Certain proportions of tallow, borax and glue are then introduced. and the pulp is run into moulds.

The moulds are shaped after the plan of a regular sand mould, and may have the form of flowers, leaves, figures or geometrical designs. The pulp is run into these moulds and the figure hardens in the cold air. These casts are arranged in the proper figure or design, when a cementing process begins. The cement is a compound made from leather pulp and glue, and it is run between the figures. The figures soften a little with the compound, and the whole hardens together.

In the casting of each figure a different colored pulp is used—red pulp for red roses, white pulp for white flowers, green for leaves and so on. Thus elaborate designs may be carried out. Then comes the pressing by the use of rollers, and polishing with varnish.

The result is a nice-looking floor covering, the cost of which is less than straw matting, and less than oilcloth; in fact, an economical and durable carpeting.—Shoe and Leather Facts.

Octogenarians.

Among the people in active life who have passed the eighty-year mark may be mentioned Mr. Gladstone, Pope Leo XIII., Bismarck, Verdi, Prof. Dana, Bessemer, Sir Henry Parkes, Sir James Bacon, the English jurist; William Salmon, of the Royal College of Surgeons, now 105; General George S. Greene, the oldest living West Point graduate, now 93; Neal Dow, the Rev. William H. Furness, Francis William Newman, a brother of Cardinal Newman; James Martineau, ex-Senator Payne, Senator Morrill, ex-Senator Thurman, Harriet Beecher-Stowe, Bishop Clark of Rhode Island; Curtius, the Greek scholar; and Lady Burdett-Coutts. Justice Field, ex-Senator Dawes, Leon Say, Parke Godwin and Russell Sage will be eighty in 1896. In 1897 King Christopher of Denmark, Prof. Mommsen, Sir John Gilbert and Senator John M. Palmer will reach the octogenarian stage. In 1899 Queen Victoria, Julia Ward Howe, Crispi, General Longstreet, John Ruskin, W. W. Story and Bishop Huntington will make up the list of young octogenarians.—New York Tribune.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria.
When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria.
When she became Miss, she clung to Castoria.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich every bodily function fags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, or contamination by bile, or other causes, bilious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is NORTHROP & LYMA'S Vegetable Discovery,

Naturally fair complexions would be the rule rather than the exception as unfortunately it is at present, if the ladies would wholly abandon cosmetics, and more generally keep the blood pure and vigorous by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only reliable blood-purifier.

As baldness makes one look prematurely old, so a full head of hair gives to mature life the appearance of youth. To secure this and prevent the former, Ayers's Hair Vigor is confidently recommended. Both ladies and gentlemen perfer it to any other dressing.

Goldsmith supplied the British Columbia salmon for the Mackenzie Bowell banquet, since then the demand has been great. Try it.

Are you all tired out, do you have tha tired feeling or sick headache? You can be relieved of all these by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Much of life's misery is due to indigestion; for who can be happy with a pain in his stomach? As a corrective and strengthener of the ailementary organs, Ayer's Pills are invaluable, their use being attended always with marked benefit.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain. heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.

If you once try Carter's Little Liver Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable, small and easy to take, Don't forget this.

INSURED HIS WIFE'S LIFE BY FRAUD

His Object in Trying To Burn His Wife and Children Was To Marry a Dressmaker of Whom He Was Enamoured—Still at Large.

Winnipeg, Man., April 16.—Nothing more sensational than the Engineer Farr arson case has appeared in the police records of Winnipeg for years, and perhaps nothing in the nature of crime has ever aroused so much indignation in the community as the fiendish, cold-blooded attempt to burn the innocent woman and her little ones. When, on Sunday, the police announced that to a remarkable chain of evidence they had added a motive for the crime by the discovery of the young woman to whom Farr, though a married man, was engaged, it was then thought that the most sensational climax had been reached.

A denouement more startling was furnished in the morning, however, by the escape of Farr from the lock-up. He has thus far succeeded in eluding his pursuers.

The young woman to whom he was engaged is Maggie Robinson, a dressmaker. He had promised to marry her in a month, and she was preparing her wedding trousseau. It is proven beyond doubt that he tried to burn his wife and children in their beds in order to carry out his promise. He had some time ago, by personation, placed insurance on the life of his wife for $10,000.

SIFTON VOICES GREENWAY.

Manitoba's Premier States That Sifton's Statement's Are Official—N. F. Davin's Views.

Winnipeg, April 16.—Premier Greenway, who for two weeks has been resting at his country home, returned today. Mr. Greenway did not hesitate to say that the statements made by Attorney-General Sifton in Haldimand officially represented the stand the Government intended to take in regard to the Remedial Order in the school case.

Nicholas Flood Davin, who was here to-day en route to Ottawa, was asked, if the province refused to pass remedial legislation, what the Dominion Government would do. He replied: "I can't say, but, having done what they have, I think they will feel bound to give remedial legislation. For myself, I am opposed to interference with Manitoba. I told Archbishop Tache in 1890 that he was making a mistake in making this a Federal question. He would, by this, raise up a party in federal politics, which would oppose him on ground outside of the school question, on the ground of provincial rights. What he should have done was to throw himself on the justice of the people of Manitoba, and they would have seen right done."

McCARTHY RIDING FOR A FALL.

Dr. Montague's Majority Will Be a Large One.

Caledonia, April 15.—The political pot is boiling over. Dr. Montague's majority, it is now conceded, will be a large one. The Conservatives are working like beavers. Mr. W. H. Merritt reached here this morning and went out to the Indian Reserve. Mr. R. Birmingham is at Hagersville. The McCarthy party are preparing for a fall by declaring that the vote will not be fairly recorded.

Mgr. Fabre's Letter to Vercheres Priests.

Montreal, April 16.—The Conservatives are jubilant over the action taken by Archbishop Fabre in issuing a letter to his clergy in the county of Vercheres, which is taken as an endorsation of the Government's action in the Manitoba school question, and which, they claim, will have an important bearing on the voting.

A portion of the letter relating to the Manitoba school question reads as follows: "In asking you to remain silent on the Manitoba school question, my intention is that you should not refer to it from the pulpit. You are free, however, beyond this, to express the entire satisfaction of the Canadian episcopacy regarding the firm and courageous position lately taken by the Federal Government. It is only doing justice to the good-will of our Legislatures and encouraging them to follow up to the end the work so happily commenced."

Dr. Borden, M.P., Renominated

Halifax, N.S., April 16.—Dr. W. E. Borden, M.P., was to-day chosen by the Liberals in convention as their candidate for the Dominion Commons at the ensuing election in King's County. Thus far he is unopposed.

A CONFIDENTIAL CLERK MISSING.

Toronto, April 16.—Alexander G. Wilkie, chief bookkeeper and cashier for W. D. Mathews & Co., grain and malt dealers, 26 Front-street east, is in Buffalo and rumor says that he is a defaulter to the firm in several thousand dollars. No warrant has been issued for his arrest by Matthews & Co., however.

Wilkie, who is known probably to every rounder in the city, entered the employ of the firm 22 years ago as office boy, and gradually worked himself up to the position of confidential clerk and cashier, at a salary of $1600 a year. He always lived up to his income, and of late has been so irregular in his habits that his employers decided to dispense with his services. After his dismissal rumors reached the ears of Mr. Matthews that he thought warranted investigating, and he decided to put an accountant on the books of his cashier. The result was the discovery of many discrepancies.

Mr. Wilkie's wife and six children reside in Cecil-street, this city.

EARTHQUAKES IN EUROPE.

Numerous Towns and Villages In Ruins.

ADRIATIC COUNTRIES SHAKEN.

Falling Walls Kill and Maim Many Thousands Camping Out in the Fields—Terrible Scenes in Panic-Stricken Towns and Villages

Vienna, April 16.—Shocks of earthquake were experienced throughout Southern Austria last night, the manifestations beginning at midnight.

At the first shock in Venice the guests fled from the hotels to the public squares, and the inhabitants deserted their homes and took refuge in the available open spaces. Many of the guests, with a large number of residents, left the city by early trains this morning, fearing a recurrence of the shocks.

All the clocks in the city stopped at 11.20 o'clock this morning. Persons arriving at the railroad stations report deaths and damage to property in many towns besides those already mentioned. They say that along the railroad lines they saw thousands camping in the fields. The trains were rocked by the shocks. Some say that the rolling motion was as noticeable as on a ship at sea. All reports indicate that the shocks followed the lines from Florence to Botzen, Florence to Vienna, and Serajeno in Bosnia to Stein-Am-Angar in Hungary.

At Laibach, 35 miles northeast of Trieste, 31 shocks were felt between midnight and 7.30 o'clock this morning. All of the churches, public buildings, business houses and residences in the town were damaged. Several persons were killed by falling walls, etc., and a large number were more or less seriously injured.

At Velden ten shocks were felt and at Trieste four. Shocks were also felt at Abazzia, Arco, Gorizia, Cilli and other places, in all of which many buildings were destroyed.

Communication between Trieste and Laibach is suspended. In many of the districts between the two towns, as well as in the sections visited by the shocks, the people are camping out in the fields.

Persons coming from Laibach give vivid descriptions of the scenes of terror during the earthquakes. The first shock shortly after midnight was so severe that the whole populace was aroused, and hundreds ran half naked into the streets. By 3 o'clock the streets were blocked with carts and carriages, in which the sick and aged and children were being conveyed to places of safety. A little later vans loaded with furniture could be seen on every side. Men and women carrying clothing and boxes of valuables crowded the streets, and often stopped the progress of the vehicles. Terrified groups knelt on the corners and before churches, praying for deliverance and begging the priests to pray for them.

The barracks, the museum and distillery and half a dozen other large buildings were laid in ruins. Scores of other buildings were cracked and half shaken from their foundations.

At Fiume the audience in the Players' Theatre has just risen to leave the building, when the first shock came. All crowded madly to the exits. Many persons were injured in the struggle, but none fatally. All night boats filled with fugitives put out from the Fiume wharves to the shipping. There is hardly a vessel in the harbor without several Fiume families on board, who refuse to land.

During the panic in Trieste a frightened horse ran down a street, injuring 20 persons seriously and knocking down 50 or 60. The harbor was agitated as if by a storm, and several boats carrying persons to the shipping were capsized. Six persons were drowned. Slight shocks have been felt here throughout the day.

Disastrous Floods in Quebec

Quebec, April 16.—Port Neuf County is again threatened with an inundation. Several bridges have been carried away, paper mills have been closed, and in some instances inhabitants have been compelled to use canoes to get out of their houses. A severe gale of north-west wind prevails since yesterday. The tide has risen above its ordinary level. Accidents to chimneys, signs, fences, etc., have been caused as a result of the high wind.

The Beautiful Blue Danube.

Vienna, April 16.—Rains and snow floods have caused the rising of the River Danube to such an extent as to completely inundate the Knert district and other parts of the city of Presburg, Hungary. The volume of water was so great as to wreck hundreds of houses, many of whose inmates were drowned.

Big Blow at Halifax.

Halifax, April 16.—One of the heaviest gales for several years has been raging here for 12 hours from the south-east. A large fleet of vessels is detained in port in consequence. So far no serious damage has been reported.

THE STAMP FORGERY CASE.

Hamilton, Ont., April 16.—Mrs. Mack was brought before Magistrate Jelfs Monday on a charge of selling counterfeit United States two-cent stamps, but the American officers decided to drop the prosecution in Canada, and have begun extradition proceedings before Judge Muir. In these proceedings Mrs. Mack is charged with having in Buffalo on April 5 knowingly uttered 38,000 stamps at the office of the Wells, Fargo Express Company. In an interview, Mrs. Mack admitted having gone to Buffalo two days after being engaged by Morrison, and there met her employer. She received several parcels from him on her arrival and expressed them in Buffalo. On being shown a package addressed to Edward Lowry, 1313 Ashland Block, Chicago, she acknowledged having addressed and expressed it.

The American officers profess to know who Mrs. Mack is. They will not divulge her name, but it is said she is an old criminal. Prisoner was remanded for eight days. A well-dressed stranger has been interesting himself in Mrs. Mack lately, and was an interested spectator at the proceedings in court to-day. He was not recognized by Mrs. Mack, and none of the detectives knew him. He has tried to obtain an interview with the woman several times, but has been refused admission to the jail.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To,

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles ! Piles ! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelle's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money.'

Germany reports 289 instances of suicide among school children during the last six years.

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal.'

For Over Fifty Years

AN OLD AND WELL-TRIED REMEDY.—Mrs. Winslow's Sothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

She (bitterly)—Before you married me I was an angel. I'll never be that again I suppose. He (sarcastically)—Well, I live in hopes.

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

The Pekin (China) Gazette, a journal that was 200 years old when the Normans conquered England, has the further distinction of having had 1,600 of its editors beheaded.

Beyond Dispute.

There is no better, safer or more pleasant cough remedy made than Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cures Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles.

After la Grippe obstinate coughs, lung trouble, etc., frequently follow. There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time effectual and pleasant, as Milburns Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry Hypophosphites, which is the largest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. Price 50c. and $1.00 per bottle.

PURE LITERATURE

The Brantford Expositor applying the lesson of Oscar Wilde's fall, or rather the discovery of his fall, says:

It is to be hoped that one outcome of the recent revolting occurrences will be to recall the reading public to the great and pure English poets to the gentlemanly, if old fashioned, novel writers, and to the legtimate, if less spicy, drama. Popularity is not the ultimate test of merit, and, thanks to the better element of human nature, the popularity of which is both ethically and esthetically objectionable, is generally found to be evanescent. Responsibility for the future taste of our people in the matter of reading rests partly on parents, partly on teachers, but partly also on those who manage, and who patronize our public libraries. While the private right of the individual to spend his money in purchasing soul-destroying reading matter cannot easily be curtailed, it is clearly indefensible that money raised by public contributions should become a means of inflicting irreparable moral injury on the community.

FOOLISHNESS REGARDING THE SCHOOL QUESTION

The "Intel" says: "All this fuss and fury over the Manitoba School question could be avoided if the Liberal party would only act reasonably." It would appear from this that our contemporary had a private wire regarding the inwardness of N Clarke Wallace's thought on the subject, and furthermore that it had got over its scare at Child Tupper's baulk. Then there is the statement of Mr. Taylor M. P. chief Government whip, to be remembered, the resolutions of all the Orange Lodges, good Tory bodies all, and lastly the disappearance of the Premier.

In the same article is vouchsafed an interesting bit of information that the Intell's readers will be glad to learn. And the funny part of it is that that paper seems to have made the discovery all of itself. It is this: "The vexatious question which has given rise to the difficulty comes from Manitoba."

The initial inaccuracy is repeated thus: "The solution of the difficulty has been committed to the Province where it originated, and if the Liberal party so wills it that difficulty need never again obtrude itself in the Federal arena." And a little further on it is contradicted thus: "The constitution provides that it shall be heard first in the Local Legislature and secondly if no relief be given there, to the representatives of the people of Canada."

It is almost past comprehension how any paper could make itself rediculous by publishing such silly twaddle as the following:

"Greenway & Co. cry out that the Dominion Government has proposed to coerce Manitoba with regard to the school question. Nothing of the sort. The Government have simply asked Manitoba to carry out the decision of the court to which both parties to the case appealed. That is all. The record of Mr. Greenway and his colleagues in this matter is a record of deceit and broken promises. They will find that they cannot act upon such judical decisions as are in their favor and set at naught those which were given against them. The game "Heads I win; tails you lose" cannot be played in connection with judgments of the highest court in the realm by those who submitted their contentions to that court."

Is that all? L'Evenement (Conservative) says:—"If Mr. Greenway and his colleagues refuse to do what is right to the just demands of the Manitoba minority and the injunction of the Federal Government, Mr. Bowell, Orangeman though he be, will arrange in spite of them, to give to Catholics the protection to which they have a right."

EDITORIAL NOTES

"His early career was noted for extreme appeals to Orange bigotry and in and out of Parliament he confined himself to the congenial task of speaking as an Orangeman, voting as an Orangeman, and acting as an old-time admirer of the intolerance of Sandy Row."

And yet even here where he is known and where he has been the central figure of Tory politics for a quarter of a century even good Tories when in a confidential mood will tell the stranger that Orangism was the plank with which, aided by fortuitous circumstances, 'Mac' Bowelll bridged the chasm that separated high political preferment from mediocrity of mind and purpose.

NICARAGUA'S SKILFUL REPLY.

Washington, April 15.—The fact that Nicaragua has made a reply to the British ultimatum, which was regarded by the British Foreign Office as in a measure satisfactory, was mentioned in the despatches several days ago. Particulars as to the contents of Nicaragua's reply have been received here. Nicaragua, while definitely agreeing to none of the specific demands of Great Britain, concedes the applicability of the principle of arbitration to some of the acts committed in the Mosquito territory, and suggests in the most friendly tone possible that an impartial commission of arbitrators be constituted for all the grounds of complaint.

Nicaragua points out that the decrees of exile against British subjects which Great Britain demanded should be cancelled unconditionally, had already been annulled before the formal request of Great Britain regarding the matter was received. Nicaragua, although assuring Great Britain of a desire to give complete satisfaction, neither promises to pay the various sums demanded for injuries inflicted on British subjects as stipulated by Lord Kimberley, nor declines to do so, but agrees to a fair and just settlement of claims that shall be recommended by an impartial arbitration. Great Britain's proposition excluding from the arbitration commission a citizen of any American state is ignored in Nicaragua's reply. The communication is regarded in diplomatic circles as a skilful move on Nicaragua's part.

PEACE TO-DAY.

Expectation That China and Japan Will Agree.

London, April 16.—A Central News despatch from Tokyo says that Prince Komatsu, Commander-in-Chief of the Japanese army and navy, with a number of transports, escorted by three warships, passed Shimonoseki yesterday, on his way to the seat of war. The Japanese ships at Shimonoseki signalled their farewells and good wishes as the vessels passed.

The conference is sitting at Shimonoseki to-day, and it is expected that to-day's session will result in the conclusion of peace.

The Times' correspondent in Shanghai says: Li Hung Chang's son-in-law telegraphs that the treaty of peace was signed in Shimonoseki to-day, April 16, and that the terms are: "First, the independence of Corea; second, Japan's retention of the conquered places; third, Japan's retention of the territory east of the Liao River; fourth, permanent cession of Formosa; fifth, indemnity of $100,000,000; sixth, an offensive and defensive alliance between China and Japan.

A despatch from Shanghai to a news agency here says a proclamation bearing the Emperor's name has been issued describing the empire as finished, asserting that he is unable to govern any longer, and that the officials he trusted are corrupt.

The proclamation has caused great excitement, and there are signs of rebellion. The document is said to be the work of secret societies.

The Work of Incendiary Societies.

Washington, April 16.—No credence is attached to the report which reached here from Shanghai by way of London that the Chinese Emperor has issued a proclamation describing the Empire as finished and asserting his inability longer to govern it. In well-informed circles the report is ridiculed as being too absurd to dignify with a denial. It is asserted in the first place that the Chinese Emperor could have no purpose in abdicating, and in the second place his mother, the Dowager Empress, would not permit him to retire if he desired. The proclamation is believed here to be the work of the secret societies in the empire. These societies, it is said, are hostile to the Government, their aims and purposes being similar to those of the Nihilists in Russia. If the proclamation be their work it was probably written for the purpose of adding to the confusion in the empire and to the embarrassment of the reigning powers. The whole story, however, is regarded as another Shanghai fabrication.

TO PULL DOWN THE PRICE OF BEEF.

U.S. Authorities Will Prevent Entry of Mexican Cattle.

Washington, April 16.—In view of the great rise in the price of beef and the reported scarcity of cattle the chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, Dr. Salmon, has recommended to the Secretary of Agriculture the admission of Mexican cattle into the United States under stringent regulations calculated to ensure a rigid inspection of all cattle admitted. Dr. Salmon believes such a course may be safely pursued with the exercise of due vigilance, and that under the circumstances it is judicious. It is hoped by this means to check the tendency to excessive prices to the consumer without injuriously affecting the interests of beef producers.

In accordance with these recommendations Secretary Morgan to-day issued a special order providing that Mexican cattle which have been inspected by an inspector of the department and found free from any infectious or contagious disease may be admitted into California and Texas for grazing or for immediate slaughter.

Cuban Rebels Defeated.

Havana, April 16.—A detachment of Government troops from Hologuin, commanded by Capt. Aguiller, engaged in a battle with a band of rebels 1600 strong at Palma Miros, on Saturday. The insurgents were defeated with a loss of six killed and a considerable number wounded and fled from the field.

Neutrality of the Bahamas.

Gladstone on Armenia.

London, April 16.—Mr. Gladstone, receiving a delegation of the Armenian committee, with several Armenian refugees, at Hawarden to-day, assured them of his profound sympathy. The danger of the Armenian situation now was, he said, that useful action might be delayed or abandoned in view of the promises of the Turkish Government to institute reforms. Mr. Gladstone concluded his remarks by saying: "Anything I can do for your unhappy country I shall always be glad to do, but you must remember that I am an old man and have retired from public life."

Niagara's Big Dynamo Tested.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 15.—For the first time since it was put in the big dynamo in the power-house was run at its fullest speed. This important event took place at 2 o'clock this afternoon and the monster machine performed its work with perfect satisfaction. Not a hitch occurred. The machine makes 250 revolutions to the minute.

Shoe Superstitions.

When you buy a pair of new shoes never put them on a shelf higher than your head, unless you want to bring bad luck; and if you blacken them before you have had both shoes on you may meet with an accident, or even have a sudden death. This is an old Irish superstition. The Scotch girls believe that if they drop their shoes before they are worn trouble will ensue, while a French lady losing her heel is sure of a disappointment in love, and a German mother in the same predicament, feels that she will soon lose one of her children. You must not put your right shoe on your left foot or your left on your right, nor must you put your left shoe on before the right unless you want bad luck. This superstition dates back to one of the Emperors of Rome, who, it is recorded, put on his left shoe first one morning, and came near being assassinated during the day.

TEA, COFFEE AND COCOA.

AN INTERESTING LECTURE ON OUR MODERN BEVERAGES.

Good and Bad Qualities of Tea—Objectious in the Coloring of Tea—Coffee Easily Adulterated—Cocoa Not Easily Digested or Soluble.

A very interesting lecture, illustrated by stereopticon views, was given by Professor Ellis of the School of Practical Science at the Canadian Institute recently, the subject being "Tea, Coffee and Cocoa." The Professor said that when we drink we are not satisfied with quenching the thirst; we demand a beverage which will stimulate our torpid energies, or refresh our flagging powers. In former times, he said, this want was exclusively filled by alcohol, but, after a while, in Africa, Asia, and, later on, in Europe and America, were found plants whose leaves, roots or berries, produced a stimulant to take the place of alcohol. Al contain alkali; the "alkaloid" and "theine" in tea producing in reasonable quantities a stimulant, in larger quantities paralysis. The tea plant, "Camellia thea," belonging to the camellia tribe, is very closely related to the camellia in our green houses, and is indigenous in Assam, where it is found in the thick jungles as a tree fifteen or twenty feet high; it has a leaf nine inches long or more. In China and Japan, where it is cultivated, it is much smaller, not exceeding six or seven feet high, and the leaves never exceeding four inches in length. The Chinese plant was introduced into India by the Government about 1850, and tea is now made from the Chinese and Indian varieties, and from hybrids. In China much of the tea is grown upon hill sides, but the best is grown on level, fertile plains, where it can be cultivated and manured. The smaller and younger the leaves the better will be the quality of the tea, if it is properly prepared. Black and green teas were formerly believed to be different plants, but Dr. Ellis said, they come from exactly the same plant, the difference being only in the mode of preparation. In both cases the leaves are dried over a fire, but in the case of black tea it is allowed to lie in heaps for a time, when it undergoes a species of withering, and fermentation, and it acquires a dark color. The change is the same which occurs in a damp haystack, where after the hay has been heated, it turns black. This is what is purposely done with tea to make it black. After being withered, the black tea is tossed about in a basket by a man to give it the aroma, and on the proper performance of this work depends the quality and the aroma of the tea. In the manufacture of green tea, instead of being subjected to the withering process, after being rolled it is immediately fired, and it requires three men to attend to the process, owing to the skill and work required to keep it from being colored, and these men have to stand before the fire, in some cases as long as nine hours, before the process is concluded. It is then sifted through bamboo mats of different sizes, the smallest being the best.

CARE OVER GREEN TEA.

Nearly all the tea made in Japan is green, and, to show the care that is taken over green tea, Mr. Ellis said that in transporting the chests to the coasts a coolie was required to carry two chests of black tea, which was a heavy load, and necessitated his frequently putting his load on the ground to rest. Thus, when the roads were muddy and wet it, of course, caused a dampness to the tea, but with green tea a coolie only had to carry one chest, and never, on any account, must he put it on the ground, and he avoids this by fastening the chest to one end of a long pole, with an attachment in the centre to go over his head on to his shoulders. When he is tired he sticks the other end into the ground, and thus takes the weight from off his shoulders. Mr. Ellis next came to the question of adulteration, and he said that he knew of no article of food that was less adulterated than tea. Of course, green tea was colored to suit the taste of the European consumer, and this was done by putting a sufficient quantity of Prussian blue into the pan at the last firing, but the quantity used was harmless, as far larger quantities had been used without any harm being done. He said the Chinese do not use it on the tea they drink, but they say it is easy to make, and if the Europeans like it they can have it. Mr. Ellis said the coloring of tea should be discontinued, as it enabled the Chinese to sell a poorer quality of tea than they could if it was not used. He then came to the chemistry of tea, and said that "theine" was found in tea, 2 1-2 to 3 per cent., producing when taken in sufficient quantities nervousness and sleeplessness. Mr. Ellis narrated a legend of an Indian Prince named Dharma, who in 510 A.D., endeavored to go without sleep. Having on one occasion been overcome with sleep he in his anger at his weakness pulled out his eyelashes and threw them on the ground, from which it is said the tea plant sprang.

ESSENTIAL OIL.

Besides "theine" essential oil is found in black tea to the extent of 1-2 per cent., and in green tea about 1 per cent., which produces the same effect as "theine." Tannin is found in black tea-to the amount of 5 per cent., and in green tea to 11 per cent., and is an astringent, which very much interferes with the digestion of fresh meat, and, he said, no doubt it is this tannin that causes indigestion, but he said that it had very little effect on salt meat, and that was one reason why lumbermen could take strong tea in such large quantities, but he said that while theine and the essential oil were easily dissolved, tannin was encased in what is called stone cells and took far longer to dissolve. He then went on to show the mistake of allowing tea to boil, as the tannin is thus brought out, and is, therefore, more injurious.

Coffee, he said, contained the three qualities of tea, but, while tea was adulterated to a very small extent, coffee was one of the most largely adulterated articles of food, chicory being the substance most commonly used. Coffee, he said, yields a light-colored liquid and chicory a very dark one, and a little coffee and a lot of chicory would, of course, make a very dark-colored cup of coffee.

FOOD OF THE GODS.

The cocoa tree, he said, is by many called the "food of the gods," its chief characteristic being that it contains 50 per cent. of fat. Cocoa was believed to be exceedingly nutritious, but it has been shown repeatedly to be to a large extent indigestible and insoluble. The practice of preparing cocoa with milk is a mistake, as milk contained also a large percentage of fat. Cocoa should always be prepared with water.—Toronto Globe.

The Tramp's Opportunity.

Queer things happen in this world. A tramp took refuge in an old graveyard in Geogia and prepared for a sound night's rest, between two graves. About an hour when graveyards are supposed to "yawn," he was awakened by a strange noise, and, on looking up, discovered an escaped convict in the act of filing off his shackles. As the tramp stood up, the convict, in superstitious terror, fell upon his knees, whereupon the tramp arrested him, delivered him over to the authorities at the camp near by and received a reward of $50.

LOST HIS TEMPER AND $5,000.

How a Mississippi Steamboat Captain's Hasty Act Let a Rival Win.

An old man who has been telling a good many people that he once ran a steamboat on the Mississippi River, has been cruising around the downtown hotels for several days, says The Washington Star. Yesterday evening he heard a man reviling a bootblack for accidentally putting blacking on his patent-leather shoe.

"Don't lose your temper, kunnel," said the cap'n gently. "Don't lose your temper. I did that fool thing once and lost the foundation of a big fortune by it. It was like this:—It was in 1855, and I was running the Belle of Helena from Memphis to New Orleans. She was a mighty boat for speed, and she was pretty near the only side-wheeler on the whole Mississippi. There was a rival boat, though, named the Deborah Burr and that year they sent her up and had new bilers put in her. She was laying down at Big Bend landing when I saw her first after that, and when her cap'n see us coming he just backed out to the channel and tooted three or four times and started for New Orleans.

"I made up my mind to catch her, and I made it up still more when Bill Bryant, the gambler, came to me and said if I beat the Deborah Burr to Natchez he'd give me $5,000. Yes, sir, that was his offer. I knew I had that money sure, but I just wanted to make old Carroll—he was Burr's cap'n—sick for the rest of his life; so I told the darkies to tote some turpentine we were carrying as forward deck load down to the fire and throw her in. Well, sir, one nigger was sort o' skeery about it, and hung back; so I just caught him a backhanded blow under the jaw and knocked him overboard. We were right up alongside of the Burr then, and about to pass her, when, doggone if something didn't get the matter with our stabbud wheel. There was nothing to do but stop and find out what was the matter. It broke my heart to see the Burr tearing on down the river, and taking my $5,000 with her; but I soon discovered that it was all my fault. Yes, sir, it was. That miserable nigger I had knocked overboard had got caught in the paddles of that wheel and busted the whole business to pieces. I ain't lost my temper since. Now, remember that experience next time you start to lose yours. Have you got any chewing tobacco?"

She Wears a Snake.

Lady Randolph Churchill, it is said, is the only woman in the English peerage who can boast of having been tattooed. The operation was performed while travelling in India, and was suggested by noticing the process being done by a British soldier on a sailor.

She had the artist brought before her and asked for some designs. He suggested that symbol of eternity—a snake holding its tail in its mouth.

Lady Churchill was pleased, and decided on it, although her husband warmly protested. The result, according to hearsay, is a beautifully-executed snake coiled round the arm above the wrist.

As a rule a broad gold band covers it, but personal friends have seen it and heard the story of the tattooing.—New York Times.

FOSTER MADE LEADER IN THE HOUSE

Canadian Exports To the U S Shown An Immense Increase—British Colum Cedar Dutiable—All Ready For the Session—General Ottawa News.

Ottawa, April 16.—Ottawa people, who are accustomed to bright sunny weather at Eastertide, have been greatly disappointed. Shortly before church time on Sunday rain commenced to fall, and it has descended almost continuously for over 30 hours. The Ottawa and Rideau Rivers are rising rapidly, and by the end of the week the ice will probably be all out of the Ottawa. With one day's rain last week and this week's instalment the streets of the city are practically free of snow and ice. Here and there in a shady corner a little can be seen, but it is evident that the Capital has seen the last of winter and is now in for a season of mud.

Preparations for the session are in a forward state. The Speech from the Throne has been drafted and will be submitted for His Excellency's approval tomorrow. It is arranged that Mr. Arsenault, the new senator from Prince Edward Island, will move the address in the Upper House, but nothing is definitely settled yet regarding the mover and seconder in the Commons, as this is contingent upon the bye-elections on Wednesday. If Sir Mackenzie gets those two Easter eggs from Antigonish and Vercheres then Chisholm and Bisaillon will be called upon to perform the duty.

It is settled that Hon. George E. Foster will be the leader of the ministerial force in the Commons.

The Newfoundland delegates did not conclude their business here Monday, and another session of conference is to be held Tuesday. The visitors are exceedingly anxious to have something tangible to lay before the Newfoundland House of Assembly on April 25, and rather than cut the present deliberations short, without a final conclusion being reached, they have decided to prolong their stay. If this week's steamer to St. John's will not wait for them the Government steamer Newfield will be placed at their disposal

A new departure is to be made this year in the matter of the state dinner. Hitherto it has been held on the night of the opening day. This session it is to be held on the evening preceding opening day—that is Wednesday evening. It is difficult to learn why the change has been made. One gentleman who was appealed to hazarded the opinion that it was to emphasize the formality of the occasion, and to show to members of Parliament who might expect an invitation for Thursday that there was no discrimination.

A striking instance of the progress of Indian civilization is afforded by the action of the coroner's jury which sat at the inquest into the murder of the young fellow Skynner, agent's clerk at the Blackfoot reserve, and subsequent killing of the Indian murderer by a mounted policeman when he tried to escape. Three Indian chiefs were on the jury and, yet despite this fact, they coincided in the verdict of acquittal of the mounted policeman who killed the murderer.

The announcement made by your correspondent the other day respecting the early opening of the new Canadian canal at Sault Ste. Marie has, according to advices at the Department here, led vessel-owners to begin to figure on the possibility of securing a few inches of extra draught by using the Canadian canal during the coming season when bound down from Lake Superior. American vesselmen are counting upon a fully 17 feet channel in the Canadian canal, while the present American canal and lock will not permit of more than from 14 to 15 feet, the outside figure being an extreme limit under the most favorable conditions of the water. General Poe, engineer in charge of the American canal, does not expect to be able to pass more than a few vessels through the new American lock this season. Practically, therefore, the new American lock will not be fully opened until next spring.

Kindred to this question of loading of vessels for downward trips is the question of navigation at several points in St. Mary's River. It is in contemplation by the American authorities to dredge the river eventually to 20 feet. At present there is no definite information as to whether certain places known to be shallow will permit of even a few inches more draught than was then allowed in the Michigan Canal last season. One or two trial trips will, of course, settle the question. If once a vessel bound down passes through the Canadian canal this season, with several inches more draught than is possible in the American canal, it is obvious that this new Canadian waterway will receive a large share of the traffic between Lakes Superior and Huron during the coming season.

Further evidence of the deep sympathy felt by the Queen for the widow of the late Premier, Sir John Thompson, has just been received. Her Majesty has personally written a beautifully worded letter to Lady Thompson, and forwarded at the same time photographs of the apartment at Windsor Castle in which Sir John received his last earthly honor at the hand of his sovereign, as well as one of the rooms in which the great Canadian statesman was stricken down. It is needless to say that Lady Thompson highly appreciates the latest act of sympathy from Her Majesty.

According to a return prepared by Consul-General Riley, the declared exports from Canada to the United States for the quarter ending Dec. 31 show the substantial increase of $428,299. The total exports for the whole province were $4,373,453, as against $3,945,053. During the period named there was exported from Toronto $743,109, as against $439,541. Amherstburg, Belleville, Brockville, Chatham, Clifton, Collingwood, Fort Erie, Goderich, Hamilton, Kingston, London, Morrisburg, Orillia, Port Rowan, Stratford and Windsor show increases, while the decreases were from Guelph, Ottawa, Palmerston, Port Hope, Sarnia, Port Stanley, St. Thomas, Prescott, Sault Ste. Marie and Wallaceburg. The city of Ottawa shows a decrease of nearly $200,000, chiefly in lumber.

The Government has been investigating the imposition by the Treasury Department at Washington of a duty upon British Columbia cedar shipped to the United States. Under the present United States tariff lumber for house building etc., now enters that country free, and mill owners at British Columbia claim that, owing to its cheapness and abundance, cedar should be shipped as lumber in the same way, and not classed as it is at present with hard woods "for cabinet work" and, therefore, dutiable. The Board of Appraisers at Washington has decided, however, that British Columbia cedar in any shape must pay duty. It is likely that the mill-owners will appeal the decision of the appraisers to a higher court.

Two Liberal-Conservative Associations were organized in this city to-night. The old body elected the following officers: Hon. president, Sir Mackenzie Bowell; president, Charles Magee; vice-president, P. Baskerville; treasurer, H. C. Monk; secretary, R. V. Sinclair. Sir James Grant, M.P., and other prominent gentlemen delivered addresses.

The body formed in December, principally by friends of Mr. Taylor McVeity, elected the following officers: President, T. W. Currier; vice-president, ex-Mayor Erratt; treasurer, A. H. Matthewman; secretary, F. W. Bindin. Taylor McVeity was formally adopted as one of the Liberal-Conservative candidates for Ottawa at the coming election.

An official order has been issued that ladies are not to wear court trains at the drawing room next Saturday, but that court veils and feathers are suitable for the occasion, though not obligatory.

Ottawa storekeepers are protesting against the order recently issued by the Board of Works that they should take down their signs.

Lieut.-Governor Schultz is still in the city. An evening paper credits him with being desirous of securing a second term, and says he will lay the matter before the Government prior to his going back to Winnipeg.

The Departmental buildings were closed to-day, this being a holiday.

Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Laurier arrived here to-night.

Mr. G. H. Macdonell, M.P., and Mrs. Macdonell have arrived for the session.

According to advices received at the Department of the Interior excellent work is being done in the Old Country by the two immigration agents of the departement, Mr. E. J. Wood having been engaged all winter lecturing in England and Mr. George Leary, formerly of Winnipeg, in Ireland.

THE SAN FRANCISCO MURDER.

Two Other Crimes Laid at Durant's Door.

San Francisco, April 16.—Search is now being made for the body of Mrs. Forsythe, wife of a pressman with the Schmidt Label Company, on the supposition that she was murdered by the same hand that slew the two girls found in the church yesterday. The principal reason for this theory is that she was a member of Emanuel Church, and frequently attended there.

She was known to have been in the company of a man, who attended the church with her, and it was at first thought she had eloped. It is now thought that Durant was the man, and that he killed her also.

There are reasons for thinking that Durant also murdered Eugene Ware, a young drug clerk who was murdered a few months ago. Ware and Durant were close acquaintances, and Durant frequently visited him at the pharmacy. He was seen with Ware on the night of the murder. As a motive, it is said that Durant was jealous of Ware on account of his attentions to a girl. Ware was stabbed 18 times with a double-edged dirk. The only person who was allowed to see Durant this morning was his father who remained in the cell with him for nearly an hour.

After the departure of the father Detective Edward Gibson had a long talk with the prisoner, but the interview did not result in adding anything to the information now in the possession of the authorities. An examination of the clothing of Miss Lamont gave unmistakeable evidence that a struggle had preceded the commission of the murder, though no wound was found upon the body, death having been caused by strangulation. The police claim to have conclusive evidence that outrage preceded the murder. The police are fully satisfied that the evidence now in hand fixes the responsibility of the crimes upon Durant. It is said at police headquarters that it is by no means certain that Durant did not have an accomplice. Detectives have not yet succeeded in securing evidence to substantiate the theory of an accomplice, but they are working upon several clues. The theory seems to be based upon the apparent impossibility of a man of Durant's physique being able to carry Miss Lamont's body up to the belfry. Chief Crowley says that unless it can be shown that Miss Lamont went voluntarily into the belfry the chances are that Durant had an accomplice in the murder. The chief says that there is little if any evidence to show that the body was dragged upstairs. He thinks it must have been carried up, a feat that would have been difficult for Durant to have accomplished. Durant, who is formally charged with the murder of the Williams girl, when seen in his cell, said that he had been advised to make no further public statement until the preliminary examination.

"I am innocent of the death of the girls," he said, "and hope to be able to prove that fact."

Coroner Hawkins will hold an inquest on the body of Minnie Williams. It will be a dual investigation, as the police will put in their evidence in regard to the murder of both girls.

Carried His Victim Two Miles for Help

New Orleans, April 16.—Barrett Wells cut his mistress' (Miss Ella Thompson) throat early this morning. He then carried the woman in his arms to a Canal-street car, two miles distant, to be conveyed to the hospital for surgical treatment. Wells was arrested. The woman's condition is critical.

Open Verdict in the Owen Sound Mystery

Owen Sound, Ont., April 16.—At the adjourned inquest at Shallow Lake re John Flynn's death the verdict was an open one, that Flynn died from exposure caused by wounds not self-caused, but by whom was to the jurors unknown.

A Murderer's Mind a Blank.

Boston, April 16.—Angus Gilbert, who is charged with the murder of 8-year-old Alice Sterling of Dorchester, has confessed that he buried the child's body in the barn cellar, where it was found, but he claims that he did not kill her. Gilbert claims that at the time the murder is supposed to have been committed his mind was a blank, and that he remembers nothing.

FRANK LENZ WAS SHOT.

The Fate of the Missing Bicyclist Now Definitely Known.

London, April 16.—The Daily News correspondent in Armenia says that the American bicyclist, Frank Lenz, who disappeared last summer in the neighborhood of Delibaba, a notoriously lawless district was shot on the road between Dehar and Kourtali.

5000 Small Children Rolled Eggs.

Washington, April 16.—The annual Easter Monday egg-rolling festival attracted about 5000 small children and nearly as many grown persons to the White House grounds to-day.

Common Error In Speech.

The verb to get is one of our most misused words; it means to acquire, win, obtain; and, primarily, it signifies the putting forth of effort to attain something. Consequently it is not only superfluous, but incorrect, to speak of a man as "getting drowned" or "getting sick"; and you may, unfortunately "have a cold," but it is impossible that you "have got a cold." At this moment no exceptions occur to the writer to the rule that got should never be used in connection with have, which alone sufficiently expresses possession. Say "I have the picture"; "The dog has a broken leg." The irregular verbs lay and lie are frequently confounded. Lay is an active or transitive verb, and lie is passive or intransitive. We lay things down, or have laid them down; but we and things lie at rest. You lie down, have lain down, will lie down, or are lying down; she lay down yesterday and is going to lie down this afternoon. A frequent error is to confound the past tenses of these verbs. One should say "Mary laid the book on the table, and lay down herself," but the book lies on the table.—Demorest Magazine.

Divorce in Burmah.

Suppose a Burmese husband and wife quarrel and determine to separate. The wife—who always does all the marketing—goes out and buys two little candles of equal length, which are made especially for this use. She brings them home. She and her husband sit down on the floor and light them simultaneously. One candle stands for him, the other for her. The one whose candle burns out first rises and goes out of the house forever, with nothing but what he or she may have on. The one whose candle has survived the longest, even by a second, takes everything. So the divorce and the division of the property—if you can call that a division—are settled.

The Empress of Japan.

The Empress of Japan is said to enjoy the largest washing of any royal or plebian personage in the round world. She is a very petite and winsome little lady. It does not take much to cover her, to be sure, but a Japanese Queen must change that covering many, many times a day, and her raiment must be of delicate, cobwebby, lacey silk, satin, crape or crepe de chine. Even if she never wears the same article twice she has it cleaned, washed, perfumed and either packed away in her wardrobe, presented to her ladies in waiting or her beloved female retainers. At one time during the last summer season, when her maids were busy putting away summer robes and bringing to light autumn ones, she had over 2,000 silk kamonas sent to her royal laundry and cleaning department of the imperial household. This, they say, was a very small amount indeed for the royal washerwomen.

Her funny little stockings, with arrangements like gloves' fingers for each toe, numbered many, many thousands and had to be attended to as carefully and thoroughly as though she had only one pair and never knew where the next one would come from. She dons European costume, to be sure, almost all of the time, and always at state festivals, and this fact, together with the necessary Japanese custom of donning a robe for every day in the year adds to her weekly laundry list.—Tokyo Letter.

Villages Besieged by Wolves.

A number of villages in the Mzensk district of the Government of Orel have for several weeks past been practically deprived of intercommunication by a kind of wolf siege. These ravenous nests, which are more than ordinarily numerous and pedatory this season, at first confined themselves to nocturnal raids upon horses, cattle, sheep and pigs; but since a better watch has been kept the daring animals have taken to narrying the peasants and besieging the villages during the day, as well as under cover of the night. Several children have been carried off or devoured on the spot, in stray places. The district authorities offer a reward of three roubles for every wolf's head brought in, but this incentive has so far proved of little avail, owing to the scarcity of arms among the people, and to the astute wariness of the wolves themselves. A few companies of troops are now being formed into battue parties in order the more effectually to rid the neighborhood of this harrassing wolf-plague.

A LONG AND USEFUL LIFE

Rev Dr and Mrs Gardiner will Soon Celebrate Their Birthdays.

Our friend, Rev. Dr. Gardiner, who ate his Easter eggs sixty-eight years since, on board of the ship Sir Watkin, in mid-ocean, and began his career as typographer more than sixty years ago, is about to pass another mile-post in his eventful life. On the 19th of April he and Mrs. Gardiner expect to celebrate jointly, their birthday. Their united age would give to each a moiety of 70 years; but the actual division involves a disparity of a septenary added to his moiety. Within the year now ending the Doctor has passed the jubilee of his ordination and his first marriage. He has exercised his ministry in association with all the Canadian Methodist Bishops, in each of which he found the truest of friends and the purest of christian ministers.

We glean from fugitive papers, not a diary, that he taught a school in Sidney for one year—in this his successes was very marked. There are persons yet living in the city and surroundings—one of them his senior—who had placed themselves under his tuition. No school laws, or school system existed at that time. Patronage and payment depended upon the popularity of the pedagogue. A year of experiments, in great variety ensuing, contributed to prepare the late teacher to become a preacher of the Word, and later, a wise dispenser of the sacraments and ordinances in the church of God. A vacancy occurring in the Hallowell Circuit, which then embraced the whole county, the P. E. and the Bishop sent J. Gardiner to fill it. His itinerancy beginning in Prince Edward was fruitful, abounding and abiding. In Brockville his labors were successful and invigorating. Two violent attacks, one of mumps in January, and inflammation of the lungs in August, led his friends and physicians in each case to regard his life as very precarious. Of his recovery he has written, "The Lord raised me up, and I resumed my place and work with increasing success." The second attack was just before the conference of that year. Again we quote, "God blessed my work and abundantly blessed me in my work. In these deep, distresses, separated from all my relatives; ample opportunity was given to me for testing my faith, my principles and my creed, and also my experience. It gave satisfaction and a renewed sense of spiritual life, to find the Holy Spirit's presence and witness perpetuated, assuring me that all the Comforter does for the true believer, guiding into all truth, necessary to salvation, tends to purify the heart. I leaned upon my faith; I rested in my faith; I rejoiced in my faith—my heart's faith in God."

The Conference, fully aware of his state and regarding recovery uncertain assigned a nominal charge, Nepeau and Hull, doubting if he would ever fill it. Again the doctor has written—"God wondrously raised me up, and the appointment proved one of the most fruitful of my itinerancy." In a few weeks this ardent soldier of the Cross is exploring this new and difficult field.

A few months brought encouragements, after surmounting many great difficulties, sinners were converted, a church of about sixty in number organized; a people prepared of the Lord were ready to arise, and build.

A comfortable church edifice, a united and devout society, and a congregation active in all church effort, are happily associated with their pastor, called the Bytown Circuit, before the end of his probation. Farther detail is not the object of this reference to personal worth, lingering in our midst.

In the 7th year of his ministry J. Gardiner was appointed a Presiding Elder, an office which he filled at different dates for eighteen years. His administration was not challenged in all these years. He took an active part in the erection, founding and opening of Albert College, being pastor in Belleville, and P. E. of the district at the time. He was treasurer of the Missionary Society, and it's secretary for several years.

The onerous duties of Secretary of the Annual and General Conferences, were performed by him at different times.

The Book Room and Printing Establishment of his branch of Methodism, was one of the most uncertain, in its earlier years. To this management he was elected in 1862; but declined. Again in 1870, when the situation was not improved, except in the law of the department; he was chosen by the General Conference, Book Agent and Editor. The wisdom of this appointment was apparent all through the quadrennium. The financial results were the best in the history of the institution.

The General Conference of 1874, arranged for a missionary secretary, with a view to extend into the "regions beyond." With great unanimity, the retiring editor was elected. In this case the Legislation was in advance of the people, and many of the preachers. The incumbent magnified his office by exploring Manitoba and making provisional arrangements to found the church in that new province, in 1875. He travelled through all the charges of Ontario in the interests of the Missionary Society. Although not satisfied with the results, he had good evidence that his work was not in vain. Dr. Gardiner was truly devoted to his own branch of Methodism, always ready as able to defend her rights, but not an obstructionist to sister churches. What he demanded, he cheerfully conceded to others—contented with equal rights. The church he served so well was somewhat lavish in the honors she conferred upon her worthy son. He was one of the Fraternal Delegates to the Methodist Episcopal church in 1860, also in 1865: sent in the same character to the first General Conference of the Methodist Church of Canada; a member of the First Ecumenical Methodist Conference, and on the business committee, in preparation and finishing in London. Active and judicious in helping to make the arrangements, and consummate Methodist Union, his wisdom aided in rendering it so acceptable to all concerned. The general Conference sent the late Dr. Williams and Dr. Gardiner the delegation to the late Centennial Conference in Baltimore in 1884. The Methodist church elected the veteran pioneer preacher and officer, whose work diversified, we have but imperfectly sketched in this paper, to General Conference in 1886, and on several of the committees of the connection. The retiring soldier, wearing his well-earned laurels, in a green old age, merits the love of his numerous friends, at the coming birthday.

A Sunday School Treat

The children of Bethel Hall Sunday School were treated to a nice supper last evening after which lantern views, illustrating the Life of Christ were shown them by Mr. Slomans, and explained by Mr. Telfer, and at the close each scholar was given a pretty colored Farlatan Bag filled with good things to take home with them. It was a pleasant and profitable evening, and the superintendent and teachers felt well repaid by the happy faces of the children who behaved splendidly.

Nervous People

And those who are all tired out and have that tired feeling or sick headache can be relieved of all these symptoms by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives nerve, mental and bodily strength and thoroughly purifies the blood. It creates a good appetite, cures indigestion, heartburn and dyspepsia.

RESPONSIBILITY OF TEACHERS

Interesting Judgment on a Fathers Claim.

EDITOR OF THE ONTARIO.

SIR.—Below is a decision, as reported in the Montreal Witness, that should commend itself to our school trustees and teachers. As my own children have been sufferers from the same cause in our Central School it may do good to insert it in your valuable paper.

PARENT.

(From the Witness.)

Judge Jette rendered judgment this morning, in the case of Ed. H. Peterkin vs. the School Trustees of St. Henri. This was an action to recover $100 damages on account of the serious illness of plaintiff's son, alleged to have been caused by his exposure in a draught, the teacher having opened a window upon him. In rendering judgment, the Court held the School Board was responsible for the acts of its teacher. The learned judge did not want to give a lesson to the teacher, although she well deserved one. The trust placed in teachers' hands was a most sacred one, and parents had a right to rely on the good sense of teachers for the physical as well as the mental care of their children.

Parents had nothing more precious than their children. In the present instance, the conduct of the teacher could not be excused. She exposed the child to a difference of temperature of twenty-seven degrees, and whatever might be the difference of opinion of expert witnesses, it was evident that exposure to a draught was conducive to pneumonia or kindred diseases. The proof in the present instance showed that the child was seriously ill and no other cause could be attributed for his illness but the exposure to which he was subjected. When the boy asked the teacher, a first time, to close the window she refused. His second demand to change his place, when he was shivering, was met by a similar refusal, and finally he asked to go home and was again refused. This was most cruel treatment. The teacher had had time to reflect and her act did not certainly indicate very tender sentiments. The teacher must be held responsible for the boy's illness, and her employers, the school trustees, must in their turn be held responsible for the act of their servant. The Court further held that plaintiff's demand of a hundred dollars was not excessive and consequently judgment was rendered in his favor for that amount.

NOT SUICIDE

An old man Attempted to Drown Himself but the Water was too Cold

It was reported in the city to-day that Mr. Samuel Clapp, an old man who lives near Corbyville had committed suicide by jumping into the river Moira. He lives with his daughter near the river bank and of late has become demented. His daughter saw him going into the river and at once gave an alarm. Nothing could be seen of the old man and search parties were at once started. School children went along the river bank, but nothing could be seen of the old man. About an hour after the alarm was given he emerged from a clump of bushes where he had been hiding and told the people the water was too cold, and he did not like to drown in such cold water. The old man will likely be confined in an asylum.

THEY COULDN'T STAY AWAY.

Two Former Inmates of the Farm in Police Court This Morning.

Nellie Redy, a street walker, in company with a well known character, Lizzie Simpson, were in the police court this morning looking for law. The girl Redy laid a complaint against a domestic named Young employed in one of the hotels. It appears that Miss Redy and Miss Simpson were promenading the streets the other day when they allege Miss Young called them some vile names. Both the girls Redy and Simpson swore that Maud Young called them certain names and Maud and her sister swore that it was false. The evidence was balanced and the Magistrate had to dismiss the case. Some time ago Lizzie Simpson and the girl Redy were gathered in as inmates of the Farm and given a suspended sentence and ordered to leave the city. They still remain however and the climate seems to agree with them.

A SILVER WEDDING

Mr and Mrs Murdoff's Friends Celebrate the 25th Anniversary of their Union

A very happy company met at the beautiful home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Murdoff, Sidney, on Thursday evening the 11th inst. the occasion being the 25th anniversary of their marriage. A more enjoyable time could hardly be spent. All present numbering about fifty, between the age of 4 and 85 years were perfectly at home. The supper, the music, and the congratulatory speeches by Messrs. Demil and Halley, Alderman Hart, Lawyer, O'Flynn and Rev. Jas. Faull were of the best order and were much enjoyed. According to custom the hosts were made the recepient of a number of beautiful presents in silver.

Mrs. Murdoff during the first part of the evening wore the same silk dress in which she was married a quarter of a century ago which looked none the worse for its many years service, and the slight difference noticable in the style was simply that they put in the skirt 25 years ago what they put in the sleeves now—what is more than is needed for comfort or utility. Mr. Murdoff had on the same suit of broadcloth in which he stood a proud young man on his wedding day, which looked as if it just came from the tailor shop instead of the bureau drawer.

Before midnight the familiar hymn "God be with you till we meet again" was sung and prayer offered by the minister when the company went in different directions to their homes leaving behind them many good wishes for Mr. and Mrs. Murdoff's future health and happiness.

West Belleville Sugar Social

The sugar social held in West Belleville Methodist church last night was well attended and a very pleasant time was spent by all those present. In addition to being supplied with all the sugar they could eat they were treated to a program of instrumental music, songs and recitations. The first number was an instrumental duet by Miss Cobb and L. Thompson entitled "Qui Vivi" which received loud applause. Miss Bowers gave a recitation "Learning to Skate." Mr. Reddick sang "The Red Scarf" very acceptably. A piano solo by Miss Dafoe entitled "Jesus Lover of My Soul" with variations was very good and received well merited applause. The last number on the program was a recitation "The Irish Philosopher" by Mr. Turkington which produced great merriment and applause.

The Forester's Ball

Court Quintie, A. O. F. held their sixth annual assembly in the Oddfellow's Hall last evening. The interior was very prettily decorated with flags, bunting, etc. There were about eighty couples present who danced to the sweet strains of Chalaupka's orchestra until the gray light of morning appeared. Mr. Jas. Gerow was master of ceremonies and the managing committee were composed of V. Wensley, W. Crysler, R. Harris, J. Neate, and W. Bensley. The floor managers were D. Andrews, W. Creeper and H. Smith. Mr. G. Dulmadge acted as chairman and H. Hampton, sec-treas.

Three things are much in demand at this season. First—paint to make floors and woodwork look like new, and brushes to apply the paint; second—garden seeds to supply the inner man and beautify the home: third—cleansing and disinfecting material to overcome the ill effects of unsanitary condition. All these can be procured from L. W. Yeomans & Co.

A lady purchased a basket of eggs on the market here Saturday, and among the hen fruit was a peculiar find. On of the eggs was written, 'Wife wanted; address—C.n-s.con: Photo of young man on the other side." On turning the egg over a pencil sketch of a decent looking young man was found. The lady who purchased the eggs is married and has no daughters, consequently the advertisement is thrown away.

Those who miss the production of Romeo and Juliet at the Queens Opera House to-night will miss a rare treat. This dramatization of Shakespeare's most sublime love tragedy requires most strong acting and this company is one of the most capable on the road.

A petition was sent from Kingston to the Department of Marine and Fisheries, asking that the close season for bass end June 15 instead of July 1, as at present. Answer was received that no change would be made this year. There is no reason in the world why the bass season should be so late. All the fish have spawned by June 15 or before that and the only chance the fly fisher has, is cut off by this absurd regulation.—Cornwall Freeholder.

Would Have Died

If Paine's Celery Compound Had Not Come to Her Aid.

NERVOUSNESS, SLEEPLESSNESS, HEARTBURN AND GENERAL WEAKNESS.

These Distressing Troubles are Banished.

Another Strong Proof of the Curing Virtues of the World's Best Medicine.

The whole wide world is challenged to show a medicine that is doing the same good to suffering humanity, as Paine's Celery compound works from day to day.

The great disease curing medicine is a blessing to the men women and children of Canada, and its value can never be fully estimated. It is always a rescuer and saver of life, even in times of extreme peril and danger. When people are deceived by worthless advertised medicines, when doctors fail to relieve and cure, and when the sick one is given up as incurable then it is that Paine's Celery Compound overcomes disease and death, and fully restores the sufferer to health.

The case of Mrs. S. J. McKinlay, of Chelmsford, Ont., furnishes a strong and mighty proof of all that is claimed for Paines' Celery Compound. It is a warning to every sick man and woman, of the danger of experimenting with medicines that have no curative virtues or powers. When health is sought after Paine's Celery Compound should be used, and nothing else.

Mrs. McKinlay writes as follows:—

"I wish you to let the world know what Paine's Celery Compound has done for me. I was afflicted with nervousness, sleeplessness, heartburn and general weakness for five years, and during that time I was doctored and spent a great deal of money without any good results. A friend advised me to use your co pound, and I am happy to say it has n pletely cured me. I now eat well, com well, and I am as strong as ever sleep I am sure I would have died before. Paine's Celery Compound c , had not aid. I wish every woman me to my your wonderful medicine. o know about its praises all the days I will sound of my life."

HACKMEN IN COURT

Another Charge of Soliciting Passengers at the G T R Depot

John Russell, a hack driver for John Lake was up before Magistrate Flint for soliciting passengers at the G.T.R. depot on Sunday evening for the Hotel Quinte. The defence claimed that it was no offence as this bus belonged to the Hotel Quinte, and carried no passengers for any other hotel. Mr. Russell was acting as porter in the absence of the regular hotel porter, and in this way the defence claim he had a right to call out the name of his bus. The magistrate will look into the matter and give judgment on Friday morning.

THE STEAMER HERO.

Will be on the old Route on Saturday Next —She Has Been Thoroughly Overhauled.

The steamer Hero will start on her first trip here Saturday. This popular pleasure boat has been thoroughly renovated throughout and painted and looks as trim and neat as an Easter bonnet. Capt. Bloomfield who is very popular with the travelling public will be in command this year. The same crew will also be re-engaged. This steamer besides being the fastest on the bay is lighted throughout by electricity and is supplied with a magnificent search-light which delighted excursionists last year. We predict for her a very successful season.

NEWCOMBS MILLS SCORCHED

A Grist-mill, Store Post Office and Dwellings Consumed

BRIGHTON, Apl. 16.—(Special.) Newcombs Mills, a village about nine miles north of Brighton, was visited by a disastrous fire between 12 and 1 o'clock this morning. A large frame grist mill owned by L. W. R. Terry and in which the fire originated was entirely consumed, as was also A. T. Dorland's general store, dwelling and post office. There was nothing saved from these buildings. Thomas Montgomery's dwelling was also consumed but contents saved. These properties were insured, but to what extent, or in what companies, is not known here.

HARBOR LIGHTS

The Str. Merritt was offered for sale at the Hotel Quinte on Saturday. The reserve bid of $3000 was not reached and Dr. Chamberlain and the other stock holders will remain in possession.

The northwest wind that blew over the lake and river last night had the effect of completely clearing the harbor of ice. The steamer Pierrepont made her first trip this season to Cape Vincent this morning, and will henceforth run regularly every day. The ice at the foot of Wolfe Island remains firm yet, and it will be some days before it breaks up.—News.

Naturally fair complexions would be the rule rather than the exception as unfortunately it is at present, if the ladies would wholly abandon cosmetics, and more generally keep the blood pure and vigorous by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only reliable blood-purifier.

As baldness makes one look prematurely old, so a full head of hair gives to mature life the appearance of youth. To secure this and prevent the former, Ayers's Hair Vigor is confidently recommended. Both ladies and gentlemen perfer it to any other dressing.

Goldsmith supplied the British Columbia salmon for the Mackenzie Bowell banquet, since then the demand has been great. Try it.

Are you all tired out, do you have that tired feeling or sick headache? You can be relieved of all these by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Much of life's misery is due to indigestion; for who can be happy with a pain in his stomach? As a corrective and strengthener of the ailementary organs, Ayer's Pills are invaluable, their use being attended always with marked benefit.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of t b y to which it is applied.

For first class book-binding go to H. Tammadge, opposite the city hall.

If you once try Carter's Little Liver Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable, small and easy to take. Don't forget this.

THIS IS HALDIMAND'S DAY

McCarthy and Sifton's Last Meeting Yesterday.

ESTIMATES FROM BOTH SIDES

Montague's Friends Figure the Doctor a Winner by About 200; McCarthy's Forecast Is About 80 for Jeffrey—Boodle Reported to Be Plentiful.

Cayuga, Ont., April 16.—The last gun of the McCarthyite campaign in Haldimand, which has for the last two weeks been the political centre of attraction, was fired to-night, when D'Alton McCarthy and Hon. Clifford Sifton addressed a well-attended and enthusiastic meeting. There were enough of Dr. Montague's friends present to raise a hearty cheer in opposition to the demonstrations which greeted the appearance of the speakers. The speakers confined themselves to the discussion of the Manitoba school question, and they took the ground that the Government, in making the Remedial Order on Manitoba exercised a discretionary power for which it must be held politically accountable.

Mr. Sifton declared, amid loud applause, that Manitoba would not obey the order, which, he maintained, required the restoration of a system of schools that is a disgrace to civilization.

Both parties profess to be confident of victory. Dr. Montague's friends estimate their majority at almost 200, while Mr. Jeffrey McCarthy, without giving actual figures, believes that the majority will be on his side.

D'Alton McCarthy shares the optimism of his namesake.

The charge is made by the McCarthyites that money is being freely used by their opponents in the constituency. The Government party will receive the returns at Hagersville and the McCarthyites at Caledonia.

The Figures From Both Sides

A Hagersville special to The News says: The returns roughly figured up show a safe majority for Dr. Montague under any circumstances.

A Montague Estimate.

	Majorities. Montague.	McCarthy.

North Cayuga	—	25
Walpole	80	—
Oneida	75	—
Seneca	—	20
Total	335	45

A McCarthy Estimate.

On the other hand, the McCarthyites take a far different view of it. Here are their figures in the rough:

	Majorities. Montague.	McCarthy.
Caledonia	55	—
Cayuga	18	—
Hagersville	35	—

A FINE LEGAL POINT.

Can a Man Under Sentence of Death Dispose of His Personal Effects?

Toronto, April 17.—John A. Hendershott, under sentence of death at St. Thomas for the murder of his nephew, mortgaged his property for $2500 to pay the expenses of his defence. There are a number of tradesmen in St. Thomas who have claims against Hendershott, and it is alleged that he has engaged a solicitor to raise money by a chattel mortgage on his personal effects with a view to discharging these. It is contended by the majority of the legal fraternity that when he was sentenced to death, he was, to all intent, dead to the world, therefore could not execute a document of any kind. This is a fine legal point, and has not a precedent in Canadian jurisprudence.

Both prisoners are gradually wasting away, and it is plainly evident that the mental strain under which they are laboring is telling greatly upon them. Particularly is this the case with Hendershott, who appears to be 20 years older than he was when arrested some four months ago.

KILLED IN A NOVA SCOTIA MINE

Of Forty Men in the Pit at the Time of the Explosion Two Were Killed.

Sydney, N.S., April 17.—An explosion of gas occurred at Dominion No. 1 Colliery of Dominion Coal Company to-day. About 40 men were in the pit at time of explosion, all but two of these being rescued alive. The dead bodies of Daniel Hardy and Alexander McKinnon, the two missing men, were later discovered and brought to the surface.

Drowned at Vancouver.

Vancouver, B.C., April 17.—News has just been received here of the drowning of S. L. Perkins on Saturday last in Naval Channel. He was an Englishman and resided at Saturna Island for three years.

The Block Collapsed—Two Killed.

Gloversville, N.Y., April 16.—The new Tietz block in South Main-street collapsed this afternoon, damaging adjoining buildings. Four workmen were buried in the ruins, two of whom, Abram Veeder, aged 53, and his brother Washington, aged 45, painters, were crushed to death.

Instant Death in a Sawmill.

Enterprise, Ont., April 16.—In Lockwood's sawmill Hector Wagar was almost instantly killed. A board, which came in contact with a circular saw, was thrown with terrible force, striking him on the neck.

A Northumberland Village Wiped Out.

Brighton, Ont., April 16.—Newcomb's Mills, a village about nine miles north of Brighton, was visited by a disastrous fire yesterday morning. A large frame grist mill, owned by L. W. R. Terry, and in which the fire originated, was entirely consumed, as was also A. T. Dorland's general store, dwelling and postoffice. There was nothing saved from these buildings. Thomas Montgomery's dwelling was also consumed, but the contents were saved. These properties were partially insured.

Blaze at Caledon East.

Mono Road, Ont., April 16.—A two-story brick store at Caledon East, owned and occupied by Bradley & Clark, also a large warehouse occupied by this firm and owned by Dr. Allison, were totally destroyed by fire. Cause unknown.

Brakeman Killed in a Coal Train Wreck.

Scranton, Pa., April 16.—An Ontario and Western coal train was thrown from the track at Germyn by the tracks being undermined by a flood. A large number of cars were wrecked. Brakesman Farrell of Carbondale was killed.

BEATING THE GRAND TRUNK.

Railway Conductors on Trial in Montreal for Fraud

Montreal, April 17.—The trial of the Grand Trunk conductors—Defries, Tamblyn and Mulligan—charged with conspiracy to defraud the railway company, was continued in the Criminal Court this morning. John D. Fraser, clerk, Toronto, stated that he had been employed by the General Inspector of the Grand Trunk to investigate this matter. He left Toronto on Aug. 7 last, arriving in Montreal, where he put up at the Balmoral Hotel. Returning to Toronto he purchased his ticket at the counter of the Queen's Hotel. It was not a regular G.T.R. ticket, but simply a white card. This he handed to the conductor, Mulligan, on board the train. He was asked if "Fred" had given that to him. He replied "Yes." Mulligan had then marked the figures 191-1 on the white piece of cardboard, and put it in his (Fraser's) hat band. Mulligan had then taken another ticket from his pocket and given it to him, remarking that it would take him through. At Kingston Fraser said that he had gone to Mulligan and asked for another ticket, as he had lost the one out of his hat. Mulligan had given him another ticket, marking "220" upon it.

Mulligan had told him that Tamblyn would take the train from Kingston to Toronto. When Tamblyn came through accordingly Fraser presented the card bearing number "220," which was punched and handed back. Witness had bought the ticket in Montreal from William Lewis, a porter at the Queen's. Lewis had arranged with Fred Pominville, a porter at the Balmoral, all details. The two had instructed him how to sit in the car, and where. He came to Montreal on Aug. 10, and got another ticket for Toronto from Mulligan on board the train. He offered $5 for the ticket, saying it was all he had. Mulligan said that was bad, and gave him back $2.50. In cross-examination witness stated that he had "done up" the town with the two Balmoral porters at the Grand Trunk's expense.

TROUBLED CUBA.

It Is Costly and Deadly Work Crushing Out Revolutions.

New York, April 17.—A despatch from Key West says: It is reported from Havana that Gen. Maximo Gomez landed with a small party in Puerto del Nip last Thursday and is now in the interior with Maceo.

Maceo's party has had no rest since landing, but has had constant battles with the Spanish troops. On the day Gen. Flor Crombet was killed at Palmarito, the party was surrounded and had been for days without food. It had to break through the Spanish lines before it could get away. It was while doing this that Crombet was killed.

The Havana hospitals are overflowing with wounded men brought from the interior. They came from the interior last week at the rate of 25 a day. The dead are buried at night to avoid comment. There are about 500 men now in the hospitals, 75 per cent. of whom will die.

Madrid, April 16.—Gen Martinez Campos has cabled the War Office the announcement of his arrival in Cuba and expression of his hope, based on the information of the situation obtainable, to suppress the insurrection promptly and easily.

SWISS RELIEF METHODS

A Successful Plan for Feeding and Clothing Poor Children

Washington, April 17.—A report has been received at the Department of State from Consul Eugene Germain, stationed at Zurich, Switzerland, showing the novel plan by which food and clothing are furnished to poor children in that country. Public soup houses are established, at which workingmen, as well as poor travelers, can obtain food nearly at cost. The price for a portion of soup, enough to feed two persons, is fixed at two cents, and a special rate of one and a quarter cents is made for scholars. Those children who are too poor to buy inform the teacher privately, and to "him alone between four eyes," say whether they wish to pay or take the portion gratuitously, and when the children sit down to eat no one knows who is "eating alms soup."

In 1893-94 some 13,195 children were supplied with food and clothing in this way, the total cost of the supplies being about $14,000. No evil consequences have been heard of, but many good results have been reported.

Is Nicaragua's Answer Satisfactory?

London, April 17.—The Globe asserts that Great Britain will refuse to receive the answer of the Nicaraguan Government to the British ultimatum and will take immediate steps to enforce her demands.

It is ascertained that The Globe's statement emanates from the Exchange Telegraph Company. Inquiry at the Foreign Office this afternoon resulted in a refusal of the official to divulge the purport of the official communication with Nicaragua, or to furnish any information whatever concerning the matter in the absence of Lord Kimberley and Under Foreign Secretary Sir Edward Grey, both of whom are in the country.

Saturn's Countless Satellites.

London, April 17.—The Standard devotes an editorial article to the discovery made by Prof. Keeler of the Alleghany Observatory of the nature of the rings of Saturn. The article declares that the theory of Prof. Keeler, that the rings are formed by countless satellites revolving about the planet at different rates of speed, is merely confirmatory of the idea laid down 20 years ago by Prof. Trouvelot of Harvard. Any way, The Standard says, astronomical students are anxiously awaiting a fuller account of this, the latest of American researches.

Forsythe Thinks His Wife Drowned

San Francisco, April 16.—George W. Forsyth, husband of Mrs. Ella Forsyth, the missing woman whom Durant is suspected of making away with, positively denies that she ever visited Emanuel Church, or knew anybody connected with it. He believes she was drowned in San Francisco Bay.

Held Up in His House for $15.

Windsor, April 17.—A murderous attack was committed on a West Sandwich farmer named Tuite last night. At a late hour Tuite was summoned, to his door and confronted by two masked men. One of them reached forward with a long bladed knife and slashed at his neck. The weapon made an ugly wound. As the farmer was unarmed his house was ransacked, $15 being secured.

Wurtemberg's Heir-Apparent Injured

Stuttgart, April 17.—Duke Albert, heir-apparent to the Duchy of Wurtemberg, was seriously injured to-day by being thrown from his horse. He fell head foremost and is suffering from concussion of the brain.

Martin Not Going to Haldimand.

Ottawa, April 13.—Mr. Joseph Martin, M.P., Winnipeg, who arrived here last night, said that he was not in Haldimand, and does not intend going there. He is here on legal business.

PETROLEUM IN ATHABASCA

An Immense Oil Region in the Northwest.

REPORT OF THE GOVERNMENT TEST

Experimental Shaft Sunk Over a 1000 Feet—Gas Struck and Every Indication of a Rich Flow of Oil—Immense Possibilities.

Ottawa, April 17.—The report of A. W. Fraser of Toronto, the oil expert who was commissioned by the Minister of the Interior to test the petroleum fields of the Athabasca district, was issued to-day. Up to Oct. 24, Mr. Fraser had drilled to a depth of 1011 feet. Ground was broken on Aug. 1, and for the first 230 feet the boring was in grey shale, which caned badly. At 245 feet, after drilling into a hard streak, a flow of gas was met with, so strong that it blew the water in the borehole clear over the top of the derrick. By the continuous use of iron casing this stratum was passed, but at 334 feet gas was struck again.

Of this strike Mr. Fraser says: "The roaring of the gas could be heard half a mile away from the works, and it was considered unsafe to work with the boiler in its former position, so it was removed 55 feet. My foreman, who had seen the big gas well at Kingsville, Ont., assured me that the flow of gas was as strong as in that well. After striking this flow of gas it was impossible to make any progress. We worked for days and could not get to the bottom of the bore-hole. Finally, by adopting the plan of letting the water for drilling down the hole in the sand pump, we managed to get the drilling started again."

From this point the boring was through grey shale, interspread with streaks of hard rock from six inches to two feet thick. At a depth of 600 feet the shale formation was too soft to support the casing, and at 780 feet salt water was struck, as well as another strong flow of gas.

Between the depths of 825 and 900 feet the shale was harder and blue in color, but from that downwards to the present bottom of the well (1011 feet) the shale was soft and dark in color.

Mr. Fraser remarks that oil sands will probably not be met with at a less depth than 1500 feet. He considers the present site of boring the best that could have been selected. Should oil be found in paying quantities it will materially increase the prosperity of the district.

"Already," says Mr. Fraser, "a few have profited by the money spent in prospecting and have earned small sums of money, which have materially helped them in paying for lands."

The total expenditure has been $4203, over $1000 of which was incurred in the purchasing of casing and its transport to Edmonton.

Dr. Dawson, director of geological surveys, advises that the investigation of the petroleum fields of Athabasca and Northern Alberta be continued until the value of these fields shall have been determined. Dr. Dawson concludes: "All indications favor a belief in the existence of a great petroleum-bearing region in the Northwest, and results which would follow directly from the definition of such a region are so important as to warrant any expenditure which may be necessary in that direction.

"It is not probable that petroleum, if found in Northern Alberta or in Athabasca, would seriously compete in the East with the already established petroleum industry of Ontario, but the considerable and yearly increasing demands of British Columbia and North-west Territories would afford a local market which might be large, as if oil could be furnished at a low price it would undoubtedly be employed as a liquid fuel for railways in many parts of the country. The comparative proximity of the Athabasca region to the Pacific further indicates that an enormous foreign demand, co-extensive with the shores of that ocean, might be most profitably supplied from this region. The extent of this market may be in part realized when it is stated that the export of illuminating and paraffine oils from the United States to Japan, China and Hong Kong alone amounted in 1893 to 67,572,136 gallons."

FARR NOT YET CAPTURED.

Winnipeg Catholics and Excommunication—Fatality in a Stonewall Quarry—Anxiety for Caspar Whitney.

Winnipeg, April 16.—Manitoba Catholics are considerably exercised over the rumor that Archbishop Langevin, when he declared the church would not longer recognize as Catholics those who continued to oppose Separate schools, was speaking on the authority of an encyclical from Rome. Archbishop Langevin simply contents himself with the statement that he is clothed with authority, but has not yet satisfied curiosity by producing the encyclical.

Engineer Farr, who tried to burn up his wife and family in order that he might marry a young Winnipeg woman, and who escaped from the police cells, is still at liberty.

By a premature explosion in the Stonewall stone quarry this morning three men, Michael Clift and John and William Gunn, were terribly injured. The Gunns may recover, but Clift cannot survive.

Harper Bros. Company of New York are getting anxious about their correspondent, Caspar W. Whitney, who left to penetrate the Arctic Circle. There is no cause for alarm.

Paymaster Dobson of the Quebec Dragoons was arrested here to-day on the arrival of the east train. He is held awaiting information from the Quebec authorities.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell Its Worth—We Don't Need To.

Mimico, Aug. 20, 1894

Wm. Dean, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

Walter Burgess.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles ! Piles ! Itching Piles.

Symptoms.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelee's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money.'

Germany reports 289 instances of suicide among school children during the last six years.

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal.'

For Over Fifty Years

An Old and Well-tried Remedy.—Mrs. Winslow's Sothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic: and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by Druggists in every part of the World. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

She (bitterly)—Before you married me I was an angel. I'll never be that again I suppose. He (sarcastically)—Well, I live in hopes.

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

The Pekin (China) Gazette, a journal that was 200 years old when the Normans conquered England, has the further distinction of having had 1,600 of its editors beheaded.

Beyond Dispute.

There is no better, safer or more pleasant cough remedy made than Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cures Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles.

After la Grippe obstinate coughs, lung trouble, etc., frequently follow. There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time effectual and pleasant, a Milburns Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry Hypophosphites, which is the largest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. BUYING INDUSTRIES

The advisability of the plan so popular among certain municipalities of buying Industries is open to question. Granted that a single large industry may increase the population by one half or one quarter and what has been gained? Certainly more business will be done, but there will be more people to do it; rents will advance, but only until the demand is supplied, or as is usual, more than supplied by new dwellings and stores; the value of property increases with the increase of population about it, but the taxes have increased also, and in this connection too must be reckoned the price paid for the industry. Another fact to be counted in is that the increase of the dependant and indigent, the immoral and the degraded classes is always greater in proportion than the increase in population.

The only growth that is healthy, and municipalities are not under any other law, is the natural growth. It is not the volume of business that creates prosperity but the volume of it that exceeds what is necessary to liquidate expenses. It is a fact of national economics, not generally enough appreciated, that the national unforced growth and progress of one city, or one town or one class, or one industry is the good of all and also that the unnatural or excrescent growth of one is the bane of all the rest. Like some of the mysteries of life this should be believed when not seen.

IMPURE LITERATURE

In the reference of the Brantford Expositor to the Wilde revelations, quoted in this column yesterday there are some who would fain read out of it a condemnation of free public libraries. Such however is foreign to the spirit and purpose of the quotation. As an escape from the unwholesome literary gases that exude from the foulness which Wilde tipifies, a sort of putrescent literary matter, the waste by-product of the unequalled literary activity of these latter days, our contemporary hopes for a reversion of popular taste to the older poets and authors, to those that have stood long enough to rank as classics The advice is good, and expedient with limitations.

Much of the present day literature will be classic in due time. Some of it takes that rank from its birth, and must it all be put away to grow old before it is fit for use? Because of an offensive by-product must the refined article be cast aside?

But to come again to the relative bearing of the Public Library upon the popular taste in literature. Like most tastes and predelections its foundation is or may be laid in the years of childhood. The boy who reads what we may term the standard works of travel and adventure that are in every Free Library will progress easily to a love for and appreciation of the English classics. But with no Free Library the mass of our youths rely for entertainment on the most easily attainable literature the dime novel and police gazettes, or go without altogether. The natural sequence to a course of dime novel or police gazette culture is pursuit of the immoral, trashy and low in literature.

No one now-a-days questions the right, of the duty of the community to give its people free education, no more should they doubt the community's duty to give them free the best of our literature that they may use and increase the moiety of education and culture given in the public schools. The children of the rich go on to a free university education; the children of the poor are left to starve mentally amidst a literary dearth.

TWO OPERATIONS.

A Case of Kidney Complaint that Would Not Yield to Surgery or Medicine until B. B. B. Was Tried.

Gentlemen,—After having undergone two operations for Kidney Complaint without securing the least relief, and hearing of some remarkable cures made by B. B. B. in our neighborhood, I decided to try it. I was given up by the doctors after the operations failed, and it was providential that I heard of B. B. B. After the use of six bottles I experienced so great relief and so great a change for the better that I felt the good effects would be lasting, as indeed they have been. The seventh bottle perfectly cured me, and I am now stronger and better than I ever was before. People who saw me before I took B. B. B. and who see me now can scarcely believe that I am the same person.

The Elements of Bone, Brain and Muscle, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich every bodily function fags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, or contamination by bile, or other causes, bilious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery.

That scrofulous taint which has been in your blood for years, will be expelled by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier.

RAINY LAKE GOLD.

THE RECENT DISCOVERIES IN NORTH-WESTERN ONTARIO.

The Richest Finds About 20 Miles North of the Minnesota Line—The Country Described—The Inrush of Miners and Prospectors.

The interest that has been awakened by the recent discovery of gold in the Rainy Lake District, so-called, Province of Ontario and the continued inquiries for information, lead me to present the following description in relation to the new fields:

The Rainy Lake District is located just north of the State of Minnesota, the boundary line between the United States and Canada running through the center of Rainy Lake. Gold in paying quantities has been discovered on both sides of the line. There are several paying mines in operation adjoining the Rainy Lake city in American territory, but the richest portions of the field yet discovered is a locality from 15 to 20 miles north from the boundary line, in the Province of Ontario, and lies between Bad Vermillion and Shoal Lakes.

Shoal Lake is a portion of the Seine River, which is a succession of river and lakes, originating near the height of land on the Canadian Pacific about 100 miles west of Port Arthur; the waters of the Seine flowing west and emptying into Rainy Lake.

The present maps of that locality do not show properly the division of the country, which is broken up by a succession of lakes. The country is a beautiful one. In the hilly parts, where the gold fields lie, there is but little soil: the lakes and rivers are set in banks of granite and slate, torn and tumbled by the gigantic storms and eruptions of the Archean age, and although in places a slight deposit of soil covers the underlying rock, the most of the country is bare, broken molten stone, and every step gives evidence of the awful disturbance which occurred thousands of years ago.

The topography of the country is divided into two distinct parts; that along the Rainy River, at the west of the gold fields, a sort of a plain, extending down into Minnesota, and that among the lakes adjacent to the gold fields, an extremely rough, rocky and hummocky section. The highest altitudes, however, do not exceed 200 feet above the water level. Rainy Lake is the receiving basin for a large section of country. The lake is about 50 miles in length and contains somewhere near 250 miles of square surface. The height above the sea of Rainy Lake is estimated at 1,100 feet, and 450 feet above Lake Superior.

The discovery of gold in Rainy Lake and surrounding regions is not a new one, as one might think. It has been spoken of for years, and the Indians often brought nuggets of gold into the trading posts to barter for the necessaries of life. In September, 1893, Thomas Weigand, a Canadian explorer, who listened to the tales of the Indians, started from Port Arthur to look over the Rainy Lake region, with a view of ascertaining the amount of truth there might be in the report that gold was to be found there. At this time work had been done on some mines on the Minnesota side of the lake, and which had already given promise of being the paying vein that it is. Proceeding up the Seine with Alexander Lockhart, a Canadian surveyor, Weigand was driven ashore on Seine Lake. After looking around the woods for a time, Weigand ascended the slope which lies back from the lake, and climbed a tree to gain a vantage point from which to take a look at the country. As he came down, his eye caught a curious gleam of a rock where the glancing blow of an ax had swept away the moss. With thoughts of the tales which brought him there, he dropped on his hands and knees and examined the rock. It was gold; and gold in quantities beyond his wildest dreams. With a little more investigation, which developed three large veins or ledges of gold-bearing quartz, he became satisfied that his search was ended, and returned to Port Arthur to report his discovery.

The lateness of the season prevented anything being done that year, but early the following spring prospectors came pouring into the region. The forest fires that raged last year through Northern Minnesota crossed the line and assisted in clearing away the undergrowth of brush and vegetable deposit, baring the hillsides and assisting to a great degree the work of the prospectors.

In the territory embraced between the lakes mentioned—an irregular neck of land from five to seven miles in width and possibly 15 miles in length—with the exception of the Indians residing in that locality there was scarcely a man to be found a year ago. To-day there are possibly 2,500 men in the district and new arrivals are reaching the new fields daily. Men from all over this country are seeking the new field for opportunities of bettering their fortunes; even far-off Australia having already yielded several contributions to the mining camps.

The developments now made on the different properties consist of the sinking of many shafts, the deepest at present being between 70 and 80 feet; the vein on which they have been sunk holding their richness to the full depth and slightly increasing width as depth is gained; also the building of five stamp mills; three of five-stamp capacity, and two of 10. There are two mills now in operation and the other three will be in operation during the present month. As to the result to be obtained, the workings of the mills in operation are a fair guide, and from the best information obtainable, although the machinery in use is extremely crude and cannot possibly save a high percentage of the gold present in the quartz, the result obtained runs from $17 to $30 per ton for every ton of quartz reduced. Assays made on the quartz taken from veins on different properties and at varying depths in the shafts that are being sunk show immensely rich, running from $15 to $1,800 per ton.

The unusual features of the new field are the magnitude of the veins, the number of them and their size, veins 3½ to seven feet in width being classed as small ones, and in many places solid quartz veins are seen carrying gold from wall to wall from 15 to 25 feet in width. Experienced miners who have worked in mining districts all over the western country say that they never have seen anything that compares in magnitude or in richness with the new field. The accessibility of water and the abundance of timber for fuel and mining operations are exceptional features in favor of this district, comparing it with the Black Hills, which during the past eight years have yielded millions, according to a report made by Prof. H. Hofman, Dakota School of Mines, who says: "The amount of free gold in the ores varies with the depth at which they are mined; it is difficult to give a correct average figure of its value, but $4 per ton will be near it.

"The cost of water in the Black Hills is 50 cents to 75 cents per day per stamp; water and fuel being 50 per cent. of the cost of milling; fuel alone being 38 per cent. of the cost, the wood used being brought from 25 to 30 miles, and costing an average of $6 per cord."

If mining in the Black Hills on an average of $4 per ton has been so profitable, the results obtained from mining operations in the new field must yield a profit so stupendous as to be the wonder of this century and attract thousands of persons and millions of capital in the near future.

At the present time the means of reaching the Seine River district are not first-class. The best route at present is from Duluth by rail to Tower, Minn., and from there by team over the ice on the lakes in the winter months, or by small steamers in the summer time. The trip from Tower can be made by team in two days, the distance in a straight line being about 110 miles to the center of the district. The Canadian Pacific Railroad is within 70 miles, but to the north of the gold fields. There is a range of mountains very rough and broken, making the building of a branch in from that direction very expensive. Provisions and machinery and all supplies are at present drawn from Duluth and Tower, and they must continue for some time to be the natural supply centers.

The locality above described will be a miners' paradise for years to come. Large and small game is abundant; the waters are densely populated with every variety of the finest fish; to the west along Rainy River is a productive farming country 500 square miles in extent, growing the choicest products of the soil in abundance. Food supplies of every kind must continue cheap, thereby assisting greatly the development, and the volume of business will soon spur the railway companies nearest to extend their lines. No doubt this will be done during the present summer.—Buffalo Express.

MONEY IN PEANUTS.

Ten Million Dollars Spent Annually in America for This "Fruit."

A man incidentally asked a street vender if his peanuts were first-class, and the response to the inquiry was surprising, says The Chicago Tribune.

"No," said the vender. "You do not get first-class peanuts in this country in this way. The best peanuts are used for other purposes. They are made into meal and grits by scientific men, and in Germany they are prepared for sick people in the hospitals. The peanuts you get in candy are the very poorest grade, and some of the 'burnt almonds' you get are nothing more than fourthrate peanuts."

"Where did the peanut come from?"

"From Central and South America. They grow here in long pods, and the pods contain from four to five kernels. They were carried to the old world in the early days, and in the seventeenth century they constituted the chief staple of Africa. You will find if you look it up that the slave dealers of Africa in those days used to load their ships with peanuts to be used as food for their human cargoes. The negroes who were imported from Africa to this country brought over the peanut and they were scattered and first grew in Virginia. And now this country is raising the crop, and, owing to American shrewdness, the nut is ground and used for various purposes, and shipped all over the world.

"I reckon you know," the vender continued, "that peanuts in certain conditions are more nutritious than beef. When specially prepared they rank with beans and peas. The peanut is said to contain 29 per cent. of protein and 49 per cent. of fat. What is known as peanut meal contains 52 per cent. of portein and 8 per cent of fat. It is cheapest of all food materials."

In 1861 and 1865 peanut oil was manufactured largely in four southern States, and was employed as a substitute for olive oil. In fact, one druggist admitted, some of the "olive oil" now sold in this country is nothing more than peanut oil. Nearly all of the olive oil sold in the United States is mixed with part of the peanut. Peanuts furnish from 30 to 50 per cent of the weight of their kernels in oil. Sometimes peanut oil is used for lighting, and again it is used to advantage in the making of soap, and as a lubricant in machine shops.

The American peanut is larger and better than any other, but it does not contain so much oil as the African nut. The "cake" which is left after extracting the oil makes excellent feed for cattle, and is used very largely for that purpose in Germany, where it sells for $30 to $33 a ton. This country owes to Germany the suggestion it has received in relation to the edible qualities of peanuts, and the department of agriculture is now investigating the method of Germany in the way in which that country has handled the nut, and the result is to be published by the department for the benefit of the farmers.

The United States now produces 4,000,000 bushels of peanuts annually, or 8,000,000 pounds. The total world's supply amounts to about 600,000,000 pounds. The exportation from Africa and India to Europe during the last year amounted to nearly 400,000,000 pounds. Of this quantity 222,000,000 pounds were delivered at the port of Marseilles, France, the bulk of it being pressed for oil.

It is estimated that $10,000,000 worth of peanuts are eaten every year in the United States, and most of the quantity, it is said, is consumed between meals and at odd times.

Mrs. Keeley and the Queen.

An interesting incident took place at Buckingham palace last week during her Majesty's stay in the metropolis. Some time ago the Queen, who always shows the greatest interest in the drama, and in the actors and actresses who have performed in her presence, enquired after Mrs. Keeley, and was informed that she was well and in her 90th year. The Queen expressed a wish to see her, and Col. Collins arranged for Mrs. Keeley to have the honor of being received at Buckingham palace the afternoon of the 6th ult., when she was presented to her Majesty, to the Empress Frederick, and to Princess Louise. The welcome given to the gifted lady, who so wonderfully preserves her health, intelligence and vivacity, was most cordial, and the Queen was pleased to call to mind several interesting incidents of the past, and to refer in truly flattering terms to the impression made upon her mind by the acting in former days of Mrs. Keeley. The Empress Frederick also reminded the aged actress of performances witnessed many years ago in which she had interpreted the principal parts. Princess Louise also appeared deeply interested in the visitor. In Mrs. Keeley's long life there have been many memorable incidents. There could never have been one more indicative of the perfect tact and kindness of the Queen than the interview accorded to the universally respected actress by one who had known her from the early days of her remarkable career.—London Queen.

Likes the Word "Madam."

Even when the street car conductor cautions us, "Don't get off, lady, till the car stops," or the cash-girl wails at us, 'Here's your change, lady," and we feel half impatient and half amused, we hardly know why, even then we do realize, I think, and appreciate, that it is meant courteously. "Woman, here's your change," would be distinctly unpleasant, even though strictly true, and not meant to be impolite.

There is, however, another term which is coming more and more into use, which saves us either of these extremes. I mean the old, dignified, noncommittal word, "madam." A conventional term of address," the dictionary declares it to be, "to women of any degree."—Ladies' Home Journal.

THE HOUSE PROROGUED

Closing of the Legislature a Purely Formal Affair.

Toronto, April 17.—The formal closing of the Provincial Legislature yesterday afternoon was most democratic. The arrival of the Lieut.-Governor was unaccompanied by any military display. The four hundred were not present. One gentleman from Hamilton appeared in evening dress, while Sir Oliver and other Cabinet Ministers were content to wear their ordinary Prince Alberts. The proceedings began at 3.15 o'clock, when the Lieut.-Governor appeared, accompanied by Commander Law and Captain Kirkpatrick. He delivered this speech:

Mr. Speaker and Gentlemen of the Legislative Assembly: In releasing you from the labors of the session, it gives me great pleasure to recognize the diligence with which you applied yourselves to the duties which you were called upon under the constitution to discharge.

The various measures you have adopted in recent years for securing greater interest in scientific farming, and for improving the condition of those engaged in the important pursuit of agriculture, have been of great advantage to the province, and I am glad to notice that you have this session consolidated and amended the agriculture and arts acts, simplifying the law previously existing, and adding many useful provisions.

The application of the money which you have voted for experimental work at the Agricultural Colege and for establishing the new department of bacteriology will, I am confident, greatly add to the value of the training which students in practical husbandry will hereafter receive.

I anticipate lasting advantages from the important statute which has been passed for diminishing the number of appeals and for otherwise improving the procedure of the courts, and I regard as useful and beneficial legislation other amendments of the law due to your counsels, and especially the acts respecting the election laws, the act affecting jurors and juries, the act making other provisions respecting assignments for the benefit of creditors, the act relating to leases, sales and mortgages of settled estates, and the act respecting the verdicts of jurors in civil cases.

The Electric Railway Act, which you have passed, for regulating the powers and privileges of electric railways generally, will, doubtless, greatly encourage the construction of this system of light railways, and thus furnish cheap transportation for the growing demands of agriculture and the internal commerce of the country.

The measures which you have passed respecting Public schools, Industrial schools and the public health will conduce to the advancement, the comfort and the well-being of the people.

I notice with satisfaction the improvement which you have introduced in the law respecting factories, and for the further protection of the health and morals of persons employed in places of business other than factories.

I have assented with pleasure to the legislation affecting free libraries and mechanics' institutes, and the public aid given to charitable institutions, regulating the chartering of trust companies, amending the Registry Act, and extending the city manhood suffrage Registration Act of 1894 to county towns.

The policy which you have adopted of protecting the public against unsafe life and fire insurance has had a very salutary influence, and I believe that the act of this session will further simplify and at the same time make more efficient the working of the insurance law.

I am rejoiced to observe that effective steps have been taken for the further protection of children, and I confidently hope that the measure you have passed for that purpose will result in social and domestic improvement.

I thank you for the liberal supplies which you have granted in order to maintain the full efficacy of the public service in its various branches.

BUTTER FROM CHEESE WHEY.

Successful Experiments Made at Cornell By Agricultural Experts.

Washington, April 16.—The officials of the Agricultural Department are satisfied with the general result of the experiments made at Cornell University, which have shown the possibility of making butter from the whey left after the manufacture of cheese. The only other question to be determined is whether it can be made in such quantities as to pay. It is said to be good butter, qualified judges being unable to detect it from that made from milk.

The Department leaves it to the manufacturers of cheese to show whether butter can be thus made in quantities sufficient to pay for the labor expended upon it. It is estimated that $1,000,000 worth of butter could be made from the whey produced annually in the manufacture of cheese in New York State alone.

SUICIDE WITH CYANIDE.

Sergt.-Major Hogan Deliberately Takes His Own Life at Halifax

Halifax, April 17.—Company Sergeant Major Hogan of the Royal Engineers attended the Military Club's dance last night and appeared to be in the highest of spirits. Two hours later his lifeless body lay on his bed, death having been due to a dose of cyanide of potash, deliberately administered by himself.

John Hogan was a native of Toronto, 35 years of age and of jovial disposition. He was married four months ago to Miss Gossip of this city.

Mrs. Hogan accompanied her husband to the dance. He remarked to his wife before they left home, in a joking way: "You better come to the dance to-night, as I don't think I will be able to take you to another one."

They returned to their boarding house, No. 16 Gottingen-street, shortly after midnight. When deceased got into bed he had in his hand a bottle which his wife thought was something for his nerves, he being accustomed to taking something of that sort. The bottle was a six-ounce one, and nearly full. He emptied the contents into a tumbler and kissed his wife, saying he had nothing to live for but her. A little later he said: "Well, I'm blessed if I haven't taken enough cyanide of potash to kill 14 men, and it has only warmed me."

He then fell back lifeless. An inquest was unnecessary.

TO MARRY A COUNT.

A Petrolea Oil Magnate's Daughter Engaged to a German Noble.

Toronto, April 17. — The engagement is announced of Miss Mamie Helena, eldest daughter of Mr. W. H. McGarvey of Galicia, Austria, and a son of Mr. Edward McGarvey of London to Count Eberhard von Zeppelin, second lieutenant in the German Lancers, King William I. Regiment. The bride is 19 years of age, and was born in Petrolea, where her father was engaged in the oil business. He removed to Austria about 12 years ago, and has met with great success there.

The White Ants of India.

"It is a remarkable fact, but one never sees wooden telegraph poles in India," said a well-known railroad man yesterday. "The white ants are so numerous in India that they would eat a telegraph pole in one night. On that account stone is used. The stone piles are from six to eight feet high. For ties inverted iron boxes are used, and, strange to say, they are so tempered that they do not warp in hot weather."

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS.
PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

PARLIAMENT OPENS TO-DAY

Movers and Seconders of the Address Selected.

NEWFOUNDLAND CONFERENCE OVER

Two Useful Bulletins Sent Out by the Experimental Farm. The Private Bills of Which Notice Has Been Fyled—Notes From the Capital.

Ottawa, April 17.—It is expected that the address in the Commons will be moved by W. H. Bennett, the member for East Simcoe, and that the seconder will be Mr. Leclair, M.P. for Terrebonne. Mr. Arsenault of Prince Edward Island will move the address in the Senate, and probably Mr. Primrose of Pictou will be the seconder.

Last session there were 74 private bills passed by Parliament. At the coming session about the same number will be presented for consideration of the members. Up to to-day notice has been given of the introduction of 70 private bills, of which 42 pertain to railways or canals, 14 to banking or insurance, 7 miscellaneous and 7 divorce. The divorce applications are Mrs. Julia E. Chute of Toronto, from her husband, who was a tailor in the Queen City; W. W. Cotton of Picton, from his wife; Mrs. Clara V. F. Ellis of Toronto from her husband, T. D. Ellis; Mrs. Mary Falding of Ottawa, from her husband, F. J. Falding; Mrs. Helen W. Jarvis of Toronto, from her husband, G. H. Jarvis; L. S. Odell of Quebec, from his wife; and Sergt.-Major Spicer of the Northwest Mounted Police, from his wife, who is an Indian woman of the Blood Tribe. Infidelity is alleged in every case.

Judging from the number of rooms taken at the different leading hotels, their accommodation will be pretty well taxed, as is usual, during the sitting of Parliament. There have been very few arrivals as yet, but to-morrow will see a large influx of senators, members of Parliament, pressmen and others whose duty brings them here each session. Everything around the House is in readiness for the opening. The last finishing touches have been added to the chambers of both Houses.

The Newfoundland delegates had a conference this morning with the sub-committee of council and another meeting was held in the evening when business of the conference was concluded for the present. Sir Mackenzie Bowell on being questioned by your correspondent late to-night said: "Nothing could be finalized until the matters referred to have been discussed by respective Governments."

This announcement is somewhat indefinite, but when it is reflected that Hon. Mr. Bond at the very outset of negotiations, announced that the delegates had no power to conclude a bargain, that they were coming to Ottawa simply to see what terms they could get and to report such terms to their Legislature, it will be obvious that nothing of a definite character can come from them officially. The delegates preserve a stolid reticence on the subject of the negotiations, but they seem to be well satisfied with their mission to Ottawa. One of them admitted in conversation that, while they had not got all that they wanted, yet he thought the terms were such that there would be little difficulty in inducing the House of Assembly of Newfoundland to assent to union.

To ask a visitor to Parliament Buildings "to come and see the corner stone," is synonymous with an invitation "to come and lubricate," or "see a man." The corner stone is over on the Senate side of the building, and is a conspicuous object on the way to the restaurant. From present appearances there will be many visitors to this portion of the building during the coming session. A new caterer, Mr. S. Simms, formerly steward of the Rideau Club, will have charge of the restaurant this year, and he is about to introduce an innovation, which will create a sensation in Ottawa. All waiters are to be dressed in knee breeches, white stockings, patent leather shoes and powdered hair.

Two very useful publications from the experimental farm have just appeared. The first relates to the cultivation of raspberries and is an illustrated bulletin of 25 pages by Mr. John Craig, horticulturist. It contains a historical sketch of the development of different varieties of the genus rubus, a description of the leading varieties, and results of cultural experiments at the farm: The engravings are from photographs of fruit grown at the farm and, therefore, strictly accurate. The best means of preventing losses sustained by fruit growers from attacks of fungous diseases and injurious insects are clearly set forth in Bulletin No. 23, issued jointly by Messrs. Craig and Fletcher, horticulturist and entomologist of the Experimental Farm. This bulletin is very timely, as now is the time that the fruit grower should arm himself to fight the various enemies which attack his crops and reduce his revenue. The how and why of spraying are fully explained. These bulletins are now ready for distribution, and will be sent free to all whose names are included in the farm mailing list and to such others as may apply for them.

Mr. H. A. Bate, president of the Ottawa Reform Club, is to be tendered a complimentary supper next Wednesday evening. Mr. Laurier is expected to be present.

The Fisheries branch to-day presented Mr. S. P. Bauset, until recently chief clerk, with a beautiful fishing rod of English make as a token of the esteem with which he is regarded by his late confreres in the department.

Mr. G. H. Macdonell, M.P., visited the Fisheries Department to-day in connection with proposed opening up for commercial fishing of the lakes lying along the Canadian Pacific Railway between Port Arthur and Rat Portage.

Sealery Conference Postponed.

Washington, April 16.—A telegram was received from the British Embassy today, from Lord Aberdeen, stating that in view of the assembling of Parliament on the 18th instant, the members of the Ministry, whom it was desired should be in Washington to be consulted with reference to the new treaty for the settlement of claims arising against the United States for seizures in Behring Sea, will not leave until Parliament shall have adjourned. Under these circumstances the conference will not probably be held before Oct. 1 next.

Beef in Britain Cheaper.

New York, April 16.—A London special says: "American beef in England has not followed the advance in America, but has recently actually decreased in price."

THE PEACE TREATY SIGNED.

Europe Enters a Protest Against the Reported Terms.

Washington, April 16.—Secretary Gresham received a cablegram from Minister Dun at Tokyo, Japan, confirming the press despatches that a peace treaty had been signed by Japan and China. The message gave no details. The statement that Japan has agreed to accept an indemnity of only $100,000,000 is regarded here as erroneous. Her demand at the beginning of the peace conference was 400,000,000 yen, equal to $200,000,000 American gold. According to advices previously received Japan reduced this amount by one hundred million yen, thus leaving the indemnity at 300,000,000 yen, or $150,000,000 in gold.

Astonishment is expressed that one of the reported conditions of peace should have been an offensive and defensive alliance between the two nations. Such agreements are never under any circumstances made public. If this be the conclusion reached by the two countries it is regarded as the more extraordinary that it should have been so publicly announced. It is pointed out, moreover, that Japan has nothing to gain by an alliance of this character. Both nations are at peace with the rest of the world, and, aside from this, China's weakness and lack of military strength, as shown in the war just closed, would render an alliance with such a nation a source of weakness to Japan.

It is still understood at the Japanese Legation that one of the agreements of peace will be the occupation by Japan of Port Arthur for a limited term of years. The information received here confirms the report of the conclusion of peace, but discredits the details as reported by The London Times.

Europe Will Revise the Terms of Peace

London, April 16.—The Globe, commenting on the terms of the treaty of peace alleged to have been signed by the Japanese and Chinese plenipotentiaries in Shimonoseki yesterday, says that provisions two, three, four and six, respectively, allowing Japan to retain the conquered places, to retain the territory east of the Liao River, ceding Formosa permanently to Japan, and making an offensive and defensive alliance between Japan and China, are simply impossible. Europe, The Globe declares, will not assent to any conditions which place China's latent resources under Japanese control, no matter whether in war or in commerce.

A despatch to The Globe from Yokohama says the peace conference sat five hours yesterday, and it is believed to have been the final sitting. The Chinese plenipotentiaries are preparing to leave for home.

The Daily News, referring to the China-Japanese alliance which is said to be one of the conditions of the treaty of peace, will say to-morrow that under the new conditions such an alliance would be so much more to the advantage of China that it can scarcely imagine Japan proposing it. "Japan," says The News, "has emerged from the conflict a great power. There is no precise parallel in the history of the world to her marvelous adaptability and imitative genius."

The Graphic is inclined to believe in the reported alliance. It says: "This Japanization of China would be the death knell of the European in eastern Asia and the ruin of western industry."

DRIVEN INSANE BY EASTER EGGS.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 17.—A tall, slender man, well dressed, entered the American Exchange Company's office at the Suspension Bridge Depot of the New York Central Railroad to-night and handed the agent two packages of money, one for Isaac B. Cameron of Lisbon, Ohio, containing $235, and one for J. Noble of Wellsville, Ohio, containing $300. As soon as the money had been receipted for the stranger said that he had eaten some Easter eggs last Sunday that had arsenic in them, and the devil had been after him ever since. He pulled out a knife and began stabbing himself on the wrist, one cut nearly severing an artery. At police headquarters he said his name was William B. Cameron, and that he had been a motorman. He came from Pittsburg, but lately he had been employed at Allegheny City, Pa. He said his father died of insanity.

TO WED HOLLAND'S QUEEN.

Rumored Betrothal of Queen Wilhelmina to Alfred of Saxe Coburg.

London, April 17.—The World publishes a report to the effect that Prince Alfred, eldest son and heir of the Duke of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, more generally known as the Duke of Edinburgh, is likely to be betrothed to the young Queen Wilhelmina of Holland. The young Queen was born at The Hague on Aug. 31, 1880, and the young Prince was born in London on Oct. 15, 1874. The mother of Queen Wilhelmina is regent of Holland during the minority of the Queen. It has been announced here that Queen Wilhelmina, accompanied by the Queen-Regent, will leave Amsterdam on May 23, for London, via Flushing.

Train Robber Perry Recaptured.

New York, April 17.—The police of Weehawken have arrested Oliver Curtis Perry, the escaped train robber. He was captured on the River-road, near the West Shore Railroad yards. He was only captured after a severe struggle.

Perry said this afternoon that after his escape he managed to get two or three changes of clothing, all of which he wore. His idea in doing this was that if he happened to be seen he would immediately take off a suit and throw it away, thereby changing his appearance altogether. Since his escape he spent the nights among the hills and walking as best he could in the daytime. He denounced his treatment at the asylum. Perry arrived at the Hudson County jail, Jersey City, in the afternoon. The prisoner is in a very weak and broken up condition, and has confessed all, including his experience since his escape.

The Repatriation Advance Guard.

Lake Linden, Mich., April 16.—Thirty heads of families left yesterday afternoon for Vernor, Ont., to build log houses for families to follow in a few weeks. These are the advance guard of Father Paradis' colony of repatriated French-Canadians. A large number of emigrants will leave during the next 10 days.

Umra Khan's Forces Dispersing.

Calcutta, April 16.—Advices received by the Viceroy of India from Sir Robert Lowe state that the followers of Umra Khan are returning to their homes. The despatches further say that Lieutenant Fowler and the others of the British column who were taken prisoners by Umra Khan are safe in camp.

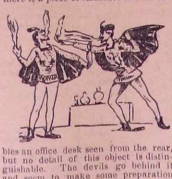
Bismarck's Illness Serious.

London, April 16.—A despatch to the Central News from Berlin this morning reasserts that Prince Bismarck is seriously ill, and that Dr. Schweninger was hastily summoned to his bedside last evening and started for Friedrichsruhe.

Two Marvellous Fire Eaters.

The fire eaters of whom we propose to speak, and who have been exhibiting in the hall of the Olympia at Paris, excel in their line anything of the kind that has been seen up to the present. They not only swallowed flames, but handle fire and cause it to flash from their fingers.

These fire eaters are two young Americans who have cultivated physics and electricity considerably. When they perform their experiments they are clad in a tight-fitting costume of a red color, which represents that of the devils of fairy scenes. The stage upon which they appear remains but dimly lighted during the entire time of their presence thereon. At the back of it there is a piece of furniture that resembles an office desk seen from the rear, but no detail of this object is distinguishable. The devils go behind it and seem to make some preparation with their hands there, and then they come to the front of the stage and cause very thin but brilliant flames to dart from their fingers. Bringing these flames near their mouths, they seem to swallow them, and then extinguish them between their teeth.



When the two devils touch each other's hands a crackling is heard and long flames dart forth for a few seconds from the tips of their fingers, which they continuously move.

In a subsequent experiment, without putting anything in their mouths, they blow with energy and a brilliant flame makes its exit from between their lips. They shoot forth a jet of flame for a considerable length of time, which certainly exceeds half a minute.

While these singular phenomena are occurring the spectators absolutely smell no odor. It is probable that the combustion is due to a very volatile essence, but we are unable either to state precisely the nature of it or to give an exact explanation of the experiments performed. The red devils keep their secret, and when they are questioned remain mute.

For the chemist there are here some interesting experiments to take up and study.—La Nature.

UTILIZING OLD SHOES.

How Cast-Off Footwear Is Made to Serve Useful Purposes.

A new use has been found, it is said, for old boots and shoes. This is how they are treated in the process of conversion into a novel kind of house carpet.

The shoes are thrown promiscuously into an immense tank, into which steam and dissolving compounds are run, thereby causing the old shoes to take a thick liquid form. Certain proportions of tallow, borax and glue are then introduced, and the pulp is run into moulds.

The moulds are shaped after the plan of a regular sand mould, and may have the form of flowers, leaves, figures or geometrical designs. The pulp is run into these moulds and the figure hardens in the cold air. These casts are arranged in the proper figure or design, when a cementing process begins. The cement is a compound made from leather pulp and glue, and it is run between the figures. The figures soften a little with the compound, and the whole hardens together.

In the casting of each figure a different colored pulp is used—red pulp for red roses, white pulp for white flowers, green for leaves and so on. Thus elaborate designs may be carried out. Then comes the pressing by the use of rollers, and polishing with varnish.

The result is a nice-looking floor covering, the cost of which is less than straw matting, and less than oilcloth; in fact, an economical and durable carpeting.—Shoe and Leather Facts.

INSTITUTION LOCALS.

(From the Deaf Mute.)

Mrs. George Bergerson, who was employed temporarily in the Sewing Department has given the utmost satisfaction; her home duties prevent her from accepting a permanent position

Mr. J. T. Wilkinson, of the Vancouver World, was here visiting Mr. R. Mathison, Jr., for a couple of days last week. "The World man on the wing," he is called.

Miss Minnie Dempsey is the new Seamstress, Supervisor of Girls, etc., and she commenced her duties to day.

On Wednesday Miss Terrill left on a trip to Strathroy, where she was supoenaed as an expert witness in a case in which a deaf mute was interested and also to act as interpreter during the trial. She returned Monday.

On April 4th, Miss Walker, our matron left for Toronto and Hamilton for a visit. She stayed in Toronto five days and in Hamilton three days. She returned on the 11th looking very well and happy.

About two weeks ago Miss Lizzie Watson got a solid gold watch from her parents as a birthday present. The watch is lovely and the girls admire it very much.

On Easter Monday night the children had a party in the dining room—probably the last one of the session. The usual games were indulged in for a couple of hours, after which bags of candies, nuts, raisins, &c. were distributed. The boys and girls all seemed to thoroughly enjoy themselves and if they could have their way they would have a party at least once a week throughout the session.

Easter Sunday passed away very quietly there being little of unusual interest to mark the day. Mr. Denys took the chapel service and explained in a very interesting manner the significance of the day.

Miss Wood and Miss Campbell, of Madoc, are visiting Miss Belle Mathison.

We must not forget to mention a drawing of Calvary and the scene of the crucifixion executed on the chapel slates on Good Friday by little Nelson Wood. It was a beautiful piece of artistic work and was entirely his own design. It gained praise from every one who saw it. Nelson shows a genius for drawing and perhaps the world will hear of him in years to come. During the visit of Lord Aberdeen he was complimented by that gentleman for specimens of his work in crayon on the class room slates.

Miss Eliza Garden and Miss Sadie Garden, of Bobcaygeon, surprised their sister Elsie on Saturday last by coming to the Institution to visit her. They were occompanied by Miss Lueffa Robinson, of Bobcaygeon, a former pupil.

Mr. Dowrie our new foreman carpenter, arrived from Hamilton on the 1st inst. He at once entered on his new duties. He is quickly accommodating himself to the change and familiarizing himself to the means of communication with the deaf.

Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jamison and Miss Amelia Mace and Miss Hattie Mace, of Tamworth, graced our Monday evening party with their presence.

Miss Maybee spent Easter with her mother in Warkworth, and Miss Ostrom spent the day with friends in Toronto.

The waiters changed on the 1st inst. Levi Lewis, who has been head-monitor since September, was appointed head-waiter and Mike Noonan took his place as head-monitor.

HARBOR LIGHTS

Following is a list of the shipping now lying at Picton, and the Captains of the boats for this season: Steamer Alexandria, Captain Smith, will go on her old route between Charlotte and Montreal. Steamer Empress of India, Captain George O Brien, will run between Toronto and Port Dalhousie. Steambarge Aberdeen, Captain M. Hepburn. Steambarge Water Lily, Captain William Ostrander, will be in the cheese trade from Henderson Harbor and way ports to Montreal. Steambarge Iona, Captain J. D. Van Alstine, will run between Trenton and Oswego. Schooner Kate, Captain Denette, has two loads of barl[illegible]ngaged from Belleville to Kingston, on the opening of navigation. Schooner Two Brothers, Captain N. McCrimmins. Schooner Nellie Hunter, Captain P. Ostrander, who has bought a share in her. Schooner Fabiola, Captain Horn, who has bought the vessel. Schooner Annie Minnes, Captain J. Savage. It is expected the Bay of Quinte will be clear of ice about the 25th instant. Captain Van Alstine expects to be here with the Iona about the first of May. Mr. Campbell will unload the Iona at Oswego the present season.

The schr. Albacore is the first to leave Port Hope this year.

The schr. W. J. Suffell has cleared for Charlotte from Hamilton. The Suffell was the first vessel in last year, arriving on April 4th. Capt. Corson has a record of being an early bird.

Workmen are engaged in putting on the last coat of paint on the dredge and the spiles are about ready to be put into position. The tug Ottawa has been steaming around the harbor the past few days.

The ice is out of the Bay below Massassaga Park. It is altogether likely the ice will be out of Big Bay this week.

The tug Beaver has been moved from her winter quarters to her new dock and is now waiting for the ice to break up.

The schr. Hanlan is beached near Bush Island on account of the low water. It will be some time before she can be removed.

The Late James Volume

Last night, after a week's illness, James Volume, shoemaker died at his residence, Alfred street, Kingston, from pneumonia. This morning when his death became known among friends many regrets were expressed. Deceased was fifty-three years of age, born in Scotland where he learned his trade, and came to Kingston about 25 years ago working first for the late A. Sutherland and latterly for W. Adams. He was a member of the Ancient Order of United Workman and Sons of Scotland He leaves a wife and family, four daughters and a son. He was an uncle of Mr. D. V. Sinclair and Mrs. Dr. Sine of this city.

ANNUAL CONVERSAZIONE

The Y M C A Concluding Gathering for the Season

The annual conversazione given by the Y. M. C. A. Reception Committee as a final to the season's work took place last night. The rooms were comfortably filled and a delightful time was spent by all present. The rooms were tastefully decorated and the gymnasium where lunch was served had been made very attractive by a liberal apportioning of bunting and flags.

A very enjoyable and select program was rendered under the general supervision of Mr. W. C. Mikel who as chairman added much to the enjoyment of the recital. A selection by Mr. Riggs' orchestra in its very best form opened proceedings and it was followed by Misses Falconer and Graham in a very pleasing duet. These two ladies have appeared together at nearly all the concerts this season and have never failed to thoroughly please their hearers.

Mr. Leo Riggs' gave a characteristically delightful rendering of a piano solo. Mr. Brickman rendered a saxophone solo that was very fine. Mr. J. N. Doyle was on for a song and there was general disappointment that he was unavoidably absent in Toronto. Master Lester Riggs played one of his delightful clarionet solos and Mr. Lalonde gave a violin solo that as usual with his rendition was much appreciated. Everyone was delighted with a mandolin and guitar selection by Messrs. Simpson and Woolever. The orchestra concluded the programme with a medley of Scotch airs that was very fine. A hearty vote of thanks was passed to the chairman, and those who took part in the programme. Mr. Mikel was urged to give a recitation but he procrastinated.

The guests then repaired to the gymnasium where around a number of small tables they spent a pleasant time over the delicacies served by the gentlemen; and the company departed at a very seasonable hour.

THE REGATTA.

To be an International Event—A Committee Appointed to go Ahead

The Regatta Committee met last night in the City Hall to continue arrangements for holding the Aquatic Sports and other amusements this summer. There was not a very large attendance. Mayor Walmsley occupied the chair. It was decided that the sports should consist of an International Rowing Regatta, an International Sailing Regatta, a Canoe Association Meet and a Bicycle Tournament. Mr. J. Bell, jr., read a letter from Mr. Ambrose, secretary of the Lake Yacht Racing Association, informing him that he had been elected to the Executive Committee to represent the Bay of Quinte Yacht Club. He also received one at a later date informing him that the club would hold a meet somewhere near the 1st of August. The Secretary asked for suggestions as to where it would be advisable to hold the meet. Mr. Bell was of the opinion that the meet could be brought here at a small outlay and the fleet would mean 25 or 30 boats from Toronto, Hamilton and other places. This also would induce other yachts from the other side of the line to come over and compete in the races. A letter from the Picton Boating Club was also read and they will bring their fleet here during the regatta The Secretary was instructed to write to them at an early date It was moved and seconded that Mr. J. P. Thompson be appointed secretary of the Regatta Committee. Mr. H. Corby was elected president, with Messrs. W. H. Biggar Thos. Ritchie, Col. Lazier, Mayor Walmsley, vice presidents. The Secretary was instructed to cable Harding, the English champion, to find out if he would be willing to row Gaudaur here on or before the 12th of August next.

ALTERATIONS TO THE MERRIT

The Steamer is Being Much Improved Both for Convenience and in Appearance

The steamer Merritt is now at her dock undergoing extensive repairs and alterations that will very materially improve the accommodation afforded her passengers On the lower deck at the stern a very comfortable ladies'cabin is being fitted up. A new stairway has been put in forward and new compound engines are being made for her. On the upper deck the pilot house and mate and Captain's cabins will be raised to the hurricane deck and the candy stand will be brought up from downstairs and put in under them. Six or eight more staterooms will be added at the stern. Down in the forecastle where formerly was only ballast twelve or fifteen staterooms have been put in. The ballast has been put forward and bulkheads built in, windows will be cut and the place will be made very comfortable. In addition to all this she will have a new coat of paint and by the 24th of May when it is expected she will be ready for service, she will be one of the prettiest and most comfortable steamers on the lake.

FOR KEEPING A DISORDERLY HOUSE

Mrs Jennie Graham and the Inmates are Given a Suspended Sentence

Jennie Graham was found guilty of keeping a disorderly house in Rossmore yesterday. She was given a suspended sentence of six months in the central. The inmates, her daughter and Clem Ellis also received the same sentence. They were given until the 26th of this month to leave the country and in default the sentence will take effect. There was a similar sentence imposed by Magistrate Flint on Mrs. Graham here and in case Mrs. Graham removes to this city she will receive the benefit of it.

Remo and Juliet

There was a fair sized audience last night in the Queen's Opera House to witness Shakespeare's sublime Romeo and Juliet by Miss Jane Coombs. Miss Coombs on account of suffering from a severe cold did not appear at her best. The other members of the company played their parts well and the applause was liberal. Capulet's tomb in the last act was very imposing.

AROUND THE TOWN.

Pithy Paragraphs Picked up from all Quarters.

This is election day in Haldimand.

The Dominion Parliament opens to-morrow.

The noteworthy fact about the concert to be given in the B.B.C. next Tuesday evening is of course the appearance of Mrs. Caverly Nash, the sweetest singer ever heard in Belleville. The will be the first appearance this year also of Mr Geo. Fax.

There were four tramps in the cells last night for protection.

William O'Brien who hails from Kingston evidently knew a good thing when he struck it for he would not keep from drinking Belleville whiskey. This morning the magistrate sent him up for thirty days to sober up.

The police have a number of catapults which they have taken away from boys. These dangerous weapons are unlawful and parents would do a wise act in impressing this on the minds of their children

Henry Ward Beecher once informed a man who came to him complaining of gloomy and despondent feelings, that what he most needed was a good cathartic, meaning, of course, such as Ayer's Cathartic Pills, every dose being effective.

The great favor in which Ayer's Pills are held all over the world has been well earned. They are easy and even pleasant to take, and for all complaints of the stomach and liver, and bowels, are the safest and most thorough medicine in pharmacy. Every dose effective.

Only two weeks more and the Philharmonic concert will be among the pleasures of the past, and those who have not heard it will have a constant source of regret for only to hear them give "Hail Brightest Abode" from Jaunhanses is well worth the price of the whole concert, to say nothing of the chorus from the Bohemian Girl, the glees and many beautiful solos from our well known local talent and outsiders who have not been heard in this city before. We look for a large attendance of our friends the public.

SIDNEY CROSSING

April 15th.

The weather continues so cold and disagreeable that the farmers are begining to despair of ever getting at their spring work.

Mr. Frank Spafford, of Garden Hill, is visiting friends here.

The employees of Vandervoort's box factory are actively engaged in sawing material, for the manufacture of their boxes during the coming season.

Mr. Dan Hyde has purchased the Power Bros. estate and will again become a resident of the Crossing. He intends making extensive improvements in the buildings and will in time have a neat and cosy home.

It is not an extraordinary sight to see numbers of our boisterous urchins wending their way southward, pike-pole in hand, in quest of the wary pike which frequents our neighboring creeks at this season of the year.

Mr. Geo. Hadrell has purchased the Cronk estate and is fitting it up in great style.

Mr. E. N. Lowe of Deseronto, spent Easter with friends here.

A number from here were in attendance at the concert given by the International Entertainers in Belleville on Thursday eve.

Misses Minnie and Cora Fletcher also Miss Licetta Hogle were visiting friends in Trenton this week.

News is extremely scarce owing to dull times.

BIG ISLAND ITEMS

(To late for last week.)

The snow is going very fast. Farmers will soon commence sowing.

Mr. Rockwell Dunning has moved into H. F. Moran's house for a while, prior to his departure for Toronto where he will in future reside. Mr. and Mrs. L. Uroran entertained a few of their relatives and friends on Friday last, Among those present were: Mr. A. Reynol's and Mr. and Mrs. J. B. We are glad to hear that Phillip McGound's little child is fast recovering under the skillful treatment of Dr. Morden, Demorestville.

SPRINGBROOK

The house, barns and all the out buildings on the east half of lot 15, in the tenth con. of Rawdon were burned Monday night. Incendaryism is said to be the cause.

The Literary club is running nicely. The debate next Saturday night will be on "Which is the more beneficial, Protection or Free Trade."

A Quiet Wedding

One of the happiest events of the season took place at the home of Mr John Pitman, in the 5th concession of Thurlow on Wednesday evening April 10th. About 40 guests had been invited on that occasion to witness the marriage of their daughter Grace to Mr. Egbert S. Gilbert also of the 5th concession.

Although the roads were in a very muddy state yet it was a beautiful evening overhead and nearly all those that had been invited were present.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Adams of Canifton circuit. The bride was ably assisted by Miss Sarah Moore of Carmel. Both ladies looked beautiful as they appeared before the guests, robed in their gay attire, precisely the same and each carrying a fine large bouquet of white flowers.

The groom was attended by Mr. M. W. Mott, a former teacher in that section.

After the young couple had received the congratulations of those present they all sat down to a sumptuous tea which everyone seemed to enjoy. After tea a very enjoyable evening was spent, partly due to the wit and good humor of our much respected pastor, Mr. Adams.

The bride received many valuable and useful presents which plainly shows the high esteem in which the young couple are held.

On the following evening about 80 young people met at the home of Mr. Gilbert to welcome his bride on their arrival. Among those present were Miss Edna Sills, Bethel; Mr. George Vandewaters and his sister, Nellie, from Wellington, Prince Edward.

Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert are very popular in all social circles, and they have many warm friends in this section of the country all of whom join in wishing them a long and happy life of connubial bliss. The ONTARIO joins in wishing them a long, happy and prosperous career.

Warning to Women.

Ladies who appreciate the high quality Priestley's Dress Goods should make a point to see that Priestley's name is stamped on every five yards. Instances are not unknown where Priestley's trade mark the "Varnished Board" has been used the second time with inferior goods wrapped upon it.

If afflicted with scalp diseases, hair falling out, and premature baldness, do not use greese or alcoholic preparations, but apply Hall's Hair Renewer.

The Baltic Ship Canal.

Germany does well to make the formal opening of the great Baltic ship canal next June a ceremonial affair of the first magnitude. When ships of the largest burden can pass by a protected short cut of sixty miles' length from the North Sea to the Baltic, the ugliest as well as the oldest problem of North European navigation will have been solved. Incidentally, it will destroy what little remains of Denmark's commercial importance.

Copenhagen has endeavored to forestall disaster by making itself into a free port and spending large sums of money upon dock and harbor improvements, but we fear all in vain. It is incredible that any shipping will hereafter be sent into Danish waters, to round the tiresome Jutland peninsula, and brave the dangers of the treacherous passage of the sound, which can take advantage of the shorter and entirely safe route across Holstein. Where the commercial supremacy of the Baltic will resettle itself when once it quits Copenhagen is not clear. Hamburg is very confident about its own succession to those rich honors. Ancient Lubeck is projecting an Elbe-Trave canal, by means of which she hopes to divert the increased traffic and wealth to herself. The Courland port of Libeau has spent £250,000 in enlarging its facilities for the competition, and even St. Petersburg, which with its new deep-water dock in the Neva, becomes a seaport this year for the first time, has visions of maritime greatness based on this novel rearrangement of trade currents. While these rival claims are as yet in the air, the advantages to British shipping are tangible and immediate. Not least among these advantages may be counted the increased incentives to peace which the financial importance of keeping this great canal open will give to the German Empire.—London Saturday Review.

Cold That Kills and Cold That Cures.

In England severe cold generally kills a good many people; in certain parts of North America cold still more severe puts new life into them. It requires no argumentation to show that there must be a definite reason for this. The chief reason is that English cold is mostly damp, while in North America it is mostly dry. There is the greatest difference in the world between dry air and damp air. The former is usually air pure and simple, possessing a full quantity of oxygen, and often charged highly with ozone. The latter consists of air mixed with the vapor of water. When the former air, fully oxygenated, is breathed, it stimulates more powerfully than champagne. The latter, less oxygenated, and charged with the vapor of water, not only does not stimulate, it depresses.—Public Opinion.

Unnecessary Solicitude.

A Portland boy attended the recent fire at the orphan asylum in that city. Soon after it was extinguished, he was asked: "Where was the fire, Harold?"

"At the orphan asylum," was the reply.

"Is that so?" said the enquirer, in excitement, "Why, it must have been awful!"

"Oh, no," said Harold, "it wasnt very bad. The building wasn't damaged much, and as soon as the fire was discovered they sent the orphans home to their parents, so none of them was hurt."—Kennebec Journal.

A Complex Question.

Son—"And the missionary was eaten by the cannibal! Will the missionary go to heaven?"

Father—"Oh, yes!"

Son—"Will the cannibal?"

Father—"No."

Son—"He'll not! Why, how can the missionary go to heaven if the cannibal doesn't, when the missionary is inside of the cannibal?"—Puck.

Naturally fair complexions would be the rule rather than the exception as unfortunately it is at present, if the ladies would wholly abandon cosmetics, and more generally keep the blood pure and vigorous by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only reliable blood-purifier.

As baldness makes one look prematurely old, so a full head of hair gives to mature life the appearance of youth. To secure this and prevent the former, Ayers's Hair Vigor is confidently recommended. Both ladies and gentlemen perfer it to any other dressing.

Tonka Smoking Mixture is delightfully cool and sweet, try 10 ct. package. Pipe sifter enclosed.

Goldsmith supplied the British Columbia salmon for the Mackenzie Bowell banquet, since then the demand has been great. Try it.

Are you all tired out, do you have tha tired feeling or sick headache? You can be relieved of all these by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

Much of life's misery is due to indigestion; for who can be happy with a pain in his stomach? As a corrective and strengthener of the ailementary organs, Ayer's Pills are invaluable, their use being attended always with marked benefit.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an ag of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of t[illegible] b[illegible] y to which it is applied.

If you once try Carter's Little Liver Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable, small and easy to take, Don't forget this.

L PAPER -

THE DESIGNS of our spring wall papers are beautiful and the colorings exquisite. The effects they produce upon the wall have been studied with intelligent sympathy, and the "long-felt wants" of a few years ago have been provided for with cultivated taste. A judicious employment of any of our papers leaves little to be done in a room—a few ornaments according to the taste or wealth of the occupant are all that is necessary to contribute to its beauty and comfort. Our papers thoroughly represent the standard of the prevailing taste in interior decorations.

FOR SALE

The stallion MORTON, foaled in 1887, dam, Jenny Shafer, sire, Andrews' Clay. Both sire and dam are Hambletonian stock. Jenny Shafer was the mother of some of the fastest horses on the American turf. Her grandsire, Volunteer, was one of the most successful sires that ever lived, being sire of St. Julien, 2.11¼, the best of race horses and the sire of 30 other horses of the 2.30 class. He was sired by Hambletonian. Andrews' Clay was one of the speediest race horses that ever lived and made ¼ over the Goshen track in 32 sec. He is a direct descendant of Henry Clay, Abdallah, and Kentucky Whip. Morton is a dark bay stallion, with 3 white feet, 16 hands, weighs 1,100 pounds. He is of uniform shape, very strong across the loins and back; shows great substance of bone and muscle, with the best of feet and legs, carries a very long handsome mane and tail; has beautiful action, going wide behind and very rapid; has never been trained for speed, but with a little handling should go fast. His disposition and temper are perfect.

Patent Window Sash Adjuster.
THE MODEL VENTILATOR

Now in order to get proper ventilation you must have your window sash adjusted so that you can lower the top sash down, which is the proper place to ventilate your houses from, and also let the foul air out at the same time.

This will keep the air in your house pure and healthy, thus saving sickness and doctor's bills: but raising the bottom sash causes direct draught which is a well known fact to be very injurious to health more particularly in sleeping rooms. VERCHERES TRUE TO LIBERALISM

Sir John Thompson's Brother-in-Law Bite the Dust Despite Tupper's Orations—Ouimet's Sophistry Rejected in Vercheres—Dr. Montague Scores Over McCarthy.

Cayuga, April 18.—The by-election in Haldimand yesterday resulted in the return of Dr. Montague by a majority unprecedented in the history of this constituency. The weather was beautiful and in every way favorable for an election, but the roads throughout the country were in a terrible condition. The Reformers seemed to take little interest in the contest, and the Catholics did not take an active part, but Dr. Montague secured all their votes that were cast. The polling was attended with very little excitement, and in many divisions a comparatively small number of votes were cast. The result in detail:

Majority for Montague, 647.

Dunnville Delighted.

Dunnville, Ont., April 17.—Dunnville citizens are wild with delight over the Hon. Dr. Montague's wonderful victory in Haldimand. Bonfires are burning and flags flying, and everywhere all parties, Reform and Conservative alike, express a feeling of satisfaction at the result. Dr. Montague's organization was simply perfect, and it was never thought here that his election was in doubt.

Former Elections

Haldimand was re-opened by the appointment of Dr. Montague as Secretary of State. Dr. Montague has represented this constituency since 1887, one session excepted. At the general election in that year he was opposed by C. W. Colter (Ref.). The vote stood:

Montague	1746
Colter	1745

A protest was entered, the seat declared vacant by the court and a new election was held Nov. 12, 1887. In this contest the vote was:

Montague	1828
Colter	1811

This election was also declared void and another election was held Jan. 30, 1889, which resulted in Mr. Colter's return, the poll standing:

Colter	1803
Montague	1750

Still another protest was entered, Mr. Colter being unseated and Dr. Montague elected at the bye-election in Feb., 1890, by a majority of 158.

At the general election of 1891 the same candidates were in the field, Dr. Montague's majority over Mr. Colter being 78. The returns were:

Montague	1896
Colter	1818

DOBELL'S MAJORITY SEVEN.

A Recount Will Probably Be Held in Quebec West.

Quebec, April 17.—Mr. R. R. Dobell was elected in Quebec West by 7 majority over Thomas McGreevy, the former member. The bye-election in Quebec West was caused by the death of John Hearn (Con.) who was elected on the resignation of Mr. Thomas McGreevy (Con.), who represented this constituency from Confederation. In 1887 Mr. McGreevy's majority was 46 and in 1891 53.

The candidates were R. R. Dobell, an Independent Conservative, and Thomas McGreevy.

VERCHERES REMAINS LIBERAL

C. A. Geoffrion Returned With a Majority of 157

Vercheres, Que., April 17.—The election for the vacant seat in the Commons to-day was very closely contested and resulted in the return of Mr. C. A. Geoffrion, the Liberal candidate, by 157 majority. The county is sparsely equipped with telegraph facilities, and consequently the returns were difficult to collect.

Following is a detailed report of the polling, giving majorities in the different districts:

Bisaillon's majorities—St. Marie 23, Contrecoeur 16, Beloeil 13, St. Antoine 138, St Julie 26.

Vercheres was rendered vacant by the death of the Hon. Felix Geoffrion (Lib.), who had sat for the constituency since the union with the exception of a period from Dec. 1876 to 1878, when he retired from office owing to serious illness. At the last general election Geoffrion's majority was 168 and at the election in 1888 134.

Mr. Geoffrion, brother of the late member, contested the riding against Mr. Bisaillon, Conservative.

Ovation to Mr Geoffrion.

Montreal, April 18.—Mr. Geoffrion, the new member for Vercheres county, arrived in the city last night and was given a most enthusiastic reception. Thousands of people assembled to welcome him and he was escorted to the committee rooms, where he made a speech, thanking them for their encouragement. Speeches were made by Mr. Tarte and others. The results were received with the most intense excitement.

REFORM VICTORY IN ANTIGONISH.

McIsaac Defeated Chisholm, the Conservative Nominee, by 101.

Halifax, N.S., April 18.—At the by-election yesterday in Antigonish, caused by death of Sir John Thompson, resulted in election of Colin F. McIsaac, Liberal ex-M.L.A., defeating Joseph A. Chisholm, Conservative, barrister.

The following are returns received, but later reports give the total official majority at 114, without giving corrections in these summaries:

Polling Place.	McIsaac.	Chisholm

Cape George (McIsaac 61 maj.)
Morriston	103	79

Linwood (McIsaac 30 maj.)
Upper South River	73	35
Antigonish, South	63	53
Total	1180	1079

Majority for McIsaac, 101.

Antigonish is the Right Hon. Sir John Thompson's old constituency. He represented this riding from 1885 until his death, which caused the vacancy. At the general election in 1891 Sir John's opponent was Angus McGillivray, the vote being:

Sir John Thompson	1346
McGillivray	1119
Majority	227

At the previous election on Feb. 22, 1887, Sir John Thompson's majority was only 40.

The candidates were Mr. Chisholm, a Halifax barrister, and brother-in-law of the late Sir John Thompson, Conservative, against Hon. C. F. McIsaac, who resigned from the Local House to test the constituency in the Liberal interest.

More Quakes in Central Europe.

Vienna, April 17.—Shocks of earthquake were again felt in Laibach last night, doing additional damage to the town, and greatly increasing the existing panic. Most of the people who remained in the town after the previous shocks are now fleeing to the open country, leaving the place almost deserted. Food is very scarce and great distress prevails.

KIEL NAVAL REVIEW.

A Squadron of the American Fleet to Take Part.

Washington, April 17.—The United States is to be represented at the Kiel celebration on June 19, by the finest American fleet that has visited European waters since the civil war, headed by the armored cruiser New York as flagship, and the triple screw flyer Columbia, which will be detached for this purpose from Admiral Meade's fleet when it arrives at Key West next month, with the addition of the San Francisco and Marble Head, now in the Levant. Admiral Kirkland, now in charge of the European station, will command the squadron. The detachment of the New York and Columbia, from the Home Squadron at this juncture, is taken as an additional indication of the confidence of the administration that the United States is in no danger of being involved in any trouble over the affairs of American Republics and that the Cuban and Nicaraguan disturbance will be settled by diplomatic representatives.

New Sulphurous Lake in Italy.

Rome, April 18.—A large area of land, near Leprignano, in the Rome district, has subsided about nine yards. Loud rumblings were heard and water spouted from the earth at the centre of the sunken surface. The flow was so heavy that this afternoon it had made a lake covering 15 acres. The water smells of sulphur and sulphurous gas frequently bubbles to the surface. All the old springs in the neighborhood are impregnated with sulphur, and the new springs which have gushed from the earth since the disturbance are hot and sulphurous. Government engineers and geologists will go to Leprignano to examine the phenomena.

MAY CAUSE A GREATER WAR

Russia Disgruntled at the Eastern Peace Treaty.

A WARNING FROM ST. PETERSBURG

Japan May Not Be Frightened, However, and May Hold the Territory Ceded by China as the Price of Peace Great Britain Not Satisfied

London, April 18.—The Star's despatch from Tien Tsin says an Imperial proclamation has been issued authorizing Li Hung Chang to sign a treaty of peace with Japan guaranteeing the payment of 200,000,000 taels indemnity.

To cede to the Japanese the Island of Formosa and the peninsula of Liao Tung to the fortieth degree of latitude.

To sanction the opening of five new commercial ports, including Pekin.

And to give Japan the power to open cotton factories and other industries in China. The import duties at the open ports are not to exceed 2 per cent.

The Pall Mall Gazette, commenting on the terms of peace between China and Japan, as defined by the Imperial edict just issued in Pekin, says the conditions are better than those mentioned in The Times dispatches yesterday, but the cession of Formosa will surely displease England, while the cession of Port Arthur will be objected to by Russia. "Our Government," The Gazette says, "may safely be depended upon to do nothing, however, unless the other powers take action."

A despatch from Hong Kong says it is expected there that a revolution against the reigning dynasty will be begun on Friday. The leading Chinese of Canton are coming to Hong Kong in large numbers.

Peace ratifications will be exchanged within three weeks, and the armistice has been extended to midnight on May 8.

A Central News despatch from Tokyo says that by the terms of the treaty of peace, Japan is to receive possession of Formosa, the Pescadore Islands, the Peninsula of Liao Tung, from Yin Kow to An Ping, on the Yalu River, and an indemnity of 200,000,000 taels in silver. Several important commercial concessions are also made by China, but these Japan is to share with other nations. No territory is to be occupied by Japan as a temporary guarantee, except, perhaps, Liukung Tao.

The Chinese indemnity to Japan is to be paid in silver in five yearly instalments.

The St. James Gazette says: "If Japan declines to be frightened, Russia may come to the conclusion that she would better not try force. Meanwhile, England is benevolent, and has no feeling of anger toward Japan. The opening of factories in China by Japan does not mean that she will have a monopoly of such industries, as England could also open factories if she chose."

The Russian journals, according to dispatches from St. Petersburg, are more vigorous in their utterances than the English papers, and sound the warning that the signing of such a treaty of peace as indicated by the despatches of the last twenty-four hours will be only a prelude to a wider though unnecessary armed conflict.

The Earl of Kimberley, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, who has been spending the Easter recess in the country, suddenly made his appearance in London this afternoon, and The Globe, on the authority of the Exchange Telegraph Company, says it is understood that his return is connected with the conclusion of peace negotiations between China and Japan, and the situation of the Nicaraguan dispute.

The Standard publishes interviews with a number of merchants in the Eastern trade, all of whom express themselves as pleased with the terms of the settlement between China and Japan. They have no doubts that the conclusion of peace will relieve the stagnation of the Eastern trade, and express the conviction that the opening of cotton factories in China will seriously affect the cotton industries of Lancashire.

Berlin, April 17.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Frankfurter Zeitung telegraphs that the French and Russian Governments are about to convoke a meeting of the powers for the purpose of revising the terms of peace agreed upon by the Chinese and Japanese representatives.

Japan Will Build More Warships.

The Central News says that Japan will place orders in England at once for several warships to be built on the lines suggested by her experience in the war.

A New Power Will Rise in the East.

London, April 18.—The Daily News says: It is evident that Japan necessarily will become the dominant power in China if she supplies the proper leadership. The world will witness the rise of a new power on a colossal scheme. There is no cause for alarm in any case. What is done is done, and virtually nothing can alter it, and nothing ought to. It is a true conquest effected by war. It is a conquest of the right to a market apparently on an enormous scale. There is something positively exhilarating in the thought of China open to the enterprise of the human race. We do not believe English enterprises will suffer. Nothing but our own follies and mistakes will deprive us of the lead throughout the east. The new treaty, in its industrial aspects only, improves our opportunities; in its political issues it may safely be left to take care of itself.

Resented Being Called Wilde's Friend.

Paris, April 17.—In an article in The Figaro, Jules Huret recently spoke of Catulle Mendez, the poet and playwright, as Oscar Wilde's intimate friend. Mendez at once demanded satisfaction for the insinuation, which he found in the term. The duel was fought with swords to-day in the St. Germain Forest. Mendez was wounded in the forearm.

Octogenarians.

Among the people in active life who have passed the eighty-year mark may be mentioned Mr. Gladstone, Pope Leo XIII., Bismarck, Verdi, Prof. Dana, Bessemer, Sir Henry Parkes, Sir James Bacon, the English jurist; William Salmon, of the Royal College of Surgeons, now 105; General George S. Greene, the oldest living West Point graduate, now 93; Neal Dow, the Rev. William H. Furness, Francis William Newman, a brother of Cardinal Newman; James Martineau, ex-Senator Payne, Senator Morrill, ex-Senator Thurman, Harriet Beecher-Stowe, Bishop Clark of Rhode Island; Curtius, the Greek scholar; and Lady Burdett-Coutts. Justice Field, ex-Senator Dawes, Leon Say, Parke Godwin and Russell Sage will be eighty in 1896. In 1897 King Christopher of Denmark, Prof. Mommsen, Sir John Gilbert and Senator John M. Palmer will reach the octogenarian stage. In 1899 Queen Victoria, Julia Ward Howe, Crispi, General Longstreet, John Ruskin, W. W. Story and Bishop Huntington will make up the list of young octogenarians.—New York Tribune.

"C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass.:
"Gentlemen:—I feel that I cannot say enough in favor of Hood's Sarsaparilla. For five years I have been troubled with scrofula in my neck and throat. Several kinds of medicines which I tried did not do me any good, and when I commenced to take Hood's Sarsaparilla there were large bunches on my neck so sore that I could

KNOWLEDGE

Brings comfort and improvement and tends to personal enjoyment when rightly used. The many, who live better than others and enjoy life more, with less expenditure, by more promptly adapting the world's best products to the needs of physical being, will attest the value to health of the pure liquid laxative principles embraced in the remedy, Syrup of Figs.

Its excellence is due to its presenting in the form most acceptable and pleasant to the taste, the refreshing and truly beneficial properties of a perfect laxative; effectually cleansing the system, dispelling colds, headaches and fevers and permanently curing constipation. It has given satisfaction to millions and met with the approval of the medical profession, because it acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels without weakening them and it is perfectly free from every objectionable substance.

Syrup of Figs is for sale by all druggists in 75c. bottles, but it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only, whose name is printed on every package, also the name, Syrup of Figs, and being well informed, you will not accept any substitute if offered.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelle's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

Germany reports 289 instances of suicide among school children during the last six years.

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal."

For Over Fifty Years

AN OLD AND WELL-TRIED REMEDY.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by Druggists in every part of the World. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

She (bitterly)—Before you married me I was an angel. I'll never be that again I suppose. He (sarcastically)—Well, I live in hopes.

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

The Pekin (China) Gazette, a journal that was 200 years old when the Normans conquered England, has the further distinction of having had 1,600 of its editors beheaded.

Beyond Dispute.

There is no better, safer or more pleasant cough remedy made than Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cures Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles.

After la Grippe obstinate coughs, lung trouble, etc., frequently follow. There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time effectual and pleasant, as Milburns Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry and Hypophosphites, which is the largest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. Price 50c. and $1.00 per bottle.

THE BYE-ELECTIONS

The attempt of the Government to draw a herring across the trail and divert the attention of the electorate from the real issues of the Dominion campaign has not met with the success that was anticipated. With the aid it is said of a $10,000 boodle fund Dr. Montague has secured re-election in his old constituency against an outsider. In Antigonish, Sir John Thompson's old constituency, the Liberal candidate Mr. McIsaacs has won by a majority of 114 while in 1891 the late Premier's majority was 227. In Vercheres the Liberals have succeeded in electing Mr. Geoffrion by 224 majority.

In all three constituencies the School Question was the only issue and it was raised by the Government. As their purposes in the Remedial Order was to buy Quebec the result in the Quebec constituency of Vercheres is not encouraging to the continuance of the sectarian cry, especially since Hon. Mr. Ouimet went into the riding with the most rabid of purposes to win at any cost.

Speaking of the Government policy of "exploiting the religious feelings of the Catholic electors in Vercheres and Antigonish the Montreal Herald says:

"If they succeed to-day, they will adopt similar tactics at the general election, where they think they will pay, with results too disastrous to the peace of this nation to be calmly considered. On the other hand, a defeat in these constituencies, or even in one of them, would check this folly, and bring the tariff question once more to the front as the chief issue."

DRILL IN THE SCHOOLS

A bill at present before the United States Senate to make military drill compulsory in the schools is not meeting with universal approval. The Brooklyn Board of Education has past a resolution condeming it and asking their representatives to oppose it. The New York Nation deems it an evidence of a false idea of patriotism and opposes it because, as it says, it "springs from the same senseless and brutal war spirit that is making wreck of so many public reputations and continually threatens to embroil us with other nations. What its promoters really have in mind is, not physical exercise, not parades and displays, but the spreading in childish minds of the idea that fighting is the noblest occupation of man, that we are all the while exposed to insults and aggressions and must be ready to whip all creation on call. Now, the boys have too much of this idea already. It is in their minds that the furibund patriotism of Lodge and Frye finds most admiration—in fact, so far as we have observed, its only admiration. What they need, together with their fellow juveniles in the United States Senate, is, not military drill, but instruction in good manners, in the arts and love of peace and in ambition to make the country decent and habitable instead of feared."

In this there is a good suggestion for many Canadians also. Gymnasiums we believe would afford much more effectual physicial training than drill and certainly through them could be inculcated a much more desirable moral sentiment.

TWO OPERATIONS.

BOTH FAILURES

A Case of Kidney Complaint that Would Not Yield to Surgery or Medicine until B. B. B. Was Tried.

GENTLEMEN,—After having undergone two operations for Kidney Complaint without securing the least relief, and hearing of some remarkable cures made by B. B. B. in our neighborhood, I decided to try it. I was given up by the doctors after the operations failed, and it was providential that I heard of B. B. B. After the use of six bottles I experienced so great relief and so great a change for the better that I felt the good effects would be lasting, as indeed they have been. The seventh bottle perfectly cured me, and I am now stronger and better than I ever was before. People who saw me before I took B. B. B. and who see me now can scarcely believe that I am the same person.

FABIOLA REINHARDT,
Quebec, Quebe

Yellow as a guinea.—The complexion in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick headache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURES which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels thereafter to become regular. High professional sanction has been accorded to it; and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00, Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

If afflicted with scalp diseases, hair falling out, and premature baldness do not use greese or alcoholic preparations, but apply Hall's Hair Renewer.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich every bodily function flags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, or contamination by bile, or other causes, bilious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery,

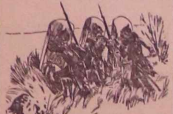
If you once try Carter's Little Liver Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable, small and easy to take. Don't forget this.

SHIELDS TO STOP LEAD.

Devices to Protect the Soldier Against Bullets.

Equipping soldiers in war with shields to stop bullets is not a new idea, in spite of all the recent talk in military circles caused by the experiments with the bullet-proof cloth,

In primitive warfare man's first idea was to offer a protection against the arrows and spear thrusts of the opponents, and for this purpose shields were always carried. Among the ancients these shields were held in great veneration. Among the Franks the ceremony of investing their chiefs consisted of carrying them on their shields. In Lacaedemonia the loss of his shield meant disgrace to the soldier: "Rather be brought home dead on you shield than return without it.



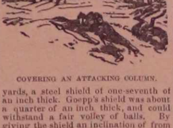
ADVANCING BEHIND THE COVER OF SHIELDS.

The Egyptian shield was a perfectly movable parapet; with the Greek sectum a vertical rampart could be set up or the torture could be built for attacking the walls of besieged cities. They were in all shapes, rectangular, oval, round, flat and curved. Those of Argos were formed like lyres; those of Corinth like ivy leaves.

The material of which they were made were infinite in their variety, from the golden shields of Solomon's guard and those of the Assyrians, of cane covered with the skins of wild animals, to those of the Mexicans, made of tortoise shell,

In modern times the first to experiment with a shield which should protect its wearer against bullets was Capt. Goepp of the French Zouaves, now lieutenant-colonel, who, in 1868-69 made a shield as high as a man and said to be bullet-proof. The Goepp system consisted of covering the front and flanks of an attacking column by a certain number of these shields, which were to be carried by extra-strong men,

Experiments by Greaves have demonstrated that the ball of the Lebel gun can pierce, at the distance of forty yards, a steel shield of one-seventh of an inch thick. Goepp's shield was about a quarter of an inch thick, and could withstand a fair volley of balls. By giving the shield an inclination of from 30 to 35 degrees, the resistance to the balls was materially increased.

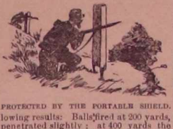


COVERING AN ATTACKING COLUMN.

Each regiment was to be furnished with three hundred shields, which was computed to be enough to cover the front and flanks of three battalions. Wagons were to carry them to within five or six hundred yards of the enemy, near some sheltered spot, where the distribution was to be made to the men detailed to carry them. These shields, being two yards high, were supposed to completely protect the soldiers marching within these living breastworks. The shield recently adopted by the Danish army and constructed by Capt. Von H[illegible]ein, is copied from the Goepp model and has its dimensions and general features.

Tailor Dowe got his idea for the bullet-proof coat from a passage in a history of Charles V. Which told of a draper of Frankfort named Osterdam who in the sixteenth century discovered a felt which was bullet-proof. This felt or cloth was made into plastrons for a body of calvary called the Regiment des Tuchtroeger. After experimenting for a year, Dowe submitted to Col. von Oppen, at Mannheim, what he called his bullet-proof uniform, "kugelsi-chere" uniform.

This material was from two and a quarter to three inches in thickness and possessed a certain amount of suppleness, weighing from six to nine pounds a square yard. The use of these bullet-proof coats as a target, according to the German military journals, gave the following results: Balls fired at 200 yards, penetrated slightly; at 400 yards the projectiles just grazed the nap of the felt. These results caused great excitement in Germany and Dowe was summoned to Berlin to see the Emperor and from him obtained permission to continue his experiments at Spandau on a much greater scale.



PROTECTED BY THE PORTABLE SHIELD.

But they were not so successful in their ultimate results, later reports say. A certain Major Brickman succeeded in perforating these plastrons at a distance of 600 yards several times consecutively, and thus became temporarily famous, though his celebrity was due rather to his powerful gun. However, the question of protecting the soldier is still under consideration in Germany. Recently another inventor Reindel, presented to the Emperor, under the patronage of Gen. Kattenberg-Stachan, formerly Minister of War, a bullet-proof coat which, while having all the powers of resistance of Dowe's plastron, has neither its density, thickness nor weight.

It has been suggested that a shield which shall cover a man entirely, and shall be furnished with two adjustable feet, to be set in the ground during halts and loading, is the only practical shield. It should be high enough to cover a kneeling man, and light enough to permit of his carrying his full quota of ammunition. A very clever model has been made by Lieut. Guy of the French army. It is a shield held upright by two pegs, fastened to the lower edge and firmly planted in the ground. On the right side a slight projection offers a support to the gun, and the kneeling man resting his gun on it also helps to keep the shield in a vertical position. This shield is intended to be carried by the soldier constantly. With fifty of these shields, a company can cover its front. Four companies could easily unite their shields and form a solid marching front. The 200 shields thus massed together would be sufficient to cover the front of a battalion.

With these shields the natural terror experienced by a soldier in the front ranks would disappear, for as he rises from his knees he creates a wall in front of him more solid than the earthworks he has just fire at; and as he feels the shock of the balls against his shield, he realizes how protected he is, for he knows that any one of them was capable of stretching him lifeless on the ground.

MONEY IN PEANUTS.

Ten Million Dollars Spent Annually in America for This "Fruit."

A man incidentally asked a street vender if his peanuts were first-class, and the response to the inquiry was surprising, says The Chicago Tribune.

"No," said the vender. "You do not get first-class peanuts in this country in this way. The best peanuts are used for other purposes. They are made into meal and grits by scientific men, and in Germany they are prepared for sick people in the hospitals. The peanuts you get in candy are the very poorest grade, and some of the 'burnt almonds' you get are nothing more than fourthrate peanuts."

"Where did the peanut come from?"

"From Central and South America. They grow here in long pods, and the pods contain from four to five kernels. They were carried to the old world in the early days, and in the seventeenth century they constituted the chief staple of Africa. You will find if you look it up that the slave dealers of Africa in those days used to load their ships with peanuts to be used as food for their human cargoes. The negroes who were imported from Africa to this country brought over the peanut and they were scattered and first grew in Virginia. And now this country is raising the crop, and, owing to American shrewdness, the nut is ground and used for various purposes, and shipped all over the world.

"I reckon you know," the vender continued, "that peanuts in certain conditions are more nutritious than beef. When specially prepared they rank with beans and peas. The peanut is said to contain 29 per cent. of protein and 49 per cent. of fat. What is known as peanut meal contains 52 per cent. of portein and 8 per cent of fat. It is cheapest of all food materials."

In 1861 and 1865 peanut oil was manufactured largely in four southern States, and was employed as a substitute for olive oil. In fact, one druggist admitted, some of the "olive oil" now sold in this country is nothing more than peanut oil. Nearly all of the olive oil sold in the United States is mixed with part of the peanut. Peanuts furnish from 30 to 50 per cent of the weight of their kernels in oil. Sometimes peanut oil is used for lighting, and again it is used to advantage in the making of soap, and as a lubricant in machine shops.

The American peanut is larger and better than any other, but it does not contain so much oil as the African nut. The "cake" which is left after extracting the oil makes excellent feed for cattle, and is used very largely for that purpose in Germany, where it sells for $20 to $23 a ton. This country owes to Germany the suggestion it has received in relation to the edible qualities of peanuts, and the department of agriculture is now investigating the method of Germany in the way in which that country has handled the nut, and the result is to be published by the department for the benefit of the farmers.

The United States now produces 4,000,000 bushels of peanuts annually, or 8,000,000 pounds. The total world's supply amounts to about 600,000,000 pounds. The exportation from Africa and India to Europe during the last year amounted to nearly 400,000,000 pounds. Of this quantity 222,000,000 pounds were delivered at the port of Marseilles, France, the bulk of it being pressed for oil.

It is estimated that $10,000,000 worth of peanuts are eaten every year in the United States, and most of the quantity, it is said, is consumed between meals and at odd times.

Mrs. Keeley and the Queen.

An interesting incident took place at Buckingham palace last week during her Majesty's stay in the metropolis. Some time ago the Queen, who always shows the greatest interest in the drama, and in the actors and actresses who have performed in her presence, enquired after Mrs. Keeley, and was informed that she was well and in her 90th year. The Queen expressed a wish to see her, and Col. Collins arranged for Mrs. Keeley to have the honor of being received at Buckingham palace the afternoon of the 6th ult., when she was presented to her Majesty, to the Empress Frederick, and to Princess Louise. The welcome given to the gifted lady, who so wonderfully preserves her health, intelligence and vivacity, was most cordial, and the Queen was pleased to call to mind several interesting incidents of the past, and to refer in truly flattering terms to the impression made upon her mind by the acting in former days of Mrs. Keeley. The Empress Frederick also reminded the aged actress of performances witnessed many years ago in which she had interpreted the principal parts. Princess Louise also appeared deeply interested in the visitor. In Mrs. Keeley's long life there have been many memorable incidents. There could never have been one more indicative of the perfect tact and kindness of the Queen than the interview accorded to the universally respected actress by one who had known her from the early days of her remarkable career.—London Queen.

Likes the Word "Madam."

Even when the street car conductor cautions us, "Don't get off, lady, till the car stops," or the cash-girl wails at us, 'Here's your change, lady," and we feel half impatient and half amused, we hardly know why, even then we do realize, I think, and appreciate, that it is meant courteously. "Woman, here's your change," would be distinctly unpleasant, even though strictly true, and not meant to be impolite.

There is, however, another term which is coming more and more into use, which saves us either of these extremes. I mean the old, dignified, noncommittal word, "madam." A conventional term of address," the dictionary declares it to be, "to women of any degree."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Literature and Politics.

One of the advantages which England as a nation has over the United States is the comparative ease with which public opinion is concentrated upon the great issues of the day. This often makes Parliament a much more efficient body and more truly democratic than Congress. The reason lies, in part at least, in the very smallness of Great Britain geographically. It has only one centre, London, and is more homogeneous in population than this country can ever hope to be. It is easier to get a better class of representatives in England. There are many able men in Congress. But how rarely do we hear of a Congressman as ever having made any name outside the walls of the Capitol? In England many of the leading scholars and literary men are always to be found in Parliament; and, what is more, they do not cease their literary labors because they are for the time being politicians. Gladstone has kept up his literary activity throughout his political life. Morley and Bryce and Rosebery and many others are authors of distinction as well as leaders of politics. We hope the time will come when our own lawmakers, many of them, be known as something more than politicians—men of broad culture and national influence outside the limits of their own party and beyond the walls of Congress.—Boston Standard.

D M WATERS

ENGINES AND DRIVERS.

The Peculiarities of Various Locomotives as Shown in Their Runs.

It takes about an hour to get steam enough on an ordinary locomotive engine to start it, from cold water. It is a familiar fact that the water in the boilers of steam fire engines in cities is kept hot while the engine is standing in the house by a pipe connection with a boiler in the cellar underneath; when the engine starts its own fire is lighted. Locomotive engines that are running regularly stand in the round house in the intervals between runs with their fires banked. The fires are kept cleaned, but they may not be hauled for weeks. The practice varies somewhat in this respect. On some roads fires are hauled, once a week, on other roads they are kept up in engines for three or four weeks or more continuously.

A locomotive engineer on one of the fastest runs out of New York says that he has never seen an engine that would run as fast as he would like to ride. No apprehension apparently is felt by the engineer of a fast engine. Calmness is one of the most noticeable traits; and if he worries at all it is because he has got a hot box, or something has happened so that he may not be able to make the time, and not because he is going through the air at fifty, sixty, seventy miles an hour. But it should be understood that none but a man of perfect nerve is likely to reach the footboard of a fast engine.

There is not a vast difference between running at night and at day. Signal lights at night are plainer and can be seen at a much greater distance than day signals. The engineer must, of course, keep constantly in mind where he is, but he comes to know the country just as a pilot knows his landmarks in the dark, and he has this advantage of the pilot that he can't very well get out of the channel. Most engineers prefer day runs, because it seems more natural to work in the daytime, and it is pleasanter.

Almost all locomotive engineers prefer a fast run to a slow one. The fast trains are the blue ribbons of the road. Aside from the honor of running a fast train, there is a very substantial advantage in the hours. If an engineer simply stepped into his cab in the station and stepped out again on his return, almost any run might do well enough, but he doesn't do that; he goes to the round house before train time and looks over the engine, and sees that it is in condition and properly supplied for the run and in every way ready, and he runs the engine to the station. All this takes time. On his return he runs the engine to the roundhouse; this takes time, too, though not so much as the time spent before the run; but together these periods add materially to the length of the engineer's hours. Taking these duties into account, the great advantages of a fast run are manifest; the shorter the time spent on the road the shorter the total time.

There is a common impression that no two locomotive engines work just alike, even though made from the same patterns. A locomotive engineer of long experience says that the impression is correct. He says by way of illustration, that two high-grade watches of the same pattern, and supposed to be just alike, may not work the same way. One may not vary half a minute in six months, and so be, practically, a perfect timekeeper, while the other may vary a minute in a month. It is so with engines; they do not work just alike. One may steam and run better than the other. The slightest variation in finish or adjustment might be sufficient to cause this. When the new engine has been run a year or so it goes to the shop to be overhauled. With it goes a report of the engineer who has run it on the engine's characteristics and performance. If the engine has developed any defects they can usually be remedied at this overhauling, and it may be that the engine comes out on the road again as smart as any of them.—New York Sun.

Pretty Girl's Not Wanted.

The secretary of a large eastern insurance company decided a short time since that it would be better for his office work to introduce half a dozen or more women as typewriters, operators, and assistant bookkeepers. He had noted that of the feminine employes in his office the pretty ones were the least effective and attracted the the most attention, to the detriment of the work of the other clerks. So he decided to engage only women who were of mature years and experienced in office work. First he advertised, stating that applicants should give age and number of years' experience. He did not succeed in getting a single satisfactory reply. Then he went to a well-known business college and told the manager that he did not suppose he would have any trouble in aiding him, as he did not want a young or attractive-looking woman.

The manager listened to him while he explained his wants, and then, going to a desk, took out a file of letters with a smile and laid them before his visitor. There were upwards of half a hundred applications from banks and commercial institutions, and every one of them, without a single exception, asked for a woman of mature age. The manager said that it was absolutely impossible to supply the demand for employees of the description that business men now demanded, but he had rafts of pretty girls at all times who were applicants.—Philadelphia Press.

Submarine Volcano.

The French Geographical Society has received from General Venukoff a communication describing a submarine volcano, which is under survey by the officers of the Russian dispatch vessel Lotzman. The volcano declared itself last summer, and, although under sea water level in the Caspian, projected a large quantity of mud and debris into the air. As a result of the survey, the position of the volcano has been determined as 38 degrees, 13 minutes, 30 second north latitude and 52 degrees, 37 minutes east longitude from Greenwich meridian, and above 24 miles from shore. The diameter of its crater is less than 20 feet, and at 200 fathoms from its centre the depth of water is about eight fathoms, while at a distance of one mile the sea has its normal depth.

The White Ants of India.

"It is a remarkable fact, but one never sees wooden telegraph poles in India," said a well-known railroad man yesterday. "The white ants are so numerous in India that they would eat a telegraph pole in one night. On that account stone is used. The stone piles are from six to eight feet high. For ties inverted iron boxes are used, and, strange to say, they are so tempered that they do not warp in hot weather."

The Queen's Speech Deals With Generalities.

NO LEGISLATION FORESHADOWED

A Statement of What Has Been Done During Recess Constitutes the Bulk of the Speech—Mr. Laurier Too Ill to Attend the State Dinner

Ottawa, Ont., April 18.—There was decidedly sessional aspect about the Capital last night. What with the arrival of members and local excitement about the by-elections, the rotunda of the Russell House presented a scene of great animation for several hours last evening. As usual, members from distant constituencies are the first to arrive. Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Manitoba, the Territories and British Columbia are all well represented.

It is notable that leading Reformers are on the ground sooner than Conservatives, Mr. Laurier arrived two days ago, and to-day he was joined by Mr. Mills, Mr. Edgar, Major Sutherland, George Casey, John Charlton and other well-known men on the front Opposition benches. It is surmised that they are here to devise a line of action in reference to the address. It is fully expected that an amendment will emanate from the Opposition benches.

The Speech from the Throne was finally approved by His Excellency yesterday. The Governor-General in his address to the two Houses makes a feeling reference to the sudden and lamented death of Sir John Thompson and to the grevious loss Canada thereby sustained. It would be fitting on His Excellency's part to mention the deep sympathy felt by the Queen and the manifestations of sorrow with which the intelligence of the late Premier's death was received throughout the empire.

Mail advices were received by the Government to-day from Australia in reference to the Pacific cable. They come from both official and private sources, and evidence that in all parts of the Australasian colonies the importance of the alternative line of communication is fully recognized and that the establishment of a line as suggested by Canada is leading to a favorable consideration. Some of the governments have already affirmed the principle of state ownership and no valid objection is made to the project in any other colonies. Hopes are expressed that the Home Government will now take speedy action in the direction of appointing a joint commission for the purpose of working out the details such as was suggested by Canada some weeks ago.

The report of A. P. Low of the Geological Survey on his explorations in the great Labrador peninsula was published to-day. He and his colleagues in two years traveled 5660 miles in Labrador. Mr. Low makes mention of numerous belts of good commercial timber, mostly spruce, balsam, poplar and white birch. All lakes and rivers of the interior were found well stocked with fish, those of the eastern watershed especially so. Lake trout, often of large size, brook trout up to seven pounds weight, large white-fish, pike, landlocked salmon and two kinds of sucker were all taken almost everywhere. The most important geological information obtained is the discovery of a great and hitherto unknown area of cambrian rocks, extending north-west from north latitude 53 degrees beyond the west side of Ungava Bay. These rocks are made up of a great thickness of conglomerate, sandstones, slates, shales and limestone, together with intrusive igeous rocks. Their chief economic value is due to the immense amount of bedded iron ore found along with them. The ores are chiefly specular and red hematite, with beds of siderite or carbonate of iron. Thick beds of fine ore, associated with jasper, were met with in many places, both on the Ungava adn Hamilton Rovers, and the amount seen runs up into millions of tons. Owing to their distance from the seaboard these ores are at present of little value, but the time may come when they will add greatly to the wealth of the country.

Mr. Schreiber, Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals, visited Cornwall Canal yesterday, where Messrs. Davis & Sons have a large number of men at work. Mr. Schreiber is well pleased with the energy which the contractors are displaying, and says they are putting in excellent work.

Hon. G. E. Foster, in his capacity as leader, will be found occupying the seat in the Commons for so many years held by Sir John Macdonald, and since 1891 by Sir John Thompson.

The Trade and Commerce Department to-day received advices from Commissioner Larke in Australia. Judging from reports to hand, Mr. Larke is beginning to feel at home in Sydney, and is doing good work. He says that he is receiving many inquiries respecting prospective trade with Canada, while at the same time many Canadian exporters are communicating with him as to the outlook for Canadian trade in Australia.

The state dinner took place at Government House this evening. Mr. Laurier, on the advice of his medical attendant, had to refrain from being present.

The Marine Department has received from the Italian Government a medal and certificate for presentation to Capt. D. Smith of ship Kate F Troop, of St. John, in recognition of humane services in rescuing the crew of an Italian vessel, shipwrecked in the Atlantic Ocean last fall.

The Iguana.

The iguana is a very little fellow, who belongs, like his cousins, the gecko and the chameleon, to a very big family. This family includes such large animals as alligators, crocodiles, lizards and many other strange creatures. The iguana has a long, slender body, tapering in a curious way into a point. He has a queer crest running from his head to the end of his tail, and his body is covered with small scales. A soft pouch or bag hangs from below his chin, but for what purpose it is used naturalists seem to be divided in opinion. Some iguanas live in trees, others dig themselves holes in the ground, and some varieties live upon the seashore and are quite fond of swimming about in the water. The eggs of the iguana are usually laid in the sand and are not hard like a hen's egg, but soft, like leather, and yellow in color. The iguana's tail, like that of most of his cousins, is very useful to him. He uses it for a weapon, slapping and inflicting severe wounds upon his enemies by means of its sharp notches. In the water he uses his tail like a snake, drawing his legs closely to his side and projecting himself along by means of the tails alone. The iguana is a fierce-looking little reptile when attacked. He raises himself upon his forelegs, looking very savage, but he is not really brave, and if you should come across an iguana nodding his head at you and trying to frighten you to death by wagging his tail just stamp your foot at him and he will quickly lower his crest and scurry off into his hole.—New York World.

Swore Himself In.

In his reminiscences of the Crimea 1854, Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood tells a story of a fighting general who during a conflict was seen wherever bullets fell most thickly. When not visible his voice was heard encouraging his men with "a vocabulary borrowed from the army in Flanders," which Sir Evelyn says will not bear repetition. "Years after he was appointed to the Aldershot command and Her Majesty happened to ask, 'Has the new general yet taken up his command?' 'Yes, Your Majesty,' was the reply, 'he swore himself in yesterday.'"

MUST SUPPORT SEPARATE SCHOOLS

"A Catholic," Says Archbishop Langevin, "Who Does Not Follow the Hierarchy Is No More a Catholic"

Winnipeg, Man., April 18.—Since the beginning of the Catholic schools struggle in this country, nothing has created a greater sensation than the announcement of the Catholic archbishop that Catholics who henceforth lend their aid and influence to those who would abolish Catholic parochial schools will be excommunicated.

Many prominent Catholics have expressed themselves in favor of a National school system, and among these the announcement has created consternation.

At first it was thought to be simply a move on the part of Archbishop Langevin, made without authority, but yesterday it was learned positively that Archbishop Langevin's action is based on authority received direct from Rome. He received a papal encyclical on the question last week.

The encyclical points out that the cases in the United States are not analogous with those in Canada, and particularly in Manitoba. It states that Catholic schools were guaranteed by treaty and by the constitution, while no such guarantee was given in the United States.

It declares that the parochial schools belong to Manitoba Catholics by right of treaty, and it affirms that Catholics who continue to lend aid to those who would take away those rights shall not be received into communion with the church.

Archbishop Langevin, in speaking of the matter, was most emphatic. These were his words: "The hierarchy of the Catholic Church has spoken, and all those who do not follow the hierarchy are not Catholics. I declare, as a bishop, and I say it with plain authority, that a Catholic who does not follow the hierarchy on the school question is no more a Catholic."

It is reported that a meeting of Roman Catholic dignitaries will shortly be held in New York city to discuss and take some action in the Manitoba school question.

The church in Manitoba is expecting some aid from the United States, and although Mgr. Satolli's jurisdiction does not extend to Manitoba, it is hoped by Catholics here that he will throw his influence in their behalf.

FOR DEFRAUDING HIS CREDITORS

Henry Cohen Committed for Trial on a Serious Charge—$1000 in Cash Mysteriously Turns Up.

Toronto, April 18.—Henry Cohen, a furniture dealer, charged with defrauding sundry manufacturers, had a preliminary hearing at the Police Court yesterday. Assignee W. A. Campbell produced the assignment dated April 5 last, showing liabilities of $6514 and nominal assets of $4000. All the assignee received, however, was some furniture and crockery and a small interest in real estate, the latter of which turned out worthless. Cohen said this was all he had. A sister-in-law of Cohen named Higgins produced $1000 in bills, which were handed over to the County Crown Attorney. She explained that it belonged to Cohen and had been found in Cohen's house by his wife. The total sum found was $1082.

The Crown claimed that prior to his assignment Cohen drew $5000 from the western branch of the Ontario Bank and that this money has not been accounted for. It is also alleged that he sent nearly all his stock to auction rooms and had it disposed of in order to defraud his creditors.

Among the furniture men who have claims against Cohen are the following: J. Jackson, $135; Riches Bros., $75; John Macdonald & Co., $315.45; Gowans, Kent & Co., $233; Simpson & Co., Berlin, $254.50; J. Krauer & Co., Berlin, $89.35; Canada Wire Mattress Co., Toronto Junction, $28.20; Gibbard Furniture Co., Napanee, $234; Button & Fessant, Wingham, $118.56; E. F. R. Zoellner, Mount Forest, $242.50; Siemon & Hill, Wiarton, $80.35; Lewis Hahn, New Hamburg, $25; King Bros. & Co., Chesley, $243.55; McTavish & Co., Wingham, $200; London Furniture Co., London, $200; Ellis Furniture Co., Ingersoll, $200. Total $2675.

The Commercial Hotel and Adjoining Buildings in Ashes.

Seaforth, April 18.—Early yesterday morning fire broke out in the large frame building in the rear of the Commercial Hotel, occupied as a billiard, pool and sample rooms in connection with the hotel. The fire quickly spread to the hotel building and both were totally destroyed. Logan & Co., private bankers, occupied a part of the hotel building. The Bank of Commerce building next on the south side also suffered damage to the extent of $1500, covered by insurance. The hotel and frame buildings were owned by Alex. Davidson, Seaforth. Loss on billiard, pool tables, etc., $1500, insurance $900 in Phoenix of London, Eng. Loss on hotel building $8000, insurance $6000, in the Western. William Bishop, tenant of hotel, loss on furniture, etc., $3000, insurance $2000 in Phoenix.

U S IGNORANCE OF DIPLOMACY.

When Britain Has Trouble With South America the Monroe Doctrine Won't Figure.

London, April 18.—The St. James Gazette, commenting upon the latest developments in the dispute between Great Britain and Nicaragua, says: "There is wonderful ignorance of diplomacy upon the part of the American journalists. Why should we want to bombard Greytown? If Nicaragua has been so foolish as to refuse to pay the indemnity which, with the knowledge of the United States, we demanded, we shall take such steps as the American Government was perfectly aware at the time of asking. The Monroe doctrine has been a doctrine for 62 years, and has not been acted upon yet. When Great Britain has serious differences to settle with South American republics, it will not be prevented from doing so by anything but settled international law."

Men's Dress.

The London Lancet finds the question of rational dress for men one that is almost as much worth inquiring into as that of the same for women. "Men," says that journal, "have for ages scoffed at women for the vagaries and flights of fancy displayed in their dress, but there is really little to choose between the sexes except in the great matter of the pocket, for, except a professional thief, no mortal being, even the owner, can get at a woman's pocket."

Some of the evils of men's dress are then pointed out, notably the exposure of the lungs, the most susceptible to injury from cold of any organ of the body. The animal creation is cited to show that nature left to herself takes care of this delicate organ, the polar bear having its thick coating of fur, the whale its blubber, and birds their coating of feathers, with warm underdown—only man showing a foolish disregard for the needs for protection. The fashionable waistcoat is by no means suitable wear. Bad as is man's day dress, however, it is when he gets into his evening clothes that he betrays the greatest want of sense and forethought. "During the day, when he is going about, he wears thick woollen clothes, with stout boots and warm socks. At night he puts on very thin clothes, a waistcoat which is of no protective value whatever, very thin shoes, possibly silk stockings, relinquishes his gaiters, and goes out in the open air thus insufficiently protected on his way to theatre, dinner or ball, congratulating himself," says the Lancet, "that he is not as those poor silly women, who go about with the upper part of their chests bare."—New York Times.

"Girls, This Is Rudyard Kipling."

Rudyard Kipling's somewhat saturnine reputation in Brattleboro society is offset by the description of one who saw him at a little hotel in Gloucester last summer. There he showed himself most modest, ingenuous and companionable. He read some unpublished jungle stories to the guests, and not only entertained, but gave himself up agreeably to entertainment. He was especially pleased by the performances in negro dialect of a Southern girl. One song, an almost incommunicable jargon, he got her to repeat; and the next day, when every one else had quite forgotten it, he surprised the company by singing the ditty from beginning to end, with a sly twinkle and the drollest imitation.

Here is a story he told of himself: "One day I was sitting in my bachelor study in London when suddenly a gentleman appeared at the door unannounced, followed by two young ladies. 'Is this Rudyard Kipling?' inquired the gentleman. 'Yes,' I answered. I turned around. 'Girls, this is Rudyard Kipling.' 'And this is where you write?' he continued. 'Yes,' I replied. 'Girls, this is where he writes.' And before I had time to offer them tea," said Mr. Kipling, "they were gone, girls and all. I suppose they had all literary London to do in that way."—The Bookman.

No Chance for Him.

The visitor came into the office of a country paper in the distillery district of Kentucky with a notice in his hand.

"I want to put an advertisement in the paper," he said.

"Not any more, I reckon, than I want you to put it in," responded the editor, with editoral earnestness not unusual on such occasions. "What is it?"

"Some fellow in Missouri sends it to me. He wants to exchange a farm he owns out there for whisky."

"Well, of course," sighed the editor, "well print it; but it won't do any good. We have too many people right here around us who are trying to exchange there farms for whisky, and on the installment plan, too.—Detroit Free Press.

Manuel Garcia was a curious character," said a Cuban gentleman in speaking of the reported death of that revolutionist. "He was more like a character in a novel than a man living in the nineteenth century. His home was the mountains, and he led a regular bandit's life, every now and then holding up Spandiards on the road or carrying off one of them and holding him for ransom. He would write to a Spanish planter, 'Send me $5,000 or I shall burn your house,' and if the money was not forthcoming he wauld carry his threat into execution. He would even write to Government officials, signing himself 'King of the Mountains,' and demanding tribute. He never preyed on the native Cubans, only on the Spaniards, and gave most of his money to the revolutionary party to purchase arms."

Kingston not yet Able to Close With the Iron Men—Free Water Would Cost $10,000

(The Whig.)

H. G. Hamilton, said, in reply to a letter in Monday night's Whig, from G. Y. Chown, that he referred to the wrong Hamilton. The speaker is well acquainted with the iron business, and understands its details thoroughly. The company has all the information it requires in respect to the value of iron ore found in this district, but it would like to know the quantity of ore in sight. The company's engineer has visited every blast furnace in the United States that has used Canadian ore and knows exactly how valuable it is for making iron and steel. The reports from these sources vary greatly. Mr. Hamilton brought over a photograph of a blast furnace similar to the one the company intends to erect here if the negotiations are satisfactorily carried out. He says he and his companies will not wait on the committee much longer to come to a decision for the company has cash bond offers from other places.

It was thought that the blast furnace negotiations would have been completed last evening but this could not be accomplished. The basis of agreement at first assented to has been materially changed. This had to be done because the committee was groping in the dark. When the company was promised free water it was not intended that the city would pump all the water likely to be used at the works The consuption would be so great that an entirely new plant would have to be purchased. The present machinery would not be equal to the work. The cost of supplying the water for the furnace might be between $7,000 and $10,000 annually. The selection of a site is another obstacle in the way of completing the details of the scheme. The engineer of the company reports that the water in Cataraqui Bay, near the proposed site, is not deep enough to let in vessels, and will have to be dredged if the works are erected. While the committee will recommend the purchase of the site, it will not consent to any extra expense, such as dredging the bay. Another matter that will have to be made plain to the members is that there will be sufficient market in Canada for the output of a blast furnace and steel plant. The company promise full statistics on this matter.

The members of the committee will not consent to be blamed for delay in the negotiations. They claim that the company has kept the proceedings back. Its representatives agreed to give plans and specifications, and when they properly understood the proposition they said it would not be possible to furnish the plans and specificatians of their buildings and machinery, but would give rough sketches.

The committeemen will not submit a by-law for the consideration of the electors until all the details are arranged to the satisfaction of each member of the committee.

The negotiations were to have come to an end to-day when the representatives of the company were to say what they would say in lieu of free water and give particulars as to when a site should be designated. The delegates will leave for home to-morrow morning and will be in a position to report to the company whether the deal will go on, or whether it has been cancelled.

The civic committee has agreed to accept a bond of $250,000 in lieu of the names of the Ontario iron and steel company.

To day Mr. Canfield said he was sure a decision would be arrived at this evening as to the terms of agreement between the Ontario steel company and the committee. Said the speaker: "If the committee knew as much about the scheme as the company does the members would not hesitate long in coming to a decision. If they knew what the company will do for the city if the deal was closed there would be no suspicion as to its financial standing. The members of the company know something about the iron business, and they know that in future iron and steel plants on the lake front will take trade. If the Ontario iron and steel company were offered a site forty miles from the water front and a bonus of one million dollars, the offer would be refused."

To-day Walter Kennedy, the company's engineer, visited some of the iron ore on the line of the K. & P RR. with a view to finding out if there was plenty ore for a blast furnace and for other information.

If the eastern site is chosen the government will dredge the bay.

Some property owners of Cataraqui ward had a little caucus last night to talk over the smelting works scheme. One of the men said this morning that unless the site was chosen before the by-law went to the people he would use his influence against it.

GENTLEMEN,—In the spring of 1891 I got a bottle of B. B. B. for my mother, who had been troubled with Sick Headache. I got it from Mr. H. Paxton Baird, of Woodstock, N. She used it for three months and has had no headache since. We are sure it was B. B. B. cured her as she took no other medicine.

THE GOVERNOR'S SPEECH

THE OLD STORY OF A SHORT REVENUE AND INTENDED ECONOMY.

A Brief Government Programme — The School Bill Referred to—The Government Hook Baited With Inter-Colonial Trade.

OTTAWA, April 18th.

To-day at three o'clock p. m. His Excellency the Governor-General proceeded in state to the chamber of the senate in the parliament building and took his seat upon the throne. Three members of the Senate being assembled His Excellency was pleased to commend the attention of the House of Commons and that house being present His Excellency was pleased to open the fifth session of the seventh parliament of the Dominion of Canada with the following speech:

HON. GENTLEMEN OF THE SENATE, GENTLEMEN OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS:

It is with much satisfaction that I again have recourse to your advice and assistance in the administration of the affairs of the Dominion.

By the sudden and lamented death of the late Right Hon. Sir John Thompson, Canada has sustained a grevious loss. The deep and heartfelt sympathy expressed by her most Gracious Majesty the Queen, and the manifestations of sorrow with which the distressing intelligence was received throughout the Empire as well as tokens of esteem and respect everywhere paid to the memory of the deceased statesman have been gratefully appreciated by the people of Canada. Satisfactory assurances have been received from Her Majesty's Government respecting the interpretation of certain clauses in the treaty of commerce with France. Ratifications will be exchanged as soon as necessary legislation has been passed. The recent action of the Imperial Parliament enabling the various Australian governments to enter into preferential trade relations with the other self-governing colonies of the Empire, affords gratifying proofs that the suggestions of the colonial conference are being favorably entertained by Her Majesty's Government.

In conformity with a recent judgment of the Lords of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council to the effect that the dissident minority of the people of Manitoba have a constitutional right of appeal to the Governor-General in Council against certain acts passed by the Legislature of the Province of Manitoba in relation to the subject of education I have heard in council the appeal and my decision thereon has been communicated to the legislature of the said province. The papers on the subject will be laid before you.

The depression in trade which has prevailed throughout the world for the past few years has made itself felt in Canada but fortunately to a less degree than in most other countries. Although this has not resulted in any considerable decrease in the volume of our foreign trade, yet owing to low prices and recent reductions in and removal of taxation, it has been followed by a serious decrease in revenue derived from customs and excise. In order to produce equilibrium between revenue and expenditure for the coming year it will be necessary to observe the greatest possible economy in the appropriations for the various branches of the public service.

During the period that has elapsed since the last session of Parliament I have had an opportunity of visiting many portions of the Dominion, including the Maritime Provinces and Manitoba, the North-West Territory and British Columbia. Throughout these tours I have been impressed and gratified by manifestations of an abounding loyalty and public spirit; and notwithstanding the phase of trade in the depression already referred to, I observed everywhere unmistakeable signs of that confident hopefulness in the future, based on a thorough belief in the greatness of the resources of Canada, which is one of the characteristics of her people and which furnishes a good augury and pledge of further development and progress.

The government of New Foundland having intimated its desire to renew negotiations looking to the admission of that colony into the Dominion of Canada, a sub-committee of my advisers have recently met in conference a delegation from the Island Government and discussed with them the terms of union. It will be a subject of general congratulation if the negotiations now pending result in the corporation of Her Majesty's oldest colonial possession into the Canadian confederation.

Measures relating to bankruptcy and insolvency and joint stock companys will be laid before you. You will also be asked to consider certain amendments to the Insurance Act, to the act respecting Dominion notes to the Dominion Lands Act, to the Indian Act, to the Northwest Territories Representation Act, as also a bill respecting the land subsidy of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons; I have directed that the accounts of the past year shall be laid before you. The estimates for the ensuing year will also be presented. They have been framed with every regard to economy compatible with the efficiency of the public service.

Honorable gentlemen of the senate, gentlemen of the House of Commons, I now leave you to the despatch of the important duties devolving upon you, with an earnest prayer that guided by the spirit of wisdom and patriotism your deliberations may under the divine blessing conduce to the unity and well-being of Canada.

FREE SCHOOL BOOKS

Labor Organizations Want the State to Furnish Them.

(K. of L. Journal.)

The various Knights of Labor Assemblies and Trade Unions of New York are petitioning the Legislature to secure the enactment of a law that will secure the school children free text books furnished by the State

The Central Labor Union of Rochester has passed the following resolution, and the Central Labor Union of New York and Brooklyn are also considering it:

Whereas the Legislature of the State of New York has enacted a law, known as the Compulsory Education Law, whereby all parents are required to send their children to school until they are 16 years of age thereby depriving the parents of the services and assistance of their children during the greater portion of their minority; and whereas, the State confessedly so disposes of the time of the children for its own benefit and well-being, and not for the benefit of the parents as distinguished from the other members of the Commonwealth Therefore be it

Resolved, That we, the Central Labor Union of Rochester, N. Y., believe it to be the duty of the State to furnish free to all the pupils in the public schools of the State, for their use, under such rules and regulations as the proper authorities may prescribe, all text-books that may be required to be used therein; and we hereby request our State Senator and Assemblyman to use all honorable means to secure the enactment of a law of the Legislature for that purpose.

An Interesting Suit by Which a Widow got her Rights

The Chancery Court now sitting before Mr. Justice Robertson has been engaged up to last evening with the case of Robertson v Fuller and it has created some interest, chiefly through the criticisms of his Lordship upon some of the defendants.

Mrs. Robertson, the plaintiff, is the widow of the late Alex Robertson and at his death was left $2000 with which to pay his debts. These amounted to more than $2000, and Mrs. Robertson was doing her best to pay every liability. The defendants in the suit were W. D. Fuller his brother Charles, and W. P. McMahon The claim was for the amount of a note given by Mrs. Robertson to settle an old account of her late husband's. After paying the note she found out the account had been previously settled by her husband, and she forthwith entered suit for the amount.

Mr. McMahon acted as solicitor for Fuller and that was how he got into it. The evidence went to show that Fuller had held a note of Robertson's for $200 and sued for it in the division court. Afterwards he agreed to settle at 25 per cent, and the court fees, so Robertson gave a note for $56. W. D. Fuller said that after carrying the note for a long time and not getting anything on it gave it back to Robertson. The judge said in delivering his judgment that in all his experience of forty odd years at the bar and eight years on the bench this was the first time he had heard of a note being given up because it was not paid He thought it much more likely that the note had been paid.

After Robertson's death Fuller got the old note from the Clerk of the Division Court and instructed McMahon to collect it. The solicitor stated that Mrs. Robertson was an old friend and he would not sue her for it, but he got from her a note and $40 in cash. The note he gave to Fuller the money he kept. It was with regard to this deal that his Lordship animadverted upon Mr. McMahon's action in the case. He viewed rather sarcastically Mr. McMahon's friendship and said that he deemed it a solicitor's duty when dealing with anyone not initiated but especially a widow to ask them to secure another solicitor to look after their interests. He intimated too that Mr. McMahon should have known that the transaction was not square. He delivered judgment in favor of Mrs. Robertson for $268 the full amount and costs of suit. Mr. Clute, Q. C., acted for Mrs. Robertson, Mr Porter for W. D Fuller and Mr. Masson for W. P. McMahon.

This morning the court is engaged with an action brought by W. P. McMahon against Miss Catharine Power and Mrs. Margaret Power to set aside as illegal the conveyance of certain property by Miss Catharine Power to her niece Margaret. The plaintiff himself drew up the papers. The suit has been settled by a consent judgment for the defendant, each side to pay their own cost.

AN ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING

Of The Belleville Cricket Club Last Night in the Quinte Hotel

A large and enthusiastic meeting of the Cricket Club was held at the Quinte Hotel last night, with Mr. Phillips in the chair. Last year's grounds are to be improved, the crease to be widened, etc. and cricketers expect to be playing before many weeks are over. It was decided that the club should play a large number of local matches, once a week at least, before attempting to compete with many outside teams. Reference was made to the late Mr. George Tudhope, who did so much last year in the capacity of manager to promote the interests of the club and a motion of condolence was passed. The club starts on a better basis than last year, with a small balance on hand. This satisfactory state of things is due in a great measure to Mr. Tudhope's efforts on the part of the club last season.

A BAD SCARE

Sustained by a Clerk in one of the Stores the Other Night

A good story is at present going the rounds among the boys and told at the expense of a popular young clerk in one of the uptown stores. It appears that on the night of Friday last he arrived in the city at a late hour and went into the store to get a rubber coat as it was raining at the time. After he had unlocked the door and stepped inside the store he proceeded to light a match but before he did so he thought he detected a slight noise. He listened intently and it was repeated—a slight patting noise like as if some one was running cautiously around in their stocking feet. He was thoroughly alarmed and his hair started to rise, but imagine his horror when a second later the noise was accompanied by the rattling of a chain. This was too much, the cold sweat began to stand out in great drops upon his brow and his hair which had trembled on the rise now removed his hat and it fell to the floor with a dull thud. With an exclamation of terror he made a dash for the door and after securing the services of a couple of policemen went back to greet the spook. When a light had been procured they saw a large St. Bernard dog chained to a table leg in the rear of the store. He had made the noise tapping with his tail on the floor and upon getting up rattled the chain.

GREAT SALE OF BANKRUPT STOOK

An American Firm Have Purchased the Stock of H A Layton.

Those wishing bargains in the dry-goods line should not fail to attend the great sale in Layton's old stand on Saturday next. An American firm have purchased the goods of H. A. Layton and will offer them for sale at prices lower than have ever been seen in Belleville. In addition to these goods the firm have purchased a $10 000 stock in Toronto and will offer them for sale here also. These goods are not old stock but fresh goods and as they have been purchased at a small figure they will be sold at a sacrifice. The store will be open early on Saturday morning. Come early and avoid the rush. This is a record breaker.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of t b y to which it is applied.

Of Interest to the Ruptured.

We would call your attention to the announcement which will appear in the columns of our daily and weekly under the head of "Rupture" of the intended visit to Belleville in about 3 weeks, of J. Y. Egan the Hernia specialist of Toronto, who has been in business in that city with a continuous practical experience of upwards of 22 years. He rarely travels, his services being in constant demand there, but at present his health from close confinement, calls for a change, and so this trip. The evidence furnished this office bears very strong testimony from parents, patients whose names we recognize, and many will known physicians, some resident and practising in this city, as to his success (which appears phenomenal) in the treatment of hernia in old and young. The testimony presents one noticeable feature, distinguishing it from all others, viz: the name and address of every patient and physician presented are those only of our own people. This speaks volumes for this gentleman, whose business success is not confined to this country, he having a world wide reputation in this department of mechanical surgery. Our readers may be afflicted, severe cases especially, now have an opportunity seldom presented of obtaining a truthful knowledge on a scientific basis of their condition, and this advice will cost you nothing. He promises a certainty of relief in every case, with a possible cure in nearly all. A cordial invitation is extended to our physicians. They are promised something unique in Hernial appliances, adapted to all cases and embracing improvements, which render them simply indispensable. He will have a full line of instruments and thus be enabled to meet every case. We would therefore strongly urge our readers who may be afflicted, to patiently await this gentleman's visit—only a few weeks hence, and not waste their time and money in vain efforts in other quarters.

THE MODEL VENTILATOR

Now in order to get proper ventilation you must have your window sash adjusted so that you can lower the top sash down, which is the proper place to ventilate your houses from, and also let the foul air out at the same time.

This will keep the air in your house pure and healthy, thus saving sickness and doctor's bills; but raising the bottom sash causes direct draught which is a well known fact to be very injurious to health more particularly in sleeping rooms. Full Text of the Queen's Speech—An Insolvency Bill To Be Introduced—Mr. McMullen Will Attack the Plan of Superannuation.

Ottawa, April 19.—The clans have foregathered and are ready for the fray, which commences to-day. For the opening day there was more than an average attendance, members being present from all parts of the country. Every province was represented.

In some quarters this is looked upon on as the last session of the present Parliament, but in discussing the matter with members of the House this afternoon your correspondent found there was quite a strong feeling in favor of another session being held, commencing in December next. Why, said one, should we go to the country this year? The life of the present Parliament does not expire until April, 1896. Undoubtedly there will be strong pressure brought to bear upon the Government to convene the House again, say next December.

Dr. Montague's victory in Haldimand was the all-absorbing topic of conversation. The "odd thing of yesterday's elections," remarked a leading member of the House, "if you look at it on the surface, is that Ontario declares, through the second strongest Protestant constituency in that province, that Manitoba ought to obey the Remedial Order and two Catholic constituencies Antigonish and Vercheres, that they are very indifferent on the matter. But this is only on the surface, for the two Liberal candidates in these counties were even more pronounced for a remedy of the grievance than the Conservative candidates. One good observer said to-day Manitoba, through its Attorney-General came down to Ontario and asked the people of that province to intervene in their affairs. The reply of Ontario is that you had better arrange your troubles yourselves.

For twenty years there has not been a more brilliant inauguration of a session than that witnessed this afternoon. The people of Ottawa dearly love a show. One would have supposed that long ere this they would have tired of the pomp and ceremony attendant upon the opening of Parliament. But, tempted by warm, spring sunshine and beautiful surroundings, thousands congregated on Parliament Hill to see His Excellency arrive, and witness as much as possible of the outside ceremonial which usually accompanies a function of this kind.

For a wonder Lord Aberdeen was a little late in arriving. But shortly after 3 o'clock the Vice-Regal carriage was seen entering by the eastern gates, surrounded by dragoons and preceded by outriders in their essentially English outfit. On arriving in front of the Parliament Buildings His Excellency was received by a guard of honor from the Governor-General's Foot Guards. The band of the regiment was in attendance, and the assembled multitude sent up hearty cheers upon the arrival of the Vice-Regal carriage.

Lord Aberdeen proceeded to the Senate Chamber amid the booming of cannon, music of the band and cheers of the crowd. Major Bliss was in command of the Ottawa Field Battery that fired a salute from Nepean Point. Her Excellency had arrived a few minutes earlier, and contrary to usual custom had entered the Senate wing by the Speaker's private door. It is a characteristic of the Aberdeens to do things differently to anybody else, and the official intimation that Her Excellency would enter by this door led to a few cuss words and some tall hustling on the part of Public Works officials. This entrance is in a shady corner of the building, where the sun's ray do not penetrate. An hour before Her Excellency arrived the snow was banked six feet deep in this shady nook, necessitating the employment of about a dozen men to get it cleared away.

There was as big a crowd as usual in the galleries in the Senate; in fact, as early as 1 o'clock, people had assembled at the entrances in order to make sure of a front position in the gallery. On the floor itself, where swelldom congregates, there were not quite as many ladies as in former years, but those who were there made up for lack of numbers by the elegance of their toilets. Their Honors Lieutenant-Governors Schultz and Mackintosh occupied chairs immediately in front of His Excellency. Behind them, on the Woolsack, were Judges Sedgewick and King of the Supreme Court. Other notable dignitaries present were Consuls-General and officers of the public service of higher grade. Flanked on either side of His Excellency was a suite of military men, brilliant in their showy uniforms. Three members of the Cabinet in official uniform were with His Excellency; they were Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Hon. Mr. Angers and Hon. Mr. Ives.

While the preliminaries were being arranged in the Senate, the Commons were exchanging congratulations in their own chamber. Speaker White took the chair at about 2.35, and there was an informal reception for the next half-hour, until Black Rod arrived. Mr. Foster occupied his old seat in the Chamber. What little business was transacted was on his motion, and to-day he will be found in the seat formerly occupied by Sir John Thompson. For the day the late Premier's seat was vacant, and resting on the desk of the deceased statesman was a beautiful floral offering from his former colleagues in the Government. It was made up of Easter lilies, white roses, tube roses, hyacinthes, similax and ferns. Across it were the words, "His Memory Green." Everybody acknowledged that it was a beautiful and touching memorial tribute. In like manner, on the desk formerly used by the late Mr. Geoffrion, was a somewhat similar tribute with the words, "Gone, but Remembered." Every member of the Government except Messrs. Patterson and Montague were present.

Looking at the members of the House, the tall, slim figure of the Opposition leader could be noticed flitting around and shaking hands with political friends or opponents. He had the same affable smile and hearty hand-shake for each. Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, fresh from his fight in Antigonish, was conspicuous amongst the members, and an unusual figure on opening day was Sir Donald Smith, the silvery-locked representative from Montreal.

Black Rod having been duly announced, the members repaired to the Upper House, where His Excellency was awaiting them, and the [illegible] Speech from the Throne was read.

It was noteworthy that during the reading of the speech His Excellency sat uncovered. Previous Governor-Generals have always kept their hats on, but as previously remarked the Aberdeens do things differently. While His Excellency was reading the speech in French, the people were evidently not supposed to listen, and there was quite a buzz of conversation all through the chamber.

Lord Aberdeen was visibly annoyed and stopped the reading of the speech. Black Rod walked the whole length of the chamber, and forgetting his official bows called out in pretty sharp tones, two or three times, "Silence in the galleries." As a result one could have heard a pin drop for the next two or three minutes. It was rather cruel on the part of Black Rod to bring the galleries to time so sharply. There were dignitaries on the floor equally at fault.

After the conclusion of the opening proceedings Lord Aberdeen held a reception in the chambers of Mr. Speaker Ross.

The formal business transacted by the Senate was brief. Mr. Arsenault, the new Senator from Prince Edward Island, was introduced by Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Hon. Donald Ferguson. Mr. Arsenault took the oath of office at the table.

It was decided to take the address into consideration on Monday, and then, on motion of Sir Mackenzie Bowell, seconded by Mr. Scott, the Senate adjourned until Monday, out of respect to Sir John Thompson. The Premier, in making the motion, said he was sure that it would commend itself to the judgment of the Upper House, although Sir John Thompson was not a member of that body. Mr. Scott concurred. The motion was adopted and the Senate adjourned.

In the Commons business was necessarily of a brief character. It was decided to take the address into consideration on Friday. As previously stated, Mr. Bennett will be the mover, but the duty of seconding it will devolve upon Mr. Girouard of Two Mountains in place of Mr. Leclair. The standing committees were struck and a formal bill introduced, after which the Commons adjourned.

It seems to be pretty well understood that the debate on the address will not be concluded to-day. Apparently no decision has been reached by the Opposition in regard to an amendment, but the fact that the debate is to go over to next week is taken to mean that the Opposition mean fight. Friends of the Government may rest assured the Ministry will hold its own in debating talent this session. Mr. Foster is a man of first-class abilities as a parliamentarian, and Sir Charles Tupper and Dr. Montague are strong and ready speakers, both in the House and on the stump. Dr. Montague will get a rousing reception when he takes his seat.

Mr. Mulock will re-introduce his bill to cut down the salary of the Governor-General from £10,000 sterling to half that figure, which sum shall include all moneys for traveling expenses, wages of servants, allowance for light, heat, etc., at Rideau Hall, other than all proper charges for maintenance of buildings and furnishings in proper state of repair. Mr. Mulock prefaces his bill by a statement that from the establishment of the office this country has spent $2,851,917, or an average annual expenditure, until June 30, 1892, of $114,076, being an average annual expenditure of $65,410 in excess of the annual salary. He thinks this is an unreasonable sum to be paid in respect of the office, and public interest demands a reduction, but the proposed reduction is not to apply until the incoming Governor-General is appointed.

Mr. Mulock proposes to strike at the railway passes also, and will introduce a bill to provide that no member of the Senate or House of Commons shall be carried by any railway, to and from Ottawa in connection with his attendance at a session of Parliament, either free or at any rate less than that allowed to the general public. A form of declaration is added to the bill for each member to make when claiming his mileage allowance.

Mr. White (Cardwell) proposes to re-introduce his bill to relieve the Masonic Grand Lodge of Quebec from supposed disabilities attaching to it under the act respecting seditious and unlawful associations and oaths. Under this act passed by the Legislature of Lower Canada the Grand Lodge of Canada is exempt, but as the Grand Lodge of Quebec has been formed since it is held to be essential to extend the exemption to this grand body.

Contrary to expectation, the insolvency law as passed by the Senate last session will be introduced into the Commons. It will afford the Commoners material for much discussion.

Mr. Daly will have several bills in his charge. The measure relating to Dominion lands will both amend and consolidate the present act. The bill respecting the land subsidy for the C.P.R. extends the area from which they may select the land subsidy due to them. The present area extends as far east as Medicine Hat. The amended bill will allow a further extension east.

Mr. Edgar, a staunch advocate of the Canadian copyright law, will question the Government on the subject next week.

Col. O'Brien is the only member of the Third Party who has arrived.

Mr. McMillan proposes to attack the principle of superannuation, and will introduce a bill with that object in view.

Mr. Wilson (Lennox) will again introduce his bill to amend the weights and measures act.

Notes Around the House.

Mr. Edgar will ask the entire cost of the recent revision of the Voters' Lists.

Mr. Charlton has given notice of three bills: One to strengthen his Sabbath Observance Act, a second to repeal the Electoral Franchise Act and substitute the provincial lists therefor, and a third to make more effective provision for the punishment of seduction and abduction.

Col. Tisdale of Norfolk is freely mentioned as the next accession to the Government from Ontario.

The three representatives for Toronto were in their places to-day.

Many members of Parliament paid respects to Mrs. White, wife of Mr. Speaker, this afternoon. The Press Gallery also made their annual social call.

There is a pretty kettle of fish brewing in connection with the forthcoming meeting of the Royal Society, and unless President Lemoine recedes from the untenable position which he has taken the society will be irreparably injured. Mr. Lemoine has not many claims upon the Canadian public as a literary man. He is a pretty good digger and delver and has been before the reading public in Quebec for many years as a prolific newspaper writer. Possibly he is the weakest man who has been president of the Royal Society. He desires to signalize his term of office by the election of two politicians to membership, Hon. Mr. Laurier and Lieutenant-Governor Chapleau. Both these gentlemen are ornaments in the public life of Canada, but they are not regarded as representative literary men, although both can deliver speeches which are poems in prose. Under the constitution of the society neither has a claim to membership, and to elect either as members will be unconstitutional and an innovation calculated greatly to weaken the society's influence. Mr. Lemoine has given notice of motion for the election of the two gentlemen named as members, but it will be strongly opposed by those members who desire to keep the constitution unimpaired.

Ottawa Reform Association elected officers to-night. Mr. Bronson is honorary president, Levi Crannell, president; H.A. Bate, secretary.

Instructive Trade Returns.

The Trade and Navigation returns for the past fiscal year were issued to-day. The following are the comparative figures for the last five years:

	Total Exports.	Total Imports.	Duty.
1891	98,417,296	119,967,638	23,481,069
1892	113,963,375	127,406,068	20,550,581
1894	117,524,949	123,474,940	19,379,822

The aggregate trade on the basis of goods entered for consumption and exported to Great Britain and the United States, our principal customers, shows a remarkable difference over 1893.

The comparison reads:

	Great Britain.	United States.
1893	$107,228,906	$102,144,986
1894	107,256,124	[illegible],844,049

With France our trade was normal, Germany, however, shows an increase of three millions and a half. Newfoundland gave us our best year, while with the West Indies an average business was done. Figures for China and Japan are $3,065,768, largest value of any year but one.

Our exports to Great Britain were valued at $68,538,856 and again the figures of comparison with the United States are instructive. They show that the lesson of the McKinley bill has not been lost on our people.

	Great Britain.	United States.
1885	$ 41,877,705	$ 39,752,734
1886	41,542,629	36,578,769
1887	44,571,846	37,660,199
1888	40,084,984	42,572,065
1889	38,105,126	43,522,404
1890	48,353,694	40,522,810
1891	49,280,858	41,138,695
1892	64,906,549	38,988,027
1893	64,080,493	43,923,010
1894	68,538,856	35,809,940

The total exports to Newfoundland were valued at $2,818,592, West Indies $3,443,761, China and Japan $540,849, Australia $322,745.

The amount of customs duties paid per head of population is given as $3.86, against $4.26 the year previous.

Greenway on the Bye-Elections

Winnipeg, April 18.—Premier Greenway, when interviewed as to the bye-elections, said: "The result on the whole must be satisfactory to the Liberals, and equally unsatisfactory to the Federal Government, who expected to make so much out of the Remedial Order. If they could not make capital out of such constituencies as Antigonish and Vercheres, it is difficult to see where they can make it."

"Would you care to say anything in reference to Mr. Sifton's work?"

"I might say that I think it will have a good educative effect. His speeches have been published pretty fully in the press, and this will give Ontario a chance to study this question from a Manitoba point of view."

WRITER STEVENSON'S PRAYER.

This Pathetic Composition Was the Last He Wrote.

Here is a touching prayer written or composed by Robert Louis Stevenson as real to his family the night before he died. It is reproduced from the British Weekly:

We beseech Thee, Lord, to behold us with favor, folk of many families and nations, gathered together in the peace of this roof; weak men and women, subsisting under the cover of Thy patience. Be patient still; suffer us yet a while longer, with our broken promises of good, with our idle endeavors against evil; suffer us a while longer to endure, and (if it may be) help us to do better. Bless to us our extraordinary mercies; if the day come when these must be taken, have us play the man under affliction. Be with our friends; be with ourselves. Go with each of us to rest; if any wake, temper to them the dark hours of watching; and when the day returns to us, our sun and comforter, call us with morning faces and with morning hearts, eager to labor, eager to be happy, if happiness shall be our portion; and if the day be marked to sorrow, strong to endure it. We thank Thee, and praise Thee, and in the words of Him to whom this day is sacred, close our oblation.

The Palace of Bakhchisarai.

All archaeologists will receive with pleasure the news that the Government has granted 36,000 rubles for the purpose of restoring to somewhat of its former beauty the ancient Khan-Sarai, or Palace of the Khans of the Crimea, at Bakhchisarai. The work of restoration is to be carried on under the direction of the Academician Kotoff, who is to restore it to the same appearance as when it was previously restored by Prince Potemkin for the reception of Catherine the Great in 1787. This ancient palace is reported to have been erected in the thirteenth century, and some portions belong to the eleventh century. The second court, which is called the new building, is entered by an iron gate, on which is the inscription stating it to have been erected by Menghi Ghirey Khan, who conquered the Crimea in 1480. In addition to the interesting suite of apartments contained in this court are two fountains, one of which has been rendered historical by the famous Russian poet Pushkin, and the inscription on it states that it was erected in 1756 by Khan Krim Ghirei in honor of Dilliarah Bikeh, his beautiful Georgian wife, whom he could never induce to change her religion as a Christian to join that of the Mussulman.

Adjoining the Khan-Sarai is a large building containing the monuments of nearly all the Khans since 1654, and many tombs of the eleventh and twelfth centuries, as well as the tomb of Devlet Ghirey, belonging to the year 955. When I visited this old palace and passed two nights therein two years ago, I was able, through the courtesy of the authorities, to examine all the interesting relics contained in this place, and, although the original Tartar silk and satin hangings to the Khan's council hall and private apartments were somewhat faded, yet the excellent manner in which everything has been kept leaves the palace in almost its original condition, as when it was inhabited by the mighty Tartar Khans in bygone ages, notwithstanding that during the Crimean war it was used as a hospital, and that nearly 50,000 Russians were carried out of the building to find a resting place forever within a few minutes' walk of its historical walls.—Odessa Correspondence London Standard.

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

YMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

Germany reports 289 instances of suicide among school children during the last six years.

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal.'

For Over Fifty Years

AN OLD AND WELL-TRIED REMEDY.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by Druggists in every part of the World. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. If parents wish to save the lives of their children and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

The Pekin (China) Gazette, a journal that was 200 years old when the Normans conquered England, has the further distinction of having had 1,600 of its editors beheaded.

Beyond Dispute.

There is no better, safer or more pleasant cough remedy made than Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cures Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles.

After la Grippe obstinate coughs, lung trouble, etc., frequently follow. There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time effectual and pleasant, as Milburn's Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry Hypophosphites, which is the largest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. EDITORIAL NOTES

Haven't the Liberals good cause for self congratulation in Wednesday's by-elections? They held the old seat in Vercheres and won a new one in Antigonish, against desperate opposition. The Government evidently will have to hunt up a new issue.

A more apologetic bow than that of the Government's in the speech from the Throne to the people's representatives could scarcely be imagined. Last year His Excellency boasted loudly an increase in trade and despite the small matter of a million or so of a deficit "The revenues of the year have been ample for the services which you provided for and have met the expectations on which the appropriations of last year were based." And there was the visionary "revision of the duties" This year the speech has but one statement of note and that is the oft repeated wail that Canada is in the tail end of the world-wide depression. The six millions deficit was caused not by any decrease in trade but by the reduction of one fifth of one per cent. in the tariff. As they forgot to practice so they forgot to mention the economy that was to have made up the deficit.

Consistency was never a virtue that the Tory politician or the Tory press held in high esteem but it's seldom such a piece of rough, unhewn, natural "gall" as the "Intell's" remarks on the by-elections, is submitted for public examination. In Haldimand it was the judgment of Ontario in regard to the attitude of the Government on the Manitoba School Question. But in Vercheres where Hon. Mr. Ouimet with all the influence of Church and State had fought a desperate and bitter fight on the same issue, it was only that the constituency had "remained true to the old political faith," while Antagonish which for ten years has been represented by the late Premier, and where Hon. Sir Charles Tupper has been "exploiting the religious feelings of the electors with his own peculiar acrimony, had "simply returned to its first love."

In Quebec West both the candidates were Conservatives. Mr. Dobell was chosen over Thomas McGreevy, and we can but regret that the verdict in condemnation of the notorious corruption in connection with public contracts was not more emphatic—"Intell". Shades of Sir Hector and Sir Adolph, harken to the whining hypocracy.

TWO OPERATIONS.

BOTH FAILURES

A Case of Kidney Complaint that Would Not Yield to Surgery or Medicine until B. B. B. Was Tried.

GENTLEMEN,—After having undergone two operations for Kidney Complaint without securing the least relief, and hearing of some remarkable cures made by B. B. B. in our neighborhood, I decided to try it. I was given up by the doctors after the operations failed, and it was providential that I heard of B. B. B. After the use of six bottles I experienced so great relief and so great a change for the better that I felt the good effects would be lasting, as indeed they have been. The seventh bottle perfectly cured me, and I am now stronger and better than I ever was before. People who saw me before I took B. B. B. and who see me now can scarcely believe that I am the same person.

Yellow as a guinea —The complexion in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick headache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURES which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels there after to become regular. High professional sanction has been accorded to it; and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00, Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-smile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

If afflicted with scalp diseases, hair falling out, and premature baldness, do not use greese or alcoholic preparations, but apply Hall's Hair Renewer.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich every bodily function fags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, or contamination by bile, or other causes, bilious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery.

If you once try Carter's Little Liver Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable, small and easy to take. Don't forget this.

RICH WOMEN ARE HUNTED

ANNOYANCES THAT AN HEIRESS MUST SUBMIT TO.

Wiles of the Fortune Hunter—He Makes It His Business to Propose to Every Rich Girl He Meets—The Newspaper Pest.

The position of an heiress is a very trying one at any time. It is not so bad for a pretty girl who is not loaded with too much sensitiveness, or for a plain girl who is blinded by excessive vanity. It is worst of all for a plain girl who knows that she is plain, and is oppressed by the fear that every man who is decently civil to her is pursuing her with the hope of marrying her for her money.

An heiress very soon learns that she is regarded as "fair game" by almost every man with whom she is brought in contact, and many of her would-be capturers, in their anxiety to secure the prey as soon as possible, do not trouble to give her the ordinary "law"—to treat her to the ordinary delays and decencies of courtship—before coming to a proposal of marriage.

One heiress tells a story of a certain man who was invited to a luncheon party expressly to meet her (as she afterward found out) He was introduced to her before lunch and sat next to her during the meal, when he made a far more favorable impression on her, owing to the vapid and cynical nature of his conversation: after lunch he contrived to pin her into a corner, on pretence of showing her some photographs, and, without more delay, asked her to marry him. She was so outraged by what she regarded as an insult that she did not answer, turned away and has since resolutely refused his acquaintance. He was asked by an intimate friend why he hurried matters so and he replied:

"Well, you see, I was going to meet Miss X——(naming another heiress) "at dinner in the evening and I wanted to know whether Miss Y—— would have me or not, in order to know how to behave to Miss X——,"

In another case a certain man was in love with a girl, whom he thought had money. As it happened, she had but little and he had less, so she told him they could not marry.

"But there's my friend Miss L., the heiress; why don't you make up to her?"

She thereupon introduced him to the heiress, and in a very short time he told the latter that she was the only girl he ever loved. The heiress laughed.

"Either you must be very forgetful or very fickle," she said. "A week ago you were for ever after my friend, danced with her all night, were always with her, and had no eyes for anyone else. If you have forgotten her already, you can have no heart at all; and if you have not forgotten her, how can you have the assurance to tell me that I am the only girl you ever loved?'

A form of annoyance which every heiress has to go through is that of being proposed to by a certain number of impecunious men, who make it a regular business to offer themselves and what they style their hearts to every woman of fortune who comes in their way. They appear to forget that they are well known as fortune hunters, and that the history of their proposals is, probably, the first thing that is told about them to each successive miss. There is one young man of rank who has proposed to every heiress during the last eight years, and has been refused by all. One of the more recent objects of his attempts says that, after he had proposed to her three times, she asked him how much he would require per annum in exchange for a written promise never to propose to her again.

Nor is this the only form of annoyance that heiresses are subjected to. Within recent times a wealthy and beautiful young lady was so tormented by a ruffian who insisted on addressing her and forcing his society upon her whenever he met her (apparently with the mad idea that she would marry him at last to put an end to this persecution), that she was several times obliged to go through the disagreeable business of prosecuting him, in the hope of putting an end to his insults.

Another heiress was pestered by a correspondent who used to write her anonymous letters, in which he not only called her by every endearing name and protested his undying devotion to her, but actually referred to their "last meeting," her "last dear letter," and the kisses which he had pressed upon her "dear lips." Whether these letters were written by a madman or a scoundrel was never known, and they ceased as unexpectedly as they had begun. While they lasted they were a source of great trouble to the poor girl, who was especially anxious that they should not fall into other hands than her own.

In a third case an heiress received a written proposal from a gentleman whom she knew very slightly. It happened that shortly afterwards two girls came to see her who were also heiresses and intimate friends of hers. In the course of conversation she alluded to the proposal which she had had, whereupon it transpired that both her visitors had some little time before received proposals from the same man, which they had refused. The heroine was so indignant at the heartlessness displayed by the man that she referred to her knowledge of it in her reply.

Another girl was really in love with an impecunious man and consented joyfully when he asked her to be his wife. But when he found that her fortune was to be settled on herself, and that her parents declined to settle anything on him, he broke of the engagement.

Less annoying, but quite troublesome enough, is the newspaper criticism and advertisement which a rich girl has to go through. One ladies' paper will say that she is "not exactly good-looking, but very pleasant in expression." Another observes that she has blue eyes, when she is most anxious that everyone should know that they are gray. A third ladies' paper will describe her feature for feature, and every one of them wrong, and wind up by observing that, as she will have a dowry of so much a year, she is one of the greatest catches in the matrimonial market.

Then there are the ladies' columns and "gossip" in other papers, which will observe that she was in the park on Sunday "in green," and that her appearance "was not improved by the cold"; or will say that she has taken to cycling, and describes her early tumbles; or will find out that she hunts, and express a hope that she will "grow out of that"; or on the strength of the fact that she was once at a private view, will include her in the list of "those present" at almost every artistic function of the year, and sandwich her in between the newest divorcee and the latest erotic minor poet.

Abduction may be dismissed from the list of an heiress' possible troubles, but undue influence is not by any means the least of them. Her family may insist on her marrying some man who is absolutely obnoxious to her, but who is a person of high rank. Of course, no girl can be really forced to marry a man she does not like, but pressure can be put on a sensitive girl which renders life so intolerable that she will do anything to escape. Again, an unscrupulous guardian (if she be so unfortunate as to be left an orphan) may exercise pressure on her through her feelings of gratitude and obedience, to oblige her in spite of her objections to marry so as to secure her property in his own family.—Boston Herald.

DYNAMITE IN DUNDAS.

Considerable Quantities of the Explosive Found Under the Sidewalks.

Hamilton, April 18.—Six and a half pounds of dynamite and two hundred percussion caps were found under the sidewalk in Hatt-street, Dundas, last evening by some boys. Later on a cartridge was found under the sidewalk in front of the Hamilton and Dundas station, and now the people living in the Valley City are panic-stricken, fearing that some of the dynamite cartridges may be concealed near their residences, or may explode when they are in its vicinity. The tool box of Bracey Bros. & Co. was broken up a few days ago, and tools and dynamite were stolen. George Anderson was arrested for the theft, and he foolishly concealed the explosives all over the town. He is now in jail.

SHOT A MOOSE OUT OF SEASON.

But the Ontario Cabinet Decides To Remit the Penalty Imposed.

Toronto, April 19.—A few days ago Rogerson McConkey, farmer and taxidermist of Owen Sound district, was fined $20 and costs for having in his possession a moose head. McConkey's defence was that the head had been left with him to be dressed by a man called Baker. He was nevertheless fined, Baker was arraigned, admitted ownership, and was also fined $20 and costs. McConkey is a man of small means, and the fine and costs together amounting to $51. He chose the optional 60 days in jail. His neighbors offered to subscribe the requisite sum to meet the fine, but McConkey preferred jail before charity.

A petition was then circulated and received 60 signatures, among which was that of the game warden of the district, asking the Ontario Government to remit the sentence. The petition came before the members of the Cabinet yesterday, and was granted, owing to the fact of McConkey's wife and children being in destitute circumstances.

The head, which is an unusually excellent specimen, was confiscated.

The Last Straw on Buchanan's Neck.

Washington, April 19.—The British Ambassador, Sir Julian Pauncefote, received a letter this morning from G. W. Gibbon, the attorney for Dr. Robert W. Buchanan of New York, whose application for a writ of error and supersedeas was denied by the United States Supreme Court yesterday and who as a consequence will be executed during the week commencing on Monday next. Mr. Gibbon's letter stated that his client was a British subject, that his trial was not conducted according to the constitution of New York and of the United States and asked the ambassador for that reason to interfere if possible and prevent the execution. Sir Julian Pauncefote promptly replied that, inasmuch as the highest tribunal in the United States had passed upon the matter and overruled the application, he did not see what action he could take in the matter.

Serious Riot in Vienna

Vienna, April 19.—A serious riot occurred here to-day between a number of brick carriers and a crowd of striking brickmakers. The latter were the aggressors, attacking the carriers with bricks. The police, using their side arms, finally quelled the disturbance, but not until 15 men had been wounded.

National League Baseball Opening

Buffalo, April 19.—The National League Baseball season opened yesterday with all the games billed. Weather was uniformly fine and attendance large at all points.

At Baltimore: An injury to Esper, who was not in the best of condition, enabled the Philadelphians to find him with a batting streak in the ninth and win the game.

The Bostons and Washingtons were not scheduled to-day. They open their season to-morrow.

Ithaca, N.Y., April 18.—In a very pretty game of baseball to-day the Toronto Eastern League team defeated Cornell. The Toronto players played genuine ball from start to finish, their fielding being extraordinary. The fielding of Cornell was also good, although five errors are charged against them. The batting on both sides was lamentably weak, and in the majority of cases those who reached first base did so on errors.

The score:

Toronto	010000010—2
Cornell	000000000—0

Alcoholism in France.

Among thinking people in France the evils of alcoholism are attracting a great deal of attention, and only recently the Academy of Medicine, the Academy of Moral and Political Sciences and the Superior Council of the Public Assistance held a meeting at which the whole subject was gone over very carefully. In the summing-up it was found that absinthe is doing just about as much harm as are distilled liquors. Thus, one physician reported that in his practice he had found that, out of twenty patients, ten were suffering from alcoholism, and that wine and ordinary distilled liquors were responsible for five of these, while absinthe was the cause of the other five. From 1885 to 1892 the amount of absinthe and similar drinks coming under the observation of the excise and other officers of Paris had more than doubled, and each year showed a greater yearly increase. In view of this state of things, the doctors make the following recommendations to the State:—First, to reduce the number of liquor shops. Second, to make as low as possible all taxes on beer and cider, while exercising a supervision over the quality of those drinks. Third, to tax wine moderately, and to take measures against its harmful adulteration. Fourth, to increase the tax on spirituous liquors, and to allow in commercial policy only that which is hygenically pure. Fifth, to prohibit absinthe and similar bitters in which the essential oils exercise a pernicious influence on the human organism. The facts mentioned constitute a sharp indictment of the present condition of France. Certainly the French will not be equal to whipping the English and Germans, when the talked-of war comes, unless some reform on the drink question takes place.—Buffalo Express.

A Complex Question.

Son—"And the missionary was eaten by the cannibal! Will the missionary go to heaven?"

Father—"Oh, yes!"

Son—"Will the cannibal?"

Father—"No."

Son—"He'll not! Why, how can the missionary go to heaven if the cannibal doesn't, when the missionary is inside of the cannibal?"—Puck.

GETTING INTO SOCIETY.

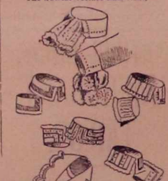
A Serious Moment for the Plebian Rich Woman.

New York society is a very curious puzzle to strangers. The relative positions of the various factors that combine to make up the sum total bear no extrinsic relation to one another. To the outsider there is no especial reason why Mrs. S. should be among the very smartest of the smart, and Mrs. Z. whose position is quite as good, who is quite as bright, if not brighter, and who may possess in a greater degree than her neighbor those qualities which go to make one desirable socially, is not of so fine a position. It seems inexplicable. We have these types, and very strongly marked, as any careful observer will agree. The disturbances in relative "values" (to use an artistic term) that is caused by the introduction of a new element among so delicately balanced an organization is very interesting.

I had a chance not long ago to witness the initation of such a factor. The lady is of vast wealth and of very recently acquired prominence. For some months everybody has known that she was a "coming" woman, socially speaking. A ball was given by one of her social sponsers, a veteran of the "grand armee," a leader whose position is recognized on two sides of the Atlantic. For a twelvemonth she has guided the course of her protegee as a skilled chess player directs the movements of his pieces. This dance was to be the beginning of the end. At it the leaders of the ultra inside circle were to make their first acquaintance with the rising sun. It was in short an historic night. Would the powers that be come forward voluntarily to make the first advances, or would they hold aloof? The small fry had all assembled. The lady of the evening stood close to the hostess. Around her clustered a crowd of newly made friends.

At last the fateful moment arrived. "Mrs. Awful Smartset," bawled the major domo who was announcing the guests, and the great person made her salutation to the hostess, and then, while the throng gave way, the two advanced straight to Mrs. Manyplunketts. An awed hush succeeded to the clatter that had filled the salon: the Hungarian band, as though at the beck of an unseen stage manager, struck up a slow and solemn strain. In a brief word the presentation was made, whereupon Mrs. Awful Smartset extended her exclusive hand in cordial grasp and exclaimed with real effusiveness: 'My dear Mrs. Manyplunketts, I can't tell you how charmed I am to meet you. I hope to see you often. I am coming to call on you in a few days." It was done! The aristocrat of 1883 had fraternized with the plebeian of 1895. The old regime had absorbed the new. Conversation was resumed. The band struck up a joyous air.—New York Mail and Express.

The Newest Collars and Cuffs.



White linen and bastiste collars, simply hemstitched, adorned with lace and insertion, are much patronized just now for morning wear. The specimens shown on our cut are among the newest models out. The high turned-over collar is a great favorite; it is generally completed by a satin or laced-trimmed batiste cravat. The one of the sort illustrated has the cuff to match. All the other models are equally provided with cuffs which constitute a pretty finish to morning dress.

Sick Room Suggestions.

How few women really know what constitutes good nursing. When they move about a sick room, they either do it in a stealthy, tip toe sort of fashion that is quite enough to drive a nervous person frantic, for they indulge in a tread that shakes to its very foundation the bed of the invalid. The most loving care and anxious thought is often at a discount, for good nursing is an art, a heaven-born gift, that is often lacking in even the best of trained nurses.

It is a most artistic work to prepare a dainty cup of tea and dish of toast. Nine out of every ten women who attempt this delicate task fail signally, the tea being too often half cold and either too strong or too weak, and so deluged with sugar that even the most robust might protest. As for the toast, the keen eyes of the invalid quickly detect the slightest scorch that may linger about the edges.

"There is an opening for some woman," said a trained nurse in a recent gossip on sick room methods, "in making to order tempting broths, beef tea, custards, invalid delicacies, in fact, that could be relied upon for their wholesomeness and genuine home-made qualities. A woman with a natural aptitude for cooking could soon perfect herself in the creation of invalid foods, and by getting some well-known physician as her patron she might supply his patients with such dainties as he advised. Many a home have I been in where the weary housewife would have gladly given orders for articles which, in the worry and flurry of nursing, home folks had little chance to prepare."

So here's a hint for the "born cook" anxious to add to her meagre pin money. Let her hang out her little shingle bearing the unique notice "Invalid Caterer." Haven't the least doubt her business would soon be a telling one.—Philadelphia Inquirer.

All the Same.

Bings—What did you give me this key for? It isn't my latch key.

Mrs. Bings—You won't have any more trouble with that key than you usually do.

The White Ants of India.

"It is a remarkable fact, but one never sees wooden telegraph poles in India," said a well-known railroad man yesterday. "The white ants are so numerous in India that they would eat a telegraph pole in one night. On that account stone is used. The stone piles are from six to eight feet high. For ties inverted iron boxes are used, and, strange to say, they are so tempered that they do not warp in hot weather."

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or Irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Gives Instant Relief.

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause than Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

THE STAMP COUNTERFEITERS.

Morrison and a Newspaper Artist Arrested as Principals.

Cincinnati, Ohio, April 19.—Geo. Morrison, the leader of the postage stamp counterfeiters, was arrested yesterday afternoon by two Government officers from Chicago.

Chicago, April 18.—United States Secret Service men last night arrested C. O. Jones, a newspaper artist of this city, for complicity in counterfeiting the two-cent stamps. Another man was also taken into custody, but his identity was not revealed. More arrests in Chicago and other cities are expected to-day. The officers are certain they will soon have the entire gang in custody, in addition to obtaining possession of the machinery with which the work was done.

SUED FOR $5000, GOT $50.

The Williams Murder Recalled By a Suit at the Assizes.

Toronto, April 19.—The brutal butchery of James Williams and his wife in Toronto Township County of Peel, by Walter MacWherrell, now serving a life sentence in Kingston Penitentiary, was revived by a case tried at the Assizes yesterday. Shortly after the murder the detectives received information that the horse stolen by MacWherrell from the Williams premises had been stabled at Sheppard's livery, and that Henry Saunders, an employe, could give valuable evidence in connection therewith. Rumors having reached the officers that Saunders was about to leave town, a warrant was issued for his arrest, and he was taken in custody on a charge of being a vagrant. He was arraigned before the Police Magistrate and remanded to jail for six days. Subsequently Saunders was taken to Brampton, but failed to recognize either MacWherrell or the Williams horse and rig. He was then released. At the assizes yesterday he sued Government Detective Greer for $5000 damages for false arrest. After the evidence of County Crown Attorney Currie and Detective Greer had been heard a settlement was effected, Saunders withdrawing his suit on payment of $50. B. B. Osler represented the Attorney-General's Department.

Ten Drowned in a Coffin Ship

Port Townsend, Wash., April 19.—The schooner Behring Sea, from Tacoma, has been found 35 miles west of Cape Flattery, bottom up. The crew of ten persons is supposed to have been drowned. The vessel was making her maiden voyage to the Halibut Banks and was deemed unseaworthy.

Spent Six Days in the Rigging

London, April 19—The crew of the wrecked Norwegian barque, Aquila, from Pensacola for Leith, who were brought to Dunnet Head yesterday by the Norwegian barque Ludwig Holbert, were later conveyed to Clerkenwell by fishing boats. The men were six days in the rigging of the Aquila before they were rescued. The barque had experienced terrific gales, during which the sea swept the deck and carried away everything moveable. The Aquila became waterlogged and was fast breaking up when the crew were taken off.

Bank of England Index to Trade.

London, April 19.—The coin and bullion in the Bank of England increased to-day only £102,000, although £274,000 were imported for the week. Gold has gone to Scotland earlier than usual, owing to the expansion of the shipbuilding trade during the past month. A really large amount of gold has gone into the provinces. It is hoped that it indicates a revival of trade. During the week £100,000 came in from Egypt, £16,000 from the Continent and £28,000 from China. £130,000 in bars were bought.

Alleged Plot to Assassinate President Faure

Paris, April 19.—The Paris Journal declares that the Anarchists have arranged to make an attempt to assassinate President Faure on the occasion of his visit to Havre. The paper asserts that 22 men are engaged in the conspiracy, and that one of the number, a deserter from the French army, of the type of Caserio Santo, the assassin of President Carnot, has left London for the purpose of carrying out the part assigned to him, that of actual assassin. The police are ignorant of the route the man will take, and are watching all the French ports.

Nicaragua's Reply Unacceptable

London, April 18.—The statement that the Foreign Office declines to accept the reply of Nicaragua to the British ultimatum is made upon official authority. The discrepancy between this announcement and the statement made last Saturday, that the reply was so satisfactory that the Government had abandoned its threatened action against Nicaragua, is explained by the fact that the decision of the Foreign Office last week has been revised after consultation between Lord Rosebery and Lord Kimberley concerning later communications from Nicaragua.

Will Build the Minnesota Canal.

A number of New York capitalists have agreed to finance the Minnesota Canal Co., taking its bonds for the amount furnished. Men's Dress.

The London Lancet finds the question of rational dress for men one that is almost as much worth inquiring into as that of the same for women. "Men," says that journal, "have for ages scoffed at women for the vagaries and flights of fancy displayed in their dress, but there is really little to choose between the sexes except in the great matter of the pocket, for, except a professional thief, no mortal being, even the owner, can get at a woman's pocket."

Some of the evils of men's dress are then pointed out, notably the exposure of the lungs, the most susceptible to injury from cold of any organ of the body. The animal creation is cited to show that nature left to herself takes care of this delicate organ, the polar bear having its thick coating of fur, the whale its blubber, and birds their coating of feathers, with warm under-down—only man showing a foolish disregard for the needs for protection. The fashionable waistcoat is by no means suitable wear. Bad as is man's day dress, however, it is when he gets into his evening clothes that he betrays the greatest want of sense and forethought. "During the day, when he is going about, he wears thick woollen clothes, with stout boots and warm socks. At night he puts on very thin clothes, a waistcoat which is of no protective value whatever, very thin shoes, possibly silk stockings, relinquishes his gaiters, and goes out in the open air thus insufficiently protected on his way to theatre, dinner or ball, congratulating himself," says the Lancet, "that he is not as those poor silly women, who go about with the upper part of their chests bare."—New York Times.

FAMOUS VOICES.

Forrest had a deep bass voice that seemed to come from the bottom of his chest.

Bunyon had what was called a persuasive voice. He never scolded in his sermons.

Henry VII. had a voice so gruff that it earned for him the sobriquet of "Bluff King Hal."

Garrick had an exceedingly flexible voice, and could mimic anyone he ever heard speak.

The Duke of Marlborough had a voice that, it was said, could be heard above the roar of artillery.

Jonathan Edwards had sharp, strident tones that grated unpleasantly on the ears of all who heard him.

Old Kaiser Wilhelm had a soft voice and spoke in a soothing tone that gave pleasure to every hearer.

Brignoli was know as the "silver-voiced." His tones, though not strong, were exceedingly pure and sweet.

John Adams had a cool, deliberate way of speaking, that carried conviction to the minds of his hearers.

Wendell Phillips always spoke in an ordinary tone, with very distinct articulation and careful pronunciation.

Prince Bismarck has a very loud, harsh voice, and generally speaks in a dogmatic, dictatorial way that admits of no contradiction.

Coleridge delivered his philosophic utterances in an uninteresting monotone that late in life became an almost unintelligible mumble.

Frederick the Great had a sneering, disagreeable voice that corresponded well to the cynical utterances he was in the habit of making.

Goldsmith had a singing voice of great purity, and it was a treat to hear him render an old Irish air, which he did in inimitable style.

Very Likely.

She—"Lose myself in another."

Novel Fowling Piece.

A method of constructing fowling pieces, by which the aim of the firer is not affected by the operation of firing. The trigger is bent so that the pressure necessary to fire the rifle is applied in an upward direction at right angles to the length of the barrel, the firer being thus compelled to grip the gun firmly before the operation of the trigger can be erected, and thus preventing the destruction of his aim.

OSWEGO, N. Y., April 17, '95.

DEAR SIR,—We are entirely out of Canadian barley, having sold all that came here by lake last fall. This, notwithstanding western barley, has been and is pressing for sale, and the quality of it being excellent, both in weight and color.

We expect a much more general use of Canadian barley this coming season than last and we presume you are encouraging the farmers in your locality to increase their acerage to barley.

We are offering 62c for extra two barley to arrive on opening of navigation. Let us know if you have any to offer, also what the crop prospects are as to barley acerage.

THE CANADIAN INDIAN

Some Facts and Figures About Canada's 100,000 Indians Gleaned From the Superintendent General's Report

Though the Indian question is not an exciting issue with Canadians to-day, the Red man not now seeking separate schools to perpetuate the traditions and sentiments of his race, it is always of interest to learn of the progress and the condition of the 100,227 decendents that still remain with us of the once haughty owners of the soil. From the latest government report on Indian affairs dated the first of the year, some facts and figures will be pertinent, seeing that the Government propose to amend the Indian Act.

Of the 100,227 Indian population Ontario has 17,626, of whom 9140 are Protestants, 6399 Roman Catholics and 1191 Pagans. Quebec has 11,859, 522 Protestants, 6797 Catholics and 1 Pagan Nova Scotia has 2141 and they are all Catholics. New Brunswick is credited with 1618 also all Catholics, and Prince Edward Island has 285 MicMacs also Catholics. In British Columbia there are 25,807 ; Protestants 5960, Catholics 10321, pagans 4954, and 4572 of whom the Government has no return as to religion. Manitoba has 9436 ; Protestants 4906, Catholics 1264, pagans 3266. In the Northwest Territories are 14273 Indians ; Protestants 4333, Catholics 4262, pagans 5650. In the Athabasca and Mackenzie Rivers District there are 5589; in the Peace River District 1725 ; in the Nelson and Churchhill Rivers District 852 ; in Eastern Ruperts Land 4016 ; in Labrador, Canadian Interior 1000 ; on the Arctic Coast 4000.

The Deputy Superintendent General referring to the condition of the Indians in the older provinces says : "I may remark that I have been somewhat disappointed to observe a want of that energy and progress which are striking features of not a little of the Indian life of the west. Some of the bands that have reached a point of progress toward which many in the west are still struggling, manifest a lack of desire for further improvements and do not care to avail themselves of the machinery provided by the Advancement Act." The Deputy General promises an earnest endeavor to trace to their sources the causes of this phase of Indian life.

In Manitoba and the North West however, the reports show a much more encouraging state of affairs. There on many of the reserves the Indians are raising grain and root crops with fair success, are building houses, raising stock and making butter. Generally the amount of this kind of work is increasing, the Indians are becoming more cleanly and making their dwellings more comfortable.

At Pelly the agent reports, "Brass's daughter has milked nine cows all summer and has been selling 20 lbs of butter a week. She has a good milk-house. Others are imitating her example, but on a smaller scale. The general health of the Indians is good. They have been busy ploughing after finishing the hay and taking up roots, which has been well done.

Some idea of the agricultural work of the Indians can be gained by the following report of the Saddle Lake agency, where there are 698 natives and all of them Christians, and 89 of them reported as engaged in agriculture. They had 164 acres in wheat and 744 bush. crop, 20 acres in oats and 56 bush. crop, 293 acres in barley and 892 bush. crop, 22 acres in potatoes and harvested 755 bush., 7 acres in turnips and harvested 213 bush., 3 acres in carrots and harvested 56bush., 1½ acres in onions and harvested 15 bush.

During the same year this reserve made $4145 by hunting furs. etc. On the reserve there are 59 oxen loaned by the Government and 3 oxen and 196 horses that are the private property of the Indians. Six new houses were erected during the year. On the Birtle agency there are 939 Indians of whom 450 are pagans and they earned last year $10593.63, of which only 1326 was by hunting. Figures of this kind might be given at any length but these suffice to show the trend of affairs.

There are 8136 children attending the Indian schools of the Dominion, of these 2341 are in Ontario and 2322 in the North West Territories. Miss E. Bolton principal of the Ottawa Normal Kindergarten school who visited the schools in the North year said in a report :

"In conclusion allow me to say that I was amazed and delighted at the educational advance made in your schools. Certainly, from a scientific standpoint, your schools will be on a very solid basis. There is no doubt in the mind of educators generally that there is no true education given which does not combine technical and intellectual training, and your half day system seems to me to be the height of perfection. In many of the schools in Europe and the United States they have long had a similar course, but I do not think the half-day system prevails here as yet.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.

LITERARY NOTES.

Herbert Spencer will begin a series of articles in The Popular Science Monthly for May His general subject is Professional Institutions, one of the divisions of his Synthetic Philosophy, and he will show how each of the professions has been developed out of the functions of the priest or medicine-man. The subject of "Fear" will be taken up by Prof. James Sully in the next of his Studies of Childhood, also to appear in this number. His investigations show that while some children are afraid of heavy, rumbling sounds, like peals of thunder, others are pleased by them, but are greatly disturbed by much smaller sharp sounds. Opposite effects are produced in small children by the first sight of the sea. Another very interesting article will be The Work of the Naturalist of the World, a spirited and suggestive essay by Dr. Charles S. Minot. Prof. Minot shows an inspiring faith in his field of knowledge, as yet imperfectly tilled, and a refreshing compassion for literary men.

Albert Lynch, whose work is becoming so much more generally known to Americans through his drawings in Scribner's Magazine and his cover designs for the Ladies Home Journal is a Peruvian by birth, but of English parentage. He is only thirty-three years of age, and of extremely retiring disposition. He is unmarried and lives in Paris. The young artist commands the highest prices for his work, his smallest water-color paintings readily selling for $600 to $900 each. In 1893 he received the Salon's first prize for his beautiful panel of "Spring," showing a single figure. This picture won the admiration to the French Art critics and the public to such an unusual degree that the painting was sold for a fabulous sum to a private Paris buyer. Recently The Ladies Home Journal acquired all publication rights to this painting, and it will serve as one of the cover designs for that magazine. The next issue of the Journal will also have a design by Lynch, portraying his conception of a woman's ideal costume. A succession of other cover designs by Lynch will follow these two.

"Curious Facts" by Mr. Sparkham Sheldrake of Lakefield is a little elongated paper-bound volume with uncut edges that has recently issued from the press of Williamson & Co., Toronto. There is no doubt as to the fitness of the first word of the title, but the other is open to discussion. Ones first impression upon breaking the reserve of uncut pages is apt to be surprise that an author could have such faith in the literary credulity of the reading public, but the chances are that before many pages are cut your opinion will shift about a bit and you will have found a quiet charm in graceful simplicity and not boisterous humor. It would in short be a very pleasant companion for an afternoon sail.

GENTLEMEN,—In the spring of 1891 I got a bottle of B. B. B. for my mother, who had been troubled with Sick Headache. I got it from Mr. H. Paxton Baird, of Woodstock, N. She used it for three months and has had no headache since. We are sure it was B. B. B. cured her as she took no other medicine.

A B B C AT HOME

The Literary Assembly Make a Great Success of Their 6th Annual closing

Everybody and his wife seemed to be at the B. B. C. last night and the large assembly room of the college was crowded by a great gathering of students and their friends. It was the occasion of the sixth annual "at home" of the College Literary Assembly and it could not have been a more complete success.

Mr. W. C. Mikel presided with his characteristic affability and humor. He prefaced the proceedings with a brief address. The B.B.C. he said was a witness to the capability of its Principal and staff to cope with the dominent demand of the age. That the world was a stage he did not believe. It was rather a battlefield and any aids in the strife were essential. The College had succeeded in spite of considerable difficuity.

The full I. O. O. F. orchestra was present and opened the program with a very pleasing selection. Mr. Fairman followed with one of his immensely popular tenor solos and was enthusiastically encored. Miss sager recited an interesting little story in verse that delighted all and she was heartily applauded. Prof. Canfield sang in splendid voice and was encored. Three little girls,the Misses Campbell and Farnham sang a trio, "Will mother know us in the sky" that was listened to with wrapt attention. The children sang again with equal sweetness. The orchestra played "Bonnie Scotland" to the delight of everyone. Mr. Fairman sang again and was quite as cordially received as before. Miss Brignall recited with fine expression "The Sioux Chief's daughter." Mrs. Campbell gave a delightful rendering of "Murmuring Zephyrs" on the piano. One of the most pleasing numbers was a recitation of Mark Twain's by Mr. Watts. His interpretation was splendid and the local hits he worked in took well.

The programme over, the seats were quickly cleared and an hours promenade concert to the enchanting strains of the orchestra concluded a most delightful evening.

Mr J E Smith Cured of Chronic Rheumatism by South American Rheumatic Cure—The Great Rheumatic Remedy Again Conquers where Doctors had Failed

Mr. J. E. Smith, of Amosa Wood Hospital, St. Thomas, Ont.: "For a long time I was afflicted with very bad rheumatic pains, and they became so intense that life to me was a misery. I saw the South American Cure advertised, and determined on giving it a trial, and procured a bottle from R. J. Old, druggist at St. Thomas. Before taking one half the bottle I found the greatest relief, but kept on taking it, using in all four bottles. I used that quantity to give the medicine a fair trial, although I had no sign of an ache or pain after taking the second bottle I can strongly recommend this remedy to all sufferers from rheumatism. I feel confident it will do for them all it did for me,'

SHOT HIS COMPANION

Two Young Lads Went Shooting Yesterday and one is Shot in the leg

Two young lads named Albert Lang and Earnest Seeley who live in West Belleville have lately been reading too much Deadwood Dick and Nick Carter literature for their health. They have recently added to their possessions two old revolvers and yesterday afternoon they both started out to kill Indians. They didn't meet enough to encourage them to continue a long expedition and after scouting a few miles and seeing no signs of redskins started back to camp. The young scouts were not to be caught napping for each carried their revolver cocked. In coming home they grew careless and the young lad Seeley, who was walking in the rear of his companion in some way discharged his weapon and the bullet, a 22 calibre size, struck Lang in the right thigh and went in a considerable distance. The young fellow reached home and Dr. Walker was sent for. He administered choloroform and succeeded in extricating the bullet.

Most Pronounced Symptoms of Heart Disease and how to Secure Relief in 30 Minutes

The most pronounced symptoms of heart disease are, palpitation or fluttering of the heart, shortness of the breath, weak or irregular pulse, smothering spells at night, making it necessary to sit up in bed to breathe, swelling of feet or ankles, say the most eminent authorities is one of the surest signs of a diseased heart. Nightmare is a common symptom, spells of hunger or exhaustion. It is estimated that 60 per cent. of all cases of dropsy come from heart disease. The brain may be congested, causing headaches, dizziness or vertigo. In short, whenever the heart flutters or tires out easily, aches or palpitates, it is diseased and nothing will give such perfect relief or so speedily effect a cure as Dr, Agnew's Cure for the Heart. It has saved thousands of lives and your's may be counted among the number if its use is begun at once.

This remedy absolutely never fails to give perfect relief in 30 minutes, and is as harmless as the purest milk.

TWO OPERATIONS.

BOTH FAILURES

Case of Kidney Complaint that Would Not Yield to Surgery or Medicine until B. B. B. Was Tried.

GENTLEMEN,—After having undergone operations for Kidney Complaint without securing the least relief, and hearing of some remarkable cures made by B. B. B. in our neighborhood, I decided to try it. I was given up by the doctors after the operations failed, and it was providential that I heard of B. B. B. After the use of six bottles I experienced so great relief and so great a change for the better that I felt the good effects would be lasting, as indeed they have been. The seventh bottle perfectly cured me, and I am now stronger and better than I ever was before. People who saw me before I took B. B. B. and who see me now can scarcely believe that I am the same person.

THE CANADA LIFE

The financial statement submitted at the annual meeting of the Canada Life Assurance Company on Monday last, which is published in another column, is the best tribute which could be paid to the sound business principles upon which that great monetary institution is conducted. The handsome profit returns to policy holders is the surest evidence of that enterprise without which no business can hope for success, and of that unceasing caution and economy without the exercise of which its strength must be constantly threatened. The history of the company since the inception has been one of continuous progress, and the past year's business is the largest it has yet known. The present report too is one of exceptional importance, as it comes at the termination of a quinquennial period, and deals with the surplus of those five years, which has to be distributed to the policyholders. This surplus shows another record of that success which has all along attended the operations of the company. The amount of profits to policyholders, on a 4 per cent basis, as a result of their five year business, is over $2,000,000, which will be regarded as more than satisfactory. By the adoption of the 4 per cent rate, instead of of 4 1-2 per cent., as in the past, in valuing the policy liabilities $842,377 was tranferred from the surplus to the reserve fund, thus materially increasing the security and earning power of the company. The reserve of the company for its policy obligations now amounts to $13,075,777. In his excellent address at the meeting President Ramsay announced that the investigation into the mortality experience of the company for 46 years has been completed,and this contribution to the annals of life insurance in Canada will certainly be most valuable. The publication of this last report will confirm the high opinion always entertained by the people of this Dominion for this strong and excellent institution.

Prof Canfield's Benefit

There is perhaps not a fraternal or church organization in the city that gives concerts that has not directly or indirectly benefitted by Prof. Canfield's musical gifts. He has during the three years of his present residence in the city given unstintedly of his time and talents for the benefit or recreation of others and it is surely not now expecting too much that he should have a crowded house at his concert in the B. B. C. Tuesday evening. He certainly deserves a rousing benefit.

But there are other considerations why no one should miss it. The entertainment is certain to be one of the finest of the season. Belleville has never heard such singing as that of Mrs. Caverly Nash not even from herself for she is vastly improved since she last sang here. One of her songs is worth double the low price of admission and there is plenty of other first class talent besides.

South American Kidney Cure Cures Kidney Disease Speedily and Effectively

It is remarkable that those who suffer from kidney disease grow impatient of those medicines that are slow in their cure. Who enjoys pain? The beauty of South American Kidney Cure is that it relieves the sufferer almost instantaneously. What sick one does not know the delight that comes when pain is relieved? Kidney Cure, as a plain matter of fact, relieves the most distressing kidney and bladder troubles in six hours. It is hard to say anything more for it. Who wants more said of it?

The Foreman Speaks Regarding the Gerow Inquest

EDITOR ONTARIO :—

SIR—In your issue of the 15th inst. Dr. Youker seems to think that justice has been thwarted by the medical evidence given. From the whole evidence given, as well as the explanations given by the medical witnesses and the character of the wound, we were perfectly satisfied that it would cause instant death and rendered our verdict accordingly. The jurors knew nothing about the action of the nerve mentioned and this had nothing to do with our verdict. I think the jurors had sufficient intelligence to render a just verdict without criticism afterwards by Dr. Youker or any other person. I wish to make this statement in order that the public may know the true facts of the case and in justice to the parties whose evidence has been questioned.

Yours respectfully,
E. BABBIT, Foreman.

A ROAST OF MEAT

Ald Green's Slaughter House and Meat Storehouse Destroyed

Another fire more disastrous than the previous one occured last night at Ald. Green's slaughter house just over the 2nd overhead bridge at twelve o'clock. The meat house in which there were stored between 60 and 70 quarters of beef and about forty carcasses of lamb and mutton was burned to the ground. The slaughter house and pig pens were also consumed. Everything was a total loss with the exception of the pigs which were turned out of the pens. The fire was first discovered by Mr. George Sargent who immediately aroused Mr. Green. The fire had evidently had its origin just outside the slaughter house and evidently had been the work of tramps. There was no insurance on the buildings or contents with the exception of the meat which was in the Western for $750. Mr. Green lost all his tools and machinery used in the slaughter house. The building used as a slaughter house was owned by Horace Yoemans upon whose property it was built. The alarm sounded here and the firemen went to the scene of the conflagration but did not do anything as the fire had gained considerable headway and it was outside the city limits.

Professional men have been strong in their recommendation of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder as a remedy for cold in the head and catarrhal troubles. We have already published in these columns warm words of endorsement from leading clergymen and professors in the educational institutions of the country. One thing be sure of, that it is not an easy matter to fool the newspaper man. He sees a good deal of the inside of life. This fact gives value to the words of endorsement of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder recently penned by Mr. W. S. Smith the well-known editor of the Evening News.

One short puff of the breath through the blower, supplied with each bottle of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, diffuses this powder over the surface of the nasal passages. Painless and delightful to use it, it relieves in ten minutes, and permanently cures catarrh, hay fever, colds, headache, sore throat, tonsilitis and deafness. 60 cents. ANOTHER SUICIDE

A FARMER SHOOTS HIMSELF WHILE TEMPORARILY INSANE

The Victim Well Known in This City Where his Family Reside—He was in Easy Circumstances

Mr. Phillip Pettingill, a prominent farmer of Ameliasburg committed suicide on Thursday at his son's residence five miles from Wellington on the lake shore. The deceased had been mentally deranged since last autumn but of late he has grown decidedly worse and on Thursday afternoon he took his life. It appears that on that day he went out to the barn and that was the last seen of him alive. After he had been missed some time a diligent search was made for him but he was not discovered until yesterday when his lifeless body was found lying in the cow stable with a shot gun clasped tightly across his breast. He had stood the shot gun on the floor and putting the muzzle under his chin, touched the trigger with his foot and blew the top of his head off. Death had been instantaneous. The deceased was about 65 years of age and leaves a wife and three children to mourn his untimely end. He was well known in this city where his wife and two children reside on the corner of Foster ave, and Hotel street.

The family moved to the city nearly a year ago, it being Mr. Pettingill's intention to retire and he left the farm in the hands of his eldest son. He lived here for some time but soon grew tired of city life and went back to live with his son on the farm, coming occasionally to the city to visit his family.

About a week ago he went to Picton without saying anything to his son and considerable difficulty had for sometime been experienced with him. He had a great horror of the asylum and influenced his family to allow him his freedom as he thought he could fight the mania. His wish was granted but his tragic end proves he had been mastered.

THE OLD FOLKS WERE NEGLECTD

Simon Ashley 89 Years of Age Sues for his Rights—Other Cases—The Court Over.

At the Chancery sittings yesterday afternoon the case of Ashley v Ashley was heard and the plaintiff, Simon Ashley who is 89 years of age was examined. His sons George and William, daughter, grandaughter and others were examined. Their evidence went to show that in David's house the old folks had not had proper treatment, were left in a filthy condition and were neither properly clothed, fed, nor waited upon.

The popular conception that the legal profession is a hard and flinty pathway, unrelieved by the shade of kindly sentiment nor refreshed by any flow of the milk of human kindness was rudely shocked by a little passage in the annals of the court proceedings. At the close of the plaintiff's case his Lordship Mr. Justice Robertson remarked that this was eminently a case for settlement. Mr. Masson, counsel for the defendent, said he had no objection to a settlement being made.

"I shouldn't expect that you would," replied his Lordship, "but what I want to know is can you effect a settlement." Then the kind hearted judge warmed to his theme. "The evidence in this case," he said "is enough to make one shudder at the the though of growing old. Here is an old man, 89 years of age, the father of 15 children, he has started each of the boys in life with 50 acres of land and now in his old age he and his wife are left to die on a dung hill. His only sin was growing old, he lived too long.

Mr. Masson objected that his client claimed that he had been slandered "well if he has," replied Judge Robertson, "I think he is entitled to heavy damages, but you see how it is: here are a lot of reputable witnesses brothers sisters and neighbors of the defendant and it would be strange if they all were stating what was untrue."

Further hearing of the case was adjourned and this morning it was announced that a settlement had been arrived at, David agreeing to pay his father $950 and each side pay their own costs

Brown v Ross a suit re conveyance or foreclosure was settled by consent judgement and a reference to the Master. C. E. Lyons for the plaintiff; N. Carnew for the deft.

When the Ashley case was adjourned yesterday afternoon Graham v Brousseau was taken up and the court sat till half past ten last night to finish it. The suit was brought by R. J. Graham to recover $355 from Brousseau & Co., of Montreal, for a quantity of apple skins and cores that were shipped to them in April and May, '94 to be used in making jelly. The defence claimed that the shipments were not up to expectations as to quality and could not be used and they were sent back. It was largely a matter of law and His Lordship reserved judgement.

Ashley v. Layton an action to recover $111.75 wages and possession of three notes for $1200. Consent judgment was given for the plaintiff. C. E. Lyons for the plf. W. C, Mikel for the deft.

Kennedy v. Cragg et al, a suit to set aside an agreement, was settled upon the advice of the judge. C. E. Lyons for plaintiff, Flint & McCamon, Geo Thrasher, J. Earl Halliwell, M. Wright and W. H. Biggar for the defendants.

HOT SHOT FROM MR. LAURIER

HARD TIMES AND THE HIGH TARIFF

Stagnation of Business the Inevitable Result of the Restrictive Fiscal Policy —Wednesday's Three Liberal Victories—Debate on the Address in the Commons

Ottawa, April 20.—The debate on the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne yesterday, made the afternoon and evening sittings of the House so interesting that every member who has reached the Capital was in his seat and the galleries were crowded. The feature of the day was the brillaint speech delivered by Hon. Mr. Laurier, who, despite his recent illness, was in perfect form. The Liberal leader never appeared to better advantage, and it is scarcely necessary to say that he made the most of the opportunities presented to him.

The address was moved by Mr. W. H. Bennett, the bright young member for East Simcoe, who pronounced a panegyric upon the late Sir John Thompson, defended the Government's trade policy, and interpreted for the House the Remedial Order which has been made upon Manitoba. He maintained that the Government had simply passed on to Manitoba the judgment of the Privy Council, and that the Provincial Legislature would settle the perplexing question amicably and satisfactorily.

Mr. Belley, the representative of Chicoutimi, seconded the Address in a French speech, devoted almost entirely to the Manitoba school question. His was a song of praise and thankfulness to the Government for having undertaken to restore the rights of the Manitoba minority. He interpreted the order as meaning that that Government would enforce the order by legislation.

Mr. Laurier in severe terms criticized the Government for having delayed the opening of Parliament to a date when under ordinary circumstances it should be prorogued, and he attributed the delay to the dissension that had threatened to wreck the Government during the winter. Of young Sir Charles Tupper, he said, that he had folded his wings upon the Olympian Heights, but he had to come down to the level of mortal flesh. The wobbling one returned, and there was again a show of peace. Mr. Laurier claimed credit for three Liberal victories—Vercheres, Antigonish and Quebec West, showing that Mr. Dobell had succeeded in carrying the election in the last-named constituency on the Liberal trade policy. He discussed the trade policy of the Government in relation to the existing financial and commercial stagnation, and by the logic of admitted facts demonstrated that the depression is of a temporary character, but that it is the direct and inevitable result of the restrictive fiscal policy that has barred the progress of the country for the last 15 years.

In regard to the purposed admission of Newfoundland to the Canadian confederation, Mr. Laurier in his speech said that he would not offer any criticism until the negotiations were completed, but he made the suggestion that before any final step was taken it would be well to call upon the Imperial Parliament to settle the question of the French shore.

He said, "It would be nothing but fair, I make it as a friendly suggestion, it would be nothing but fair that the Imperial Parliament, which is responsible for that state of things, should be called upon before the island is taken into the confederation, to settle that question with the French Government, for so long as that difficulty will be pending we must close our eyes to the fact that it is possible that at any moment the whole country may be convulsed over one of those edxplosions of sentiment which we have unfortunately to ooften seen in this country."

The member for Chicoutimi, Mr. Belley, and the member for East Simcoe, Mr. Bennett, dealt at some length with that question which Mr. Bennett called a question of sentiment, the Manitoba school question. The language of the speech in that respect is very reserved. The elections are over now, and the language is far more discreet and temperate than it was while the elections were taking place.

This is what it says: "In conformity with a recent judgment of the Lords of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, to the effect that the dissentient minority of the people of Manitoba have a constitutional right of appeal to the Governor-General in Council against certain acts passed by the Legislature of the Province of Manitoba in relation to the subject of education, I have heard in council the appeal, and my decision thereon has been communicated to the Legislature of the said province. The papers on the subject will be laid before you."

It is not saying very much. I don't blame the Government for that. Perhaps it would be just as well that they should not say much upon that. A good deal was said by the Minister of Justice, by the Minister of Public Works and by the Secretary of State upon this question in the recent elections.

Mr. Ouimet: How much by you?

Mr. Laurier: The order in council here is termed a decision. I did not understand the term exactly, as I read that order, and I read it pretty carefully. It can hardly be called a decision, it is simply an invitation to the Government of Manitoba to deal with that question, and themselves to give the remedy for that which has been created by their own legislation. The invitation, I am sorry to say, is not couched in most fortunate language. It is most unfortunate that the language should have been in that dictatorial spirit which pervaded the order, but should rather have been in a conciliatory tone to the Government of Manitoba to remove the grievance which their legislature has created.

For my part I think that in the whole of these proceedings the Government have shown a sad want of discretion. If they had acted in a different spirit the first thing they should have done, in my estimation, was to appeal to the Government of Manitoba themselves to redress that which their own Legislature has created. But, sir, at a later period I shall have to deal with this question. I will not deal with it today at length, because after all, having heard to-day my hon. friend, Mr. Bennett, and my hon. friend, Mr. Belley, I ask myself what is the meaning of that order in council which is termed a decision?

I followed very carefully the language of the two gentlemen who moved and seconded the address, and I find it a repetition of what has been taking place of late in the Dominion of Canada. The order has one meaning in one section and another meaning in another section; the order has one meaning in a Catholic constituency and another meaning in a Protestant constituency. In a Protestant constituency it had one meaning last week, and in a Catholic constituency, it had another meaning last week.

In Vercheres and Antigonish it was a pledge that the Government had determined on interference, in the Protestant constituency of Haldimand, the order was simply the first and the last of the action to be taken by the Government, that the Government had thereby exhausted their action, and I took note of the words of the hon. member from Simcoe, and these are the very words he made use of: "All that has been done is the handing over of the case to the Legislature of Manitoba, there to be actually settled." I have also the words that were spoken by my hon. friend for Chicoutimi, and they were words of thanks, peace and exultation, because the Government had determined to render justice to the Catholic minority of Manitoba.

Which is which of these two interpretations? Is the interpretation placed upon it by Mr. Belley the right one? Does it mean interference actual by the Legislature or does it mean, as Mr. Bennett says, simply the handing over of the case to the Legislature of Manitoba, there to be dealt with and that the matter witll be amicably arranged? Until this is done I may be pardoned if I allude to my own self. I read the Conservative papers, and paper after paper has done me the honor of calling upon me to advise the advisers of His Excellency. I confess I am ambitious, perhaps, though unworthy I may be told, to advise His Excellency, but I am not ready to advise the advisers of His Excellency. Some of the papers said that if Mr. Laurier refused to advise His Excellency it was through wickedness, or others said it was through cowardice, and others said it was through incapacity. I acknowledged at once that it would be very presumptuous incapacity in me to rush in where these angels fear to tread. But, sir, I have only this to say, that I have no desire to create political capital out of this question. I had hoped the Government would solve the question as it should be solved, but I am not ready to offer advice to the advisers of His Excellency. I will wait until they bring in their measure. The Government never consulted me when they brought in their Gerrymander Act of 1882. The Government never consulted me when they brought in their Franchise Act of 1885. The Government never consulted me when they brought in their Gerrymander Act of 1892, and I spurn the idea that these gentlemen should call upon me to advise them as to what they should do. Let them act and we will judge them according to their acts."

Hon. G. E. Foster, who rose to reply at 5.30, heartily thanked Mr. Laurier for his kind and graceful words and compliments to the mover and seconder of the address. As to the late calling of Parliament he did not think it such a grave charge as Mr. Laurier would make it appear. Frankly speaking, the real reasons, the only reasons, were three: The death of their lamented chief, the Manitoba school question, which involved certain action on the part of the Government, which had been taken as promptly as possible, and thirdly the meeting of the Newfoundland Conference. If the bill was slim, as Mr. Laurier charged, the members would not be long kept away from their homes. Mr. Foster here reminded the House that Parliament had been called together several times since 1867 in April and March, and that this present case was not a new departure.

Referring to the French treaty, he said that it was essential to pass an act before the treaty could be ratified, in order to remove certain doubts which existed. He agreed with Mr. Laurier that it would be well if Newfoundland entered Confederation. Mr. Laurier thought the French shore question should be settled By Great Britain and France. There is a treaty. There are rights which France claims under that treaty. He thought, he might say without violating any confidence, because blue books had been already published, they had assumed a position at the present time when we may fairly say that, with the agreement between the Newfoundland Government and the Home Government, legislation is likely to be passed at the coming session of the Newfoundland Legislature which will settle that question agreeably to the Government of Newfoundland and the Government of Great Britain, and upon a basis which will be accepted by France.

Mr. Foster was followed by Sir Richard Cartwright, who for a period kept up a running fire of sarcasm at the expense of the Ministers, and then passed on to a discussion of the deficit, which now amounts, by Mr. Foster's own admission, to over $5,000,000.

Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper spoke briefly in reply, after which Hon. Mr. Mills of Bothwell moved the adjournment of the debate.

It will be resumed on Monday.

The estimates will probably be brought down on Monday, the budget will likely be delivered on Wednesday or Thursday, if the debate on the address is concluded.

There is considerable talk in parliamentary circles over the following paragraph, which appeared in L'Electeur a few days ago: "It is certain that a Federal Minister has exacted payment of a sum of $25,000 to secure the passage last session of a railway incorporation bill. This minister will be impeached during the early days of the session, and the whole transaction will be placed before the public. This modest 'rake off' has been discovered by another minister. The Government is making extraordinary efforts to hush the matter up. High personages have been informed of the matter, but they will not consent to make themselves accomplices of the guilty by keeping silence."

Hanged By a Falling Window Sash.

Ottawa, Ont., April 19.—Little Emma Thomas, the 7-year-old and only child of Mr. Fred Thomas, painter, of 416 Clarence-street, met a shocking death last evening. She became separated from her mother up town, and going home, tried to get into the house through a window. The sash fell on her neck and choked her to death. A companion first discovered the body hanging out of the window, and gave the alarm.

What Hurt Him.

"I don't mind your refusing me cold victuals, ma'am," said the time-worn and travel-stained pilgrim at the kitchen door, buttoning his faded remnant of a coat under his chin, "but when you call me a worthless tramp you do me a cruel injustice. I have a standing offer of $15, ma'am, from one of the best medical colleges in this country for my corporosity, just as it stands." And with a stately bow he turned away, shuffled down the steps and carried his insulted corporosity to the next kitchen.

THE VIOLIN OBBLIGATO.

The inhabitants of Schlosstadt were in a state of wild excitement, a fact which may be easily understood when it is remembered that it was a very musical town indeed, with a conservatoire, professors, students, and all the rest of it, and last, but not least, a very good opera house.

The placards, posted in every available space, announced for that evening not only the production of a new opera, but also the debut of a new singer in the title role, so it is hardly to be wondered at that all the tickets had been taken for some days, and that long before the hour fixed for the performance a crowd of eager applicants was besieging the door that led to the cheaper unreserved seats.

For a wonder, the expectation which had been raised to so high a pitch was not destined to be disappointed; the composer's work was pronounced on all sides to be an unqualified success, while the new prima donna took all hearts by storm. With every advantage of youth and beauty, added to an exquisite voice, clear, rich, flexible, and admirably trained, who could resist her? and from the moment of her first appearance till the final descent of the curtain there was never a dissentient voice to be heard. Where all was so perfect it seemed almost difficult to single out any point for special praise, but the ballad which ended the second act called forth perhaps the greatest applause. It was accompanied by a particularly beautiful and difficult violin obbligato, and Fraulein Elsa Thorberg had flatly refused to allow the first violin to the company to play it for her, and had insisted on selecting for her accompanist Josef Rofen, a young musician, who had only lately been engaged as a member of the orchestra. The first violin had sulked, the conductor had fumed and expostulated, but in vain; Fraulein Elsa had remained firm, and events proved that she had made no unworthy selection. The violin part was faultlessly rendered, and when Fraulein Elsa appeared in answer to a second call before the curtain, and by a pretty gesture of her hand towards the violinist indicated that he should be included in her triumph since he had so greatly contributed to it, the audience cordially reciprocated her feeling, and cries of "Bravo, Rofen!" mingled freely with the applause for Elsa. Even the first violin forgot his jealousy, and nodded a smiling approval of his rival's success.

"You have made my opera," exclaimed the delighted composer, as he led the singer back to the green-room at the close of the performance.

"Thanks to Herr Rofen," she answered, turning from the crowd of admirers who surrounded her to the young musician, and none of the praise showered on her had made her heart beat so high as his whispered words: "It would have made the old master proud indeed could he have heard you to-night, Elsa!"

For singer and violinist had been schoolfellows in the little mountain village, where the old schoolmaster, himself a true though self-taught musician, had discovered and trained the faculties of these two children, and at last succeeded in obtaining for both the advantages of a proper musical education. Now his hopes and predictions were accomplished, though he had not lived to witness their fulfilment. Had he been there to see and to hear, the old man's keen eyes would have twinkled as he caught the expression on Elsa's face as in the last lines of the ballad—

> Faithful to thee, love, faithful while
> life shall last,
> Faithful through life, in death, when
> life is past,

her gaze rested on Rofen's upturned face, and he would have known how to interpret the message flashed, as it were, from heart to heart.

Success after success waited on Elsa's career. The lovely prima donna was flattered, courted, and feted, and at first Rofen rejoiced in her triumphs; but soon his eyes were gradually opened to the fact that her welcome was not as ready for him as it used to be, and that his presence was often irksome to her. He was awkward and out of place in the gay throng that surrounded her, and he grew more and more jealous, irritable, and suspicious lovers' quarrels became more frequent, and, though they invariably ended in abject apologies from Rofen, the intervals of peace that followed were seldom of long duration. Reproaches and entreaties that had been met with tears and excuses at first were listened to with impatience now, and Rofen lived in alternate hope and despair.

"No, you do not really love me," she answered petulantly one day, when he was accusing her of neglecting him for the attentions of some richer admirer. "If you cared for me, as you say, you would be glad to see me happy—admired, and not be always teasing me with your tiresome sermons."

"Not love you!" exclaimed Rofen, his face white with sudden passion. "You know I care for nothing in this world save my music and you, and that to save you from harm I would be content never to sound another note again. I love you so well that nothing but death shall part us, and even after death my love would give my spirit power to watch and wait near you, and to hold you faithful to me in spite of all. You promised your faith to me as a little child, and by the heavens above us you shall keep it through life and death!"

Once again the opera of Thora was announced, and Rofen took his place with the other members of the orchestra among whom he was no favorite, on account of his moody and reserved manner. "I will know to-night if she really loves me still," he muttered to himself, as he tuned his violin, and set himself to wait as patiently as he might for the test on which he had resolved to stake all his hopes. Scene after scene had been played through, and now Rofen's heart was beating thick and fast, and his hand shaking, as he raised his bow to play the opening bars of the obbligato to the now well-known ballad. His eyes shone with a fierce light, as they were fixed on Elsa's face. Would hers meet them as before with their message of faith and love? Not yet. And now, in the pause between the verses, her eyes were wandering towards the side boxes, as if in search of some absent figure; then with a sudden glad flash of recognition the words burst forth:

> Faithful to thee, love, faithful while
> life shall last,

and Rofen knew his fate. Her face was turned away from him, her eyes fixed one some one back among the crowed audience.

There was a little snap, a slight discord, and a momentary pause in the music, till the first violin instantly took up the theme, and the singer went on apparently unheeding. "Rofen had broken his E string," some one said, but the made no attempt to replace it, and remained motionless in his place after the curtain had come down and the last sound of applause had died away. One of the other musicians touched him on the shoulder. "Are you coming out?" he asked, and then, noticing Rofen's ghastly face and trembling hands, he stopped with some well-meant offer of assistance, but receiving no answer he shrugged his shoulders at the violinist's sulkiness, as he termed it, and hurried after his companions.

Slowly Rofen raised himself from the chair, and stood for a moment facing the curtained stage, his wild eyes staring as though he could still see the scene lately enacted, his lips moving in voiceless words; then, raising his hand with a passionate gesture, he turned and left the theatre.

Next morning the town was ringing with tidings that Josef Rofen, the vio-lein Elsa Thorberg had fainted on hearing the news, and was now seriously ill. Very shortly afterwards her engagement at Schlosstadt was concelled, and by medical advice she spent the following winter in the South of France to recover from the effects of the shock that she had received.

By the end of the spring she had quite regained her health, and continued her successful career for the next two years, the only effect of the past occurrence being that no entreaties or payments would ever induce her to resume her role in the opera of Thora. After having engagements in most of the chief towns in Europe, her triumphs culminated in an engagement of another kind. Count von Golten, one of her most devoted admirers since her first appearance at Schlosstadt, and who had followed her persistently throughout her wanderings, had at last determined, in spite of all opposition from his family, to make the celebrated singer Countess von Golten.

Her last appearance in public was to take place where she had made her debut, and, if places had been difficult to obtain on that occasion, they were now a fabulous premium. Faust was the opera selected for the occasion; the house was packed from floor to ceiling, while crowds stood round the stage door to welcome the popular singer. Never had she looked more lovely, never had her voice been in more perfect order—an ideal Marguerite, they said.

The jewel scene had been reached, the orchestra had commenced the opening bars of the song, when a little movement of surprise ran through the house; Elsa had risen, and was coming slowly forward to the front of the stage, a slight gesture of her hand had stopped the music, and orchestra and audience watched in breathless wonder.

She moved as if in obedience to a strange invisible power, her eyes fixed on some object in front of her with a bewildered, terrified gaze. There was a little pause, and then, faint but clear and distinct, the notes of a violin sounded through the house—the obbligato to the balad from Thora, and, still as if obeying the awful, irresistible force, Elsa began the song. Not a sound from one of that crowded audience broke the spell that seemed to hang over the house; the musicians in the orchestra had looked at first for some signal from the conductor, but he sat paralysed and amazed, gazing with all the rest at the white, terror-stricken face of the singer, while still the notes of the unseen violin continued their weird strain, and still Elsa sang, her fascinated gaze riveted on the spot where Josef Rofen had sat in former days.

Line after line rang out till the last words—

> Faithful to thee, love, faithful while
> life shall last,
> Faithful through life, in death, when
> life is past!

and ending with a wild cry of "Josef, Josef, forgive!" Elsa fell unconscious to the ground.

Count von Golten's friends and relations might have saved themselves all their angry opposition: there was no wedding, for Elsa Thorberg, the famous singer, was a raving lunatic in the State asylum.

The Era of the Filthy Glove.

This season might not be inaptly described as the era of the filthy glove. At matinees, afternoon receptions, church, in stret cars and stages swarms of well-dressed women display hand covering so dirty as to be disgusting, to a person of refined taste, as soiled fingers. Among a hundred fashionably-dressed women picked out at random at any day-time function there will not be more than five pairs of spotless white gloves. Women could not be induced to wear dirty white lace bonnets, nor carry soiled handkerchiefs or dirty visiting cards, or wear dirt-begrimed collars or cuffs. Are dirty light gloves a whit daintier or more presentable than any of the objects named?

Fashion having decreed white gloves to be en rigueur, the lady from the suburban districts must also don them when she comes into town for the day's shopping. And she is to be seen on the avenue in full chase after bargains, her appropriate cloth costume disfigured by the dirty white gloves which loudly proclaim her lack of refined taste or even of commonplace cleanliness. But then she and the town lady belong to the sex that in the preceding generation, according to the chronicles, engaged in amateur street sweeping, substituting "trains" for brooms, and that carried a miscellaneous assortment of rarely-if-ever-cleaned "rats" on its head. The dirty gloves are, it must be confessed, an improvement on either of the foregoing, and in process of time these offenders against good taste may come to acknowledge that daintiness ought to stand first in a woman's calendar of social graces.—Vogue.

An Ancient Pie.

Let us not forget that to-day is the anniversary of the death of Sir Theodore Mayern, physician to James I., and Charles I. He amassed a prodigious deal of wealth and wrote the great cook book of the seventeenth century. Here is his recipe for "A City of London Pie": "Take 8 marrow bones, 18 sparrows, one pound of potatoes, a quarter of a pound of eringoes, two ounces of lettuce stalks, 40 chestnuts, half a pound of dates, a peck of oysters, a quarter of a pound of preserved citron, 3 artichokes, 12 eggs, 2 sliced lemons, a handful of picked barberries, a quarter of an ounce of whole pepper, half an ounce of sliced nutmeg, half an ounce of whole cinnamon, a quarter of an ounce of whole cloves, half an ounce of mace, and a quarter of a pound of currants. Liquor when it is baked with white wine, butter and sugar."

Philip D. Armour's Simple Life.

For a man of many millions, Mr. Armour's life is an amazing simple one. He has a good-sized house; on Prairie Avenue, but there are many men in Chicago, worth, say, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, who live with more ostentation than he. He belongs to several clubs, but he very rarely goes to any of them. He is very fond of his home, and he has the faculty, when there, of dropping everything that pertains to business. He sheds care as a duck's back sheds water. All his tastes are of the simplest sort. He is not a teetotaler, but he scarcely ever touches wine and never touches spirits. He is not a bookish man, and his reading is chiefly confined to newspapers and periodicals. But his books are living men; his favorite study, character. And I take it that no man in the United States can read character more shrewdly and clearly than he. Nowadays he leaves his office at three or four o'clock in the afternoon and goes for a drive. He loves to handle the reins over a spanking team of nervy horses. Such exercise draws the blood from the brain, sets the muscles tingling, and stirs to healthy action the physique of the man who spends the greater portion of his day within doors. He usually drives first to the Institute, and after chatting a little with Doctor Gunsaulus, and looking in at some of the classrooms to see if anything is wanted, he has a spin along the Lake Shore Drive, and then perhaps calls in at the homes of his sons, Ogden and Philip, Jr. He always spends his evenings in his own house, with his sweet and gracious wife, to whose influence he ascribes the origin of much of the work which other men call noble, but which he calls sometimes "play," and sometimes "exercise for the ideas."—McClure's Magazine.

A HIGH-WATER FRIENDSHIP

More than 60 years ago two boys became friends under very peculiar circumstances, and the friendship lasted a lifetime.

Thomas Ladd, then about 15, and of an adventuresome and fearless disposition, was crossing, or attempting to cross, an overflow channel caused by the Mississippi breaking over its banks in a time of high water. He was in a pirogue, or dug-out canoe, and when he had come to about midway of the current, which was turbulent, a floating log struck the little craft and capsized it.

Under ordinary circumstances this would have been a mishap of slight importance to a boy of Thomas Ladd's disposition. He was an expert swimmer and quite used to the exigencies of river life; but, unfortunately, when the moment of collision with the drifting log came he was standing upright in the pirogue, trying to push another threatening obstacle out of his way. The sudden lurch flung him headlong, and his right arm was broken by falling across the log, and so cast off his self-control by pain, and with but one arm to swim with, he came near drowning forthwith. The muddy waves were rolling high, which made it very difficult at least, to keep from strangling, and the floating logs and fragments of boughs added greatly to the moment's trouble.

Pluck never fails to show itself, however, and the boy was plucky to a fault. After the first shock of surprise and pain, Thomas got his head above water, and finding that he could not trust to his one arm in swimming amid such hindrances, laid hold of the first floating thing that came near him. This proved to be a piece of sawn timber, a beam from some building destroyed by the raging stream, and of sufficient size to bear up his weight.

What alarmed him most after his first thrill was over, and he was sufficiently at himself to consider the whole bearing of his misfortune, was the fact that night, moonless and cloudy, already began to cast a gloom over the expanse of water between the funereal walls of forest on either swampy bank. He shouted for help, without the least expectation of being heard. His father's plantation house was two miles away, and besides no voice could be heard very far above the tumult of the waves and the roar of a strong wind in the woods.

Those were days when there was danger of no light sort in going alone and unarmed in the wild forest. Even if Thomas Ladd succeeded in reaching the shore a wolf, a bear, or a panther might meet him there. He had drifted far below the plantation landing, and his canoe turned over. Still he clung to the beam, and now and again yelled right lustily for help, as he went up and down with the rapid roll of the waves and plunged on and on along the current's central line. Night fell with a fine fog-like rain that added to the darkness, and the boy's voice became hoarse; his hurt arm throbbed and shot pains into his shoulder and neck; meantime he lost all reckoning of distance or direction.

Clinging to the piece of timber was no easy task, for it rocked and tumbled and jumped, being lifted and let fall by the irregular action of the waves. His uninjured arm became numb and his body in the water was chilled. Every moment seemed the last; he was in despair; but a native strain of combativness sustained him and kept him clinging desperately and calling as loudly as his tired throat would let him while at irregular intervals, and always unexpected, his head went under water and he had to hold his breath to keep from strangling.

It was pitch dark; drift-wood beat against him, and sometimes almost crushed him. He was beginning to weaken in spirit, as he had long ago done in body, when he heard a voice near him, a negro's voice, strong and not unkindly.

"Who dat dar?"

Strange to say, this sudden revelation of the possibility of succor unnerved the poor lad, and, with a cry half joy, half despair, he lost his hold on the beam.

Even then, however, his pluck would not wholly desert him. Desperately he struggled, turning on one side and swimming with his almost paralyzed arm. At the same time a vague form like that of a large monkey astride of a floating log, was bobbing up and down near him.

"What dat dar?" it repeated.

"Help me, oh quick! help me!" cried the boy.

"Don't know 'bout dat," was the cool reply. "Who is you', enyhow?"

"I'm Tom Ladd. My arm's broken. I can't swim any longer. I shall drown."

The water strangled him while he tried to speak, and his voice was strangely harsh.

"Is you Col. Ladd's little boy?"

"Yes; quick, help."

Thomas Ladd had reached the farthest limit of his strength and dragged himself. He was actually sinking when a band of iron gripped his shoulder, and then he lost consciousness, or rather he which he did not emerge until after daylight had come on the following morning.

He was lying on a tussock at the root of a huge cypress tree. Under him was a wet but soft bed of leaves and swamp grass, over which was spread an old and tattered coat. Beside him sat a short, heavy negro about 20 years of age, whose countenance was anything but attractive. Bare headed, woolly, flat-nosed, thick-lipped, with eyes deep set and restless like those of a wild animal, he was chewing tobacco while he hugged his knotty knees and seemed to be hearkening.

In fact, far away in the distance there was something well worth listening to, the peculiar baying of two or three bloodhounds.

Thomas Ladd heard and recognized those cries. Moreover, he instantly knew what it all meant, for he had many a time seen a run-away slave tracked down with well-trained dogs. Although confused in mind on first opening his eyes, the whole situation quickly revealed itself to him. The bloodhounds were at fault up the river where the negro had taken to the water, and they were hunting up and down the channel's bank for the lost trail. Of course, they would probably soon find it; for, although the boy did not know it, the negro had been compelled to land on the same side of the water from which he had entered in.

"Are you a run-away?" Thomas feebly demanded, as soon as he could speak.

"Ya-as," drawled the negro.

"Whom do you belong to?"

"Gin'l Raybu'n."

"What did you run off for?"

"'Cause," said the black gloomily.

The boy was too feeble to press his inquiries further; his arm ached atrociously, and he was chilled and sore to the centre of every bone in his frame.

Now, it turned out that the bloodhounds did not find the track again that day, which was the fault of Gen. Rayburn's overseer, who, concluding that Peter, that was the negro's name, had crossed the overflow stream, took the dogs over to the other side, where a long and vain search up and down was made until darkness forced them to quit.

Meantime Col. Ladd and his large force of slaves were scouring the country in every direction in an almost hopeless search for Thomas, and it so came to pass that Rayburn's overseer and his bloodhounds were at length joined by the Colonel just before they came upon poor Peter, still faithfully watching beside the suffering boy.

This was about 10 of the clock in the morning of the second day. The sky had cleared; the sun shone; warm and sweet breathed the southern air through moss-hung cypress wood, and to add a spring-time touch, a mocking bird sang its first March song in the thicket on a bit of hummock.

Col. Ladd clasped his son's cramped and shivering form to his breast. The overseer rudely collared Peter.

"My dear boy," almost sobbed the father.

"Father," weakly pleaded Thomas, "you mustn't let him whip the negro, he saved my life."

Already Peter was tied to a tree.

"You thieving black scamp," growled the overseer. "I'll whale every inch of your body," and the lash was hungry for his back, when Col. Ladd interfered. Thomas had with difficulty told his story.

The end of it all was that Col. Ladd bought Peter, paying $1,150 in cash to Gen. Rayburn for him, which was 20 per cent. more than his market value in New Orleans at that time.

And Peter was given as a birthday present to Thomas. So began the intimate companionship of the two. When the War came and went, leaving all of the negroes free, Peter refused to have his liberty. Thomas Ladd died in 1892, but Peter is still alive, and from his lips I had this true story.

"Yah sah, boss," he said to me in conclusion, "Mars Thomas was allus mighty good to dis poor' ole niggah, an' w'en 'he died he gi'me dis yer plantation an' five mules. W'at I lub him de mos' fo'? W'y cause he keep dat 'fernal ole oberseer from a whirpin' me, dat's w'at!"

Items for the Farmer.

If the lawn is sickly, get some wood ashes and apply them freely. There will be no danger of applying too much. The rain will carry the soluble portions down to the roots. After the grass begins to start out, apply nitrate of soda at the rate of 100 pounds per acre on the lawn.

Do not buy trees over a year old. They do not have sufficient roots to supply them with plant food compared with younger trees. Cut back the tops, so as to give the roots less work to do. A young tree with plenty of roots will overtake those a year older and also be more thrifty and free from disease.

Rhubarb roots should be set out early. Only a few plants are necessary for a family supply. The soil should be rich and wel manured. Once established on a farm or garden rhubarb will cost but little for labor thereafter.

For a few rows in a garden the planting of onion sets may be done carefully, but where they are grown extensively the rows are made shallow and the sets scattered along the row without regard to their position in the rows. In this market the Danvers, or yellow variety is preferred.

When plum trees are grown in the poultry yard, relying on the hens to keep down the curculio, the process of jarring the trees must not be overlooked. Treat the trees in the usual manner and when the depredators reach the ground the hens will prevent their escape.

The use of straw or other wrapping on rose bushes as a protection in the winter season is not done to keep the cold away, but to avoid the light and warmth of the sun. The object is to prevent them from being alternately warmed and frozen. It is the warmth—not the cold—that damages them in winter.

What is a wife? A trial.
What is a child? A nuisance.
What is the devil? A fable.
What is good? Hypocrisy.
What is evil? Detection.
What is wisdom? Selfishness.
What is happiness? A delusion.
What is friendship? Humbug.
What is generosity? Imbecility.
What is money? Everything.

A WOMAN'S ROMANCE.

What was this?

In the Church of Sts. Timothy and Cole there had never before been such a sensation. Never had such a thrill run through the decorous pews, where the women wore such entrancing (imported) habiliments. To have the bishop refuse to carry on the marriage ceremony then in progress! Such things had been heard of in novels. But in real life who, even in a church so very "high" as Sts. Timothy and Cole, and even among people perfectly familiar with the frequently announced determination of the bishop (the highest bishop on the bench) never to confer the sacrament of marriage on a divorced person, had ever experienced anything similar?

Divorced. That was it, evidently. The creature who had been calling herself Miss Vanness was not what she seemed. She had a past. Eight out of ten of the feminine friends of the Runkle family had been convinced of the fact before-hand. The men, on the other hand, had reserved their judgment, though abundantly conscious that, as to the matter of beauty, there could be no question of reserved opinion where Miss Lilith Vanness was concerned. Hers was fairness of the unchallenged, the extraordinary type.

In the awful pause that followed the austerely, distinctively spoken words in the rolling voice of the bishop:

"Cause is known to me that makes it impossible for me to unite this woman to this man in the holy bonds of matrimony."

The bride turned her white face slowly away from the altar and toward the gaping congregation. The groom—poor weak-minded, weak-bodied Philip Runkle! how could he be expected to prove equal to such a situation?—had grasped the altar rail. One of the white-robed clergy assisting the bishop—he was the rector of the Church of Sts. Timothy and Cole, and had known Miss Lilith Vanness without knowing of any impediment to her union with the scion of the great house of Runkle, and hence felt himself rebuked and humiliated by his ecclesiastical chief in almost the same degree as the tall figure standing before him under the snowy bridal veil—put out a dismayed hand to support his parishioner.

But already the best man, one of the numerous cousins of the Runkles, had performed that office. Even as he did so, Philip Runkle tottered, and was carried, more than led, into the vestry, while a flutter of horror and burning indignation swept through the well-filled front pews, where all the ramifications of the Runkle connection stood assembled, in their diamonds and their bravery.

Of Vanness's connections there were none, and the bride still stood there alone.

Immovable she stood. But one watching the white face with intense attention—and one such there was in that church—would have seen two distinct emotions, each containing a world of shades, pass across it. She had been stunned at first. To have thought herself safe, at last, and then—to have the past come back upon her in such guise at such instant!

Horrible! Those great eyes had given one wild look of frightened appeal to the throng of startled people before her. Startled they were, and full of sympathy for the wretched groom; but for her—pitiless. And even as that frightened look went around the church she realized how useless was its passionate petition; she was an alien, condemned. She raised her head on its swanlike throat with sudden, desperate defiance.

She asked no quarter. She followed, with an imperceptible motion of contemptuous eyes, the pitiable, prostrate form of the man who in a few seconds would have been her husband, and who had been powerless to stand by her in her need, and the slender foot, in its white satin slipper, stepped down the short carpeted flight from the altar, and the solitary figure, erect, majestic, scorning its humiliation, and those who stared upon it from both sides of the aisle began its low descent of the church.

Then those who stared had the second great sensation of the day. For, as she had gone midway toward the great portals, there issued from his pew Carroll Merritt, and there, in the face of the congregation, he offered her his arm. Under his protection the discarded bride reached the door, and the crowd on the steps outside saw him put her into the carriage and stand bare-headed, as before a queen, as the latter drove away, with a fleeting, final glimpse of two unfathomable eyes burning upon him darkly from between the folds of white tulle.

Meanwhile, in the vestry, the bishop was saying, with authoritative distinctness, to the rector of the Church of Sts. Timothy and Cole:

"I deeply regret, my dear brother. But I only blame you in so far as that the bride being completely unknown to the groom's family, and in fact to the whole city, it might have been judicious and seemly to make a few inquiries previously. You know that, among our group of the church, the re-marriage of divorced women and men is more and more discountenanced. Had my dear friends, the Runkles not sent for me to officiate at this marriage, it would, very iniquitously, have taken place. I deplore the very unpleasant necessity I have been under of making a public display.

"Had I arrived in the city earlier and seen the bride before she came to the altar, that might have been avoided, for I knew her the moment that I saw her, though I had only once met her, before, and that was precisely on an occasion connected with her divorce. But the sancity of matrimony and the glory of the Lord must be considered first." And the speaker appeared to swell out more majestically under his silken robe and lawn sleeves.

It was a stormy, winter night. To the eye of the solitary passenger getting out at the station of this small western town the dreariness of the scene emphasized all the thoughts that had been accumulating within him during the long voyage. He was on her track! She had not covered it up so well that it could elude his pursuit. He had followed trails and indications, spared no ingenuity and expense. No past can remain blank to one who puts in operation all possible inquiry for the detection of what he wishes to know.

He had hunted her down! The man caught his breath with a quick contraction of the strong lips. The pang that shot through him was almost unbearable in its mingled inquisite pain and rapture. "Mrs. Vanness?" said the one cabman in waiting under the flaring electric light, without the station. He knew no such person's address. But the stranger produced street and number. A quarter of an hour later they stopped before the small frame house.

It stood, detached, on a lately opened up street. One light burned in a window. A little colored girl opened the door and seemed at a loss to know what to do with a visitor. The species was evidently unknown in that small abode.

"Tell Mrs. Vanness a gentleman wishes to see her." He would not give name or card. In the wild Quixotism of her present scheme of life she might refuse to see him.

The small maid vanished, awe-struck at this unwonted occurrence, and the tall man waited. With a mechanical motion he touched a letter in his breast pocket. It was signed "Lilith," and it had been sent in answer to the one that he had written on the night of the terrible scene at the Church of Sts. Timothy and Cole.

Other letters he had written in plenty, urging, appealing, pleading his cause; this one only had brought a reply. Her persistent silence afterward had only affirmed and confirmed what she then had said, and it had been a definite refusal. She had, she wrote, made a despairing attempt to leave behind her an intolerable past; she had been fitly punished; she had not been what she had palmed herself off to be; she had deceived a man for whom, in addition, she had not had a spark of love, into marrying her, because she longed for an assured position, for the safety of an honored name, but she had been taught how useless any attempt to bury the bygone life must ever be; she relinquished the effort once for all.

This was what she wrote. And to him who offered her his life, his love, the eternal protection of an undying devotion, as that day in the Church of Sts. Timothy and Cole, he had offered her the outward protection of his arm at the moment of her direst need, she said that she could never, would never, accept his sacrifice. That had been all. But other things he had found out since, things to him terrible. What could she mean, he asked of himself regretfully, as he stood there, what could she mean by throwing away her youth, her bloom, the priceless treasures of her personality, in this crazy scheme of trying to follow up and to redeem the low creature from whom she had for five years been divorced, who never had any claim upon her and who, in their married life, had made this world a hell for her? Bah! She was mad. Much suffering had turned her brain. He would teach her to see things rightly, to brush away the cobwebs.

"Lilith!" By her name he called her. She had entered, and, seeing him, had fallen back a step, white as the collar above the plain black dress she wore, and clinging to a chair.

He came up to her and put out his hand to touch her.

"No, no," she weakly panted.

"Why?" cried Carroll Merritt's strong, impassioned tones. "Why, Lilith? You are shocked to see me? Ah, my untamed bird, you see that love has a keen scent and can find the loved one at the world's end! Did you think to escape me? Lilith, dear child, I know all—all your past life, your marriage to a man who ill-used you, dragged you in the dust, and ended by disgracing you through his connection with men who were tried and convicted for a financial misdemeanor. I know, and it is nothing to me. I love you."

"Stop!" she exclaimed wildly, throwing out her hands. "You do not know that I, too, was implicated in that dreadful charge; that I, too, was tried"—she shuddered and covered her face.

"And acquitted I know that also. He had taken advantage of your ignorance and used you as a blind. And it was after that you went into another state and got a separation. And the lawyer who secured it was the brother of the bishop who came that day to the eastern city to marry you to Philip Runkle."

Again she shuddered and her hands closed more tightly over her face.

"The bishop knew of that part of your past. But he did not know, as I do, that personally, my white darling, your life has ever been blameless; that—"

"No, not blameless. For, when I had turned the leaf upon that dreadful past, and had gone where no one knew of it, I played an odious comedy. I wished—" her voice broke, then she regained her self-composure; "Oh! I wished so to be happy!—And at peace—And I was struggling for my daily bread, and Philip Runkle met me, and thought me pretty, and offered me marriage, and I continued to deceive him, and all his friends—I did not understand the temptation! Did they not think it heinous enough that he should marry a poor governess?

"Had they known what the poor governess had been through, how could it ever be that he should marry me? And that was not all my sin, the sin of deception. I sinned against my heart," she drew herself up, and her eyes looked with a steady, starry light into his. "I sinned against you. I was engaged to Philip Runkle when I first met you, but I knew at once that you loved me, though no word was spoken—were you not Philip Runkle's friend?—and I—loved you."

"Lilith!"

In an ecstasy he would have clasped her.

"No!" Quickly, firmly, she withdrew herself, "I tell you—because we part here and now. Oh, I loved you truly—truly. But you were less rich than Philip Runkle and I longed so for ease after the long, fierce battle. See how weak I was. And so, leave me now. I have gone back in spirit to my past. The man who was once husband to me is not far from here. He has sunk very low. He needs a friend. The rest of my life shall be dedicated to trying to help him and such as him—"

"By heaven, no!" was the cry that came from Carroll Merritt's lips, and he drew her to him and held her with an iron grasp before which all resistence melted feebly away. "Never! I have you! I keep you! You are mad—stark mad. It is my business to cure you. I shall do it."

Still he held her, no relaxing in his grip. She looked up, and realized that he was her master. A little trembling seized her. Then suddenly her head sank upon his shoulder and she closed her eyes.

"I am so tired," she murmured. "So tired!"

He kissed her.

"Awake to a new life, beloved. You can be tired no longer. Your hand has found its sure staff at last."

For Cheese Selling.

A device which removes the element of guess work from the weight of a piece of cheese when cutting it has been recently patented by F. J. Siewers, of Galena, Ill. A cheese is supported on a platform or table connected with a dial, the moving of the platform a certain distance causing the dial to indicate a pound or fraction thereof or any desired weight, when a knife will be brought into operation to cut the exact amount designated on the dial from the cheese. The cut is made on a line drawn from the centre, the operative mechanism of the dial having been previously set in accordance with the known weight of the entire cheese. It is an interesting invention, but a good deal depends upon whether cheesemongers as a whole are particularly anxious to cut precisely the weight of cheese that is ordered, and not an ounce or two over.

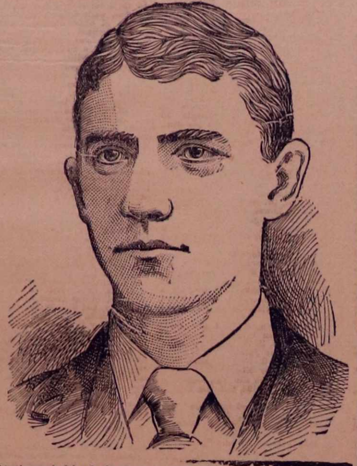
Paine's Celery Compound Saves the Life of M. D. Arthur.



No end to the wonderful and almost marvellous cures effected every week by Paine's Celery Compound, the medicine that saves life in time of greatest peril and danger.

M. D. Arthur, a well-known young man of Chelmsford, Ont., says:—

"With great pleasure I write about your wondrous medicine, Paine's Celery Compound. I was laid up with scars all over my face and neck, the result of blood poisoning. While in that condition, I could not sleep at night, I had no appetite, and could not attend to my work. I tested the skill of all the doctors in the district, and used their medicines, but was not benefitted.

"I think I was miraculously saved at last. My aunt came here from Campbellford, and brought with her some Paine's Celery Compound which she was then using to advantage. She advised me to use the medicine, and I did so to please her. I bless the day I commenced with Paine's Celery Compound. In two weeks I was so much better that I could go out, and in three weeks I was able to resume work again.

"I cannot say sufficient in praise of the great healing medicine. I would not be without it if I were obliged to pay ten dollars a bottle for it."

Now is the time to cleanse the system, to purify the blood, to brace up and strengthen the nerves, to make the digestive organs work harmoniously, so that perfect health may be enjoyed when summer comes. Paine's Celery Compound does the good work for every man and woman

FLASH-LIGHT TRIUMPH.

THE BURSTING OF A SOAP BUBBLE CAUGHT BY THE CAMERA.

Lord Rayleigh, in delivering his second lecture at the Royal Institution, recently, gave an explanation of some of the methods he had recourse to when endeavoring to become acquainted with what, on account of rapidity of motion, would otherwise elude observation. The most obvious method of observing what was going on when changes were very rapid was, he said, to get an instantaneous picture. For this purpose the degree of "instantaneity" had to be varied considerably. By means of the magnesium flash, produced by blowing powder of magnesium into a flame, a brilliant light of great photographic qualities was generated. Although it occupied about the tenth part of a second, and was instantaneous enough for babies and many other objects, it would not do for all purposes. The electric spark, however, served for almost anything that ever happened, as it could be reduced in duration below one-millionth part of a second, during which time there were not many things which could do much. This method might be turned to excellent account in all kinds of observations. He had used it himself in many cases when he did not know in the least what was going to be revealed. Many complicated phenomena moved so quickly that it was impossible to know what took place, but by the light of the flash one could see what transpired at some particular moment, and that would often give the key to the enigma. He himself had photographed the breaking up of a soap bubble, a process which occupied between the two-hundredth and three-hun-

TRIUMPHS OF SCIENCE.

Argon Experiments Develop a New Theory of Aurora Borealis.

A dispatch from London says: The detection of gas argon in the atmosphere is being followed by a rapid series of discoveries of great interest. The chemists have long known theoretically of the existence of another element, which is called helium, and which was revealed by the spectroscope in the sun's rays. It is not known to exist on this planet. Professor Ramsay a few days ago, in order to find whether there was something in the world with which argon would keep company, was examining some extremely rare earth found in Norway and known as cleveite. When this mineral is treated with a weak sulphuric acid it gives off a gas which has hitherto been regarded as nitrogen. The professor found by close examination that it is not nitrogen, but argon, and, moreover, there was associated with it another gas which he found to be, to use his own words, "gas which had not yet been separated." He submitted it to Professor Crooke, and the result is to show that the gas thus found is helium.

M. Berthelot, continuing in his experiments in Paris, found that in manipulating argon it developed at an ordinary pressure a magnificent fluorescent substance of greenish yellow color, and characterized by a spectrum similar to that of the aurora borealis. From this he deduced that the northern lights were caused by the fluorescent matter derived from argon and engendered through the influence of electrical emanations developed in the atmosphere.

Wool Scouring With Naphtha.

Napthia is used as the cleansing substance in a new method of scouring wool. A pump forces the naptha through the wool, extracting all the natural oil, and it is claimed that the naptha does not injure the fibre of the wool, as alkali cleansing, but leaves the fleece in better condition than when cleansed by any other process. Another important feature of the new method is that after the grease is extracted from the wool it may be again extracted from the naptha in a pure state, thereby becoming valuable as a medicinal agent or for a saponification into the purest of soaps. A plant working this method is said to have secured 500,000 pounds of wool, and a product of 30,000 pounds in pure wool oil had been saved.

A Compass Improvement.

A modification of the ordinary "trough" compass has been devised by Captain P. J. Dixon of Beaufort House, Walham Green, S. W., says London Invention. In its modified form both the dial and base are of transparent material, so that even on a dark night the points of the compass, it is stated, may be read by the diffused light of the clouds by holding the instrument above the head, or a transparent map, when such is available, can be placed under the compass, and over a phosphorescent surface may be examined, the points of the compass at the same time being clearly visible.

"Fire Globe" for Room Warming.

A "fire globe" for warming apartments has been invented by the Rev. T. Batty of Colchester. The globe can be fixed upon any ordinary gas bracket and the inventor guarantees that it shall increase the heat of the gas flame by 300 per cent. and warm a bedroom in an hour for the cost of one farthing. A modification of the same device makes it applicable to foot warmers.

The Color of Man.

The color of the skin in the various races of man has never yet been scientifically accounted for, although numerous mythological stories have been told and senseless theories advanced as reasons for the remarkable variations in hue. Nor have we any certain data concerning the color of the cuticle of the primeval man, the original "lord of creation." A pretty African legend is that he was as black as the proverbial ace of spades and that the present pale color of the Caucasian race is the result of the scare God gave Adam at the time of the fall.

It is proper to state here that the same legend says that the present black race are descendants of one of Adam's sons that was born and left Eden before the great change in color overtook our first parents. The Chinese believe that the original man was a creature half god and half man, and that his color came about as a result of bathing in a river of liquid gold. The Mussulmans, and American Indians and several oriental tribes and nations account for their prevailing red or copper color by telling the story of the great being creating the first pair from red kaolin, the common fire clay of the potter shops.—Exchange.

Fine Sentiments.

Believe me, whether of dignity, whatever strength we have within us will dignify and make strong the labors of our hands; whatever littleness degrades our spirit will lessen them and drag them down. Whatever noble fire is in our hearts will burn also in our work; whatever purity is ours will chasten and exalt it, for as we are so our work is, and what we sow in our lives that, beyond a doubt, we shall reap for good or ill in the strengthening or defacing of whatever gifts have fallen to our lot.—Sir Frederic Leighton.

I had a severe attack of the grip in the winter, and after getting over the fever I did not seem to gather strength, and had no ambition. Hood's Sarsaparilla proved to be just what I needed. The results were very satisfactory, and I recommend this medicine to all who are afflicted with rheumatism or other

$1000 FOR A BROKEN HEART

Suing a Farmer Widower for His Faithlessness.

LETTER WRITING WAS HIS FAILING

A Toronto Hired Girl Seeking a Financial Balm for Breach of Promise by an Uxbridge Swain—His Parents Objected to the Match.

Toronto, April 20. — John Thomas Moore, a young farmer of the Township of Scott, living near Sanford P.O., is defendant in a suit instituted against him by Miss Lizzie Nixon, who resides in Dundas-street, Toronto. Miss Nixon wants $1000 damages for alleged breach of promise of marriage. Moore is a widower of 26. It is claimed that three months after the death of his first wife he commenced courting Lizzie, who at the time was visiting friends in the neighborhood. When she returned to Toronto they corresponded regularly, and his 33 epistolatory contributions, which fanned love's young flame, are now in the possession of Solicitor G. M. Gardner, who has been retained to look after the interests of the young lady. Several times in those letters reference is made to the proposed marriage and they are to be used as part of the fair plaintiff's case.

During last summer a Miss Nixon was employed as a domestic in the house of Mr. Levy, then residing at 129 Bathurst-street. She claims that she introduced Moore, and he was received there as her intended husband. In September, 1894, Moore was anxious that the marriage should take place immediately. As twelve months had not elapsed since the death of her predecessor in the young man's affections, Miss Nixon objected, and a postponement to last January was reluctantly agreed to by defendant.

Miss Nixon quitted Mr. Levy's service in December last to make preparations for the wedding, and the requisite trousseau was purchased under the supervision of the twain that was to be.

Moore returned to his home near Uxbridge, promising to meet Miss Nixon at her home near Orillia early in January, when the marriage was to take place. This promise he kept, but for some reason or other the marriage did not then take place and the bridegroom returned home.

In the meantime, it is alleged, Moore's parents became suspicious that their matrimonial intentions with regard to their son, which involved the only daughter of a wealthy neighbor, were in danger of being frustrated, and Mrs. Moore was despatched to Toronto to reconnoitre. She soon received the unpleasant information that the young man was then at Orillia for the purpose of being married to someone else, but she was overjoyed to learn, when she returned and met her son, that he was still free, and in a few days he wrote to Miss Nixon definitely breaking off the engagement. This she resented and demanded an explanation, and went to Sanford, accompanied by a lady friend, to receive it in person. No very satisfactory explantaion was forthcoming, except that Moore informed her he did not think that she had conducted herself with him with quite the amount of maidenly reserve that he considered was proper. This the plaintiff indignantly denied and the trouble began, for further overtures were evidently out of the question. Mr. Gardner was consulted and the faithless swain was notified that he must apologize for remarks he had made and either marry the girl or pay her $1000.

The writ was served on the 12th inst., and the proceedings that will follow are likely to be spirited and interesting.

LETTER TAMPERED WITH.

Toronto and London Mail Clerks To Be Interviewed Concerning the Alleged Tampering

Toronto, April 20. — The post-office authorities at Toronto and London are trying to find the post-office employe who recently tampered with a letter addressed to Mr. John Simpson, clerk of London West. After the Government auditor, Mr. J. B. Laing, had made his examination of the ex-treasurer's books, and reported a shortage of $904, Mr. Simpson asked for a detailed account. Mr. Laing, who lives in Toronto, furnished the information asked for, forwarding it in a long, blue envelope, securely sealed with wax at both ends, and bearing two cents more than the required postage. The letter reached London in the evening, and on the following morning was delivered to Mr. Simpson. One end of the envelope, however, was torn open, and the letter appeared as if it had been through a threshing machine. On the back was a certificate that the letter was in that condition when it reached the London postoffice. It was signed by the two night clerks who assort the mails —William Nicholls, the ex-treasurer of the village, and Frank J. Deveney. Mr. Simpson, upon receiving the letter, notified London West's councillors, and it was decided to ask for an investigation. Mr. Fisher, assistant inspector, readily granted it, and enquiries will be made of the Toronto clerks, the mail clerk on the train in which the letter came to London, and the clerks in the city post-office.

OSCAR WILDE COMMITTED.

Application To Be Made For His Admission To Bail

London, April 19.—Oscar Wilde and his friend Alfred Taylor were arraigned in the Bow-street Police Court at noon for further examination. Wilde looked greatly fatigued and really ill. His hair was ruffled and his general appearance indicated carelessness.

Charles Parker was called to the stand and testified that Taylor upon one occasion told him he had gone through the marriage ceremony with young Mayer, he (Taylor) wearing woman's clothing After the ceremony there was a wedding breakfast, followed by an orgie.

Other witnesses were called to the stand and gave similar damaging testimony. At the conclusion of the examination Wilde and Taylor were fully committed for trial in the Central Criminal Court, Old Bailey. Application was made for bail, but it was refused.

Wilde, in reply to the question whether he had anything to say, said: "Not at present."

Counsel for Oscar Wilde has announced his intention to apply to the Court of Queen's Bench for the admission of his client to bail, on the ground that the admission to bail of a prisoner is compulsory under the statute.

THE "KNOCKING DOWN" CASES.

Decision Reserved On Application To Quash On Technical Grounds.

Montreal, April 19.—The hearing of the evidence in the Grand Trunk conductors' case was concluded, and counsel delivered their addresses. Mr. H. W. Walker, chief accountant of the Grand Trunk, was examined for the defence and produced conductors' reports, from which it seemed that on the occasions upon which they had been accused of "knocking down" fares, the conductors had made returns of the full amounts collected by them on the car.

When the examination of witnesses had been concluded, counsel for the defence asked that the indictment be quashed on various technical grounds. The court reserved its decision.

Phil Armour in His Office.

The first time I saw Armour was in his office, a bustling nest of desks and scribbling men and ticking instruments; a working hive where they never see a drone, except he comes to beg, as one fellow did while I was standing there. Armour is the most accessible man in the United States, or, at all events, he was so until recently. It is only within two years that he has had a private office. Until that time his desk stood with the others in a big room, and it was surrounded by the desks of the heads of departments. It was the easiest thing in the world to get to him. But now a corner of the room has been cut off by a plain partition, making an unpretentious nook, in which the director of great enterprises spends the greater portion of his working hours, with his touch upon the pulse of the commercial world. The chief office of Armour & Company is in the Home Insurance building in La Salle Street. It is a big apartment sprinkled with desks, and everybody seems to be prodigiously busy with the exception of one man. This man is Armour, and that is characteristic of him. He luxuriates in work, but he makes no parade of it. He works as a great general does, a Wellington, a Bonaparte. He impresses me as having Napoleonic characteristics. He would be the coolest man in Chicago, and has been so, in times of panic. He is most himself and most absolutely his own master, and the master of affairs, when he faces a crisis. His ease of manner is one of the most remarkable attributes of the man. You see him walking slowly, quietly, and apparently without object through his big establishment; but nothing passes there that escapes the keenness of his vision, and there is not a page in all the volumes of character that are collected in the lives of all these men and youths who daily surround him that he has not closely scanned.—McClure's Magazine.

G. T. R. IN POOR SHAPE.

The Half Yearly Report Just Issued.

GREAT DECREASE IN RECEIPTS.

The Revenue From Freight and Passenger Traffic Fell Off Over a Million and a Quarter During the Six Months —The Directors Explain.

London, April 20.—The Times and other leading journals this morning advise the Grand Trunk Railway stock-holders not to send proxies to the directors for the approaching annual meeting on April 30, though some of the papers doubt the fitness of Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson to control the great railway.

The directors of the road have issued a circular, earnestly asking for proxies and declaring their integrity. The circular states that the credit of the company has been greatly imperilled by the recent agitations, but the directors contend that the unfortunate condition of the road is due, not to mismanagement, but to circumstances entirely beyond the control of the board of directors or of the management in Canada.

The directors' half-yearly report, which was issued last evening, shows the net revenue deficiency to be $488,420. The passenger receipts decreased $902,305, and the local freight decreased 77,000,000 tons, while through freight shows a decrease of 41,000,000 tons. The gross receipts declined 10 per cent. and the working expenses declined 11 per cent.

The board in their annual report defend the acquisition of affiliated lines, and publish a report made by Sir Joseph Hickson, showing that the Grand Trunk received from these lines in 10 years $29,000,000 in traffic, while the deficiencies to make up the interest on payments were $1,000,000, on a rebate of 3 1-2 per cent. on the Grand Trunk earnings from traffic interchanged. The adoption of a different policy would have left the company with no through connections.

Sir Joseph adds: Surrounded on all sides by hostile interests, its business, confined to the local traffic of the original main line in Canada, would be eaten into and competed for byt he very companies now under its control.

The real causes of the bad position of the Grand Trunk Railway, Sir Joseph says, ar ethe continued depression, the poor trade with the United States and the low rates. The Board, he thinks, is taking the only possible remedial measures, and by rigid economy the depression is gradually lifting. The report says that the working expenses will be further reduced by cheaper coal contracts, as a result of the probable reduction of the Canadian bituminous coal duty, and also by the cheaper purchase of rails. The Board believes that the company is about emerge from the troubles of the past two years.

The Times declares that the defence is a weak one. It advises the shareholders not to give their promises to support a board under whose guidance teh concern has drifted from bad to worse.

The Daily News says that the circular is a repetition of the very disingenous comments of Mr. Barker's report."

NO LICENSES

To Be Issued in Ontario Local Townships —Refusal of the Government to Grant the Request For Interim Licenses.

Toronto, April 20.—The decision of the Ontario Government respecting the request of the Ontario liquor sellers for the issue of interim licenses in local option municipalities has been given. The Government will grant no such licenses. It will stand by the local option clauses of the Ontario license law pending the final judgments of the courts. The question was raised early in the recent session by the member for South Toronto when the Hon. Richard Harcourt stated that the question was under consideration by the Government. Nothing more was heard of it in the Legislature, and rumors were rife that the licenses would be granted. They may now be dismissed as unfounded, as the Government after fully considering upon it, with due deliberation as to the difficulties which either course might leave to be met, determined to stand by the law as it now appears on the provincial statute book. The members of the Government took the view that the opposite course, whatever the temporary convenience, would be construed from a temperance standpoint as a retrograde step. The Government is authoritatively stated to expect the judgment of the Imperial Privy Council upon the constitutional questions of prohibition within the next four months.

The cost of the prohibition test case to Ontario during the past year was $541.

Suicide on the Track at Chatham

Chatham, Ont., April 19.—Last evening an old gentleman named Moses Carney of Harwich Township, while temporarily deranged, threw himself in front of an Erie and Huron Railway train, near Fargo, and was instantly killed.

An Asylum Offered Umra Khan.

London, April 19.—A despatch from Allahabad to The Pall Mall Gazette says the Government has offered to Umra Khan an asylum in India for himself, his family and his suite, on condition of his absolute surrender, and has also guaranteed that the tribesmen and their villagers shall be spared if they offer no further opposition. The British expedition is continuing its march to Chitral.

One Hundred Miles an Hour.

The real danger in increasing the speed of expresses driven by steam does not lie in incidental risks. It is not denied that a modern locomotive might be built which could run up to ninety or possibly one hundred miles an hour if the lines were straight. It is the curves of the existing lines which render any such speed impossible, unless the weight of the engines and trains were also increased far beyond what the bridges and permanent way would bear. At the first sharp curve the 100-mile express would fly off the rails. The necessary relation of these curves to speed is accurately known, and it is that, and not the want of power, or novel dangers from wind pressure or boiler explosions, which sets the limit to modern train speed. As the force tending to throw off the line a train running at the speed of one hundred and fifty miles an hour would be about six and a half times greater than that which a steam express train resists at a curve when running at sixty miles an hour, it is plain that the present lines could not be used for the "lightning express," even though the electro-motor were substituted for the steam engine. The lines must not only be stronger, but straighter, than would be possible by any modification of their present form. —The Spectator.

Prof. Drummond, recalling some of his experiences with the interviewer in this country, said to a writer: "The day before sailing from New York I was called upon at my hotel by a representative of one of the New York dailies. On being shown in he at once began: 'You are the author of a book called "How to Make Love?"' I said, 'No.' 'What, did you not write that?' 'No.' 'Are you quite sure it wasn't you?' 'Quite sure.' 'Well, that's strange. However, you are going to lecture to-night?' 'Well, I am going to talk a little.' 'To whom?' 'To students.' 'What about?' 'Well—about—Christianity.' 'Ah! (whipping out his notebook)—What is your opinion of Christianity?'"

The stallion MORTON, foaled in 1887, dam, Jenny Shafer, sire, Andrews' Clay. Both sire and dam are Hambletonian stock. Jenny Shafer was the mother of some of the fastest horses on the American turf. Her grandsire, Volunteer, was one of the most successful sires that ever lived, being sire of St. Julien, 2.11¼, the best of race horses and the sire of 30 other horses of the 2.30 class. He was sired by Hambletonian. Andrews' Clay was one of the speediest race horses that ever lived and made ½ over the Goshen track in 32sec. He is a direct descendant of Henry Clay, Abdallah, and Kentucky Whip.

Morton is a dark bay stallion, with 3 white feet, 16 hands, weighs 1,100 pounds. He is of uniform shape, very strong across the loins and back; shows great substance of bone and muscle, with the best of feet and legs, carries a very long handsome maine and tail; has beautiful action, going wide behind and very rapid; has never been trained for speed, but with a little handling should go fast. His disposition and temper are perfect.

GROWTH OF TORONTO.

A BIG POPULATION THAT HAS DEVELOPED WITHIN 50 YEARS.

Statistics from the New City Directory—Figures That Speak—The Brown, Jones and Smith Colonies on the Increase.

Toronto was large enough to have a directory in 1834, and in the year 1837 a neat list of the residents was published in book form, bearing a strong resemblance to the Hamilton directory for 1893 4. It is only fair to state that Hamilton has a new directory every two years now.

Might's Directory of the City of Toronto for 1894, is now being delivered to subscribers. It contains about 50 pages more than the directory for 1893, and smaller type has been used that the book may not grown to unwieldly proportions.

In the directory there are 73,051 names, a gain of 3003 over the previous year. This would show that there had been a considerable gain in the population despite the smaller increase shown by the census of the assessors and also that of the police. To arrive at a correct basis from the directory names it has been found in the past that the multiple 3 will bring figures closely corresponding with the exact population of the city. In this case the population of the city is now 219,153, figures which will agree with the estimate of those who have watched the growth of the city.

This year's directory is an interesting volume. The publishers justly aver that "there is no doubt Toronto is the finest city on the continent for its size." And with this statement every male inhabitant who has visited other cities in America will agree: "We have more handsome and healthy-looking ladies, and cur female clerks, stenographers, etc., present a finer appearance on the streets than those of any other city."

Everybody knows John Smith. With the growth of names his large family has multiplied in due proportion. There were 845 Smiths in the directory of 1893, and in 1894 there are 926. Mr. Brown's family did not increase in proportion. There are 552 Browns as against 540 in 1893. Mr. Jones has namesakes to the number of 293 in Toronto.

Despite the hard times, Messrs. Cash, Silver and Goldman still reside in the city.

Toronto still remains thoroughly Canadian. There are few foreign names in the directory. You do not find many tongue-tangling names of foreign extraction. Yearly all the surnames in the directory can be traced back to the "good old times" when the Thanes and Freemen of merry England took the nomenclature of their particular calling or from the noble families with which they were connected.

A few years ago a Mr. Brandy lived in Toronto. He left shortly after Mayor Fleming's re-election and the announcement of the plebiscite vote. There is a Beers and Porter in abundance.

Toronto can retain its name as the "city of churches." There are 179 places of worship. Montreal has not half that number. Three live Bibles live in the city.

There are 136 newspapers and periodicals published in Toronto, 99 printing offices, 199 real estate agents, 131 druggists, 562 dressmakers, 312 butchers, 326 boot and shoe stores, 131 bakers, 102 dry-goods, 339 music teachers, 66 milliners, 80 laundries, of which 20 are conducted by Chinamen, 185 hotels, 710 grocers, 57 restaurants, 90 stationers, 226 merchant tailors, 129 tobacconists, 88 jewellers.—Telegram.

To Get Without Digging.

A professional fisherman says: Nobody need work at digging for worms for bait unless he is fond of the exercise, for they can be procured in almost any quantity with very little labor whenever they are needed.

The process is simple. Take a strong stick four or five feet long, and sharp at one end, and go to some locality where the worms are sure to be plentiful. Drive the stick four or five inches into the ground with a hammer or stone, and then begin to twist it with a rotary motion,

Every few minutes hit the top a rap to drive the point farther into the ground, and keep on twisting. In five minutes the worms will begin crawling out of their holes, and all you have to do is to pick them up and put them in your can.

They hear the grinding, and think it is a mole after them, and know that only on the surface are they safe. So they come out, those nearest to the sound making their appearance first with every evidence of haste and trepidation.

Sometimes they come up for a distance of ten or fifteen feet from the twirling stick, and in places where they are plentiful as many as a hundred can be literally scared out of the ground in this manner.

Some people think a worm has no sense, and they may be right in general, but a worm knows that a mole is its deadliest enemy, and will come squirming to the top of the ground immediately it hears a mole coming in its direction.

How to Make Money on Wall Street

How to make money on Wall street is only one branch of a great subject; a fragment of the great problem whose solution occupies the waking hours of nearly every adult male human being on the planet, outside of the savages of the darkest Africa and our own untaxed Indians. And perhaps to solve the problem as to Wall street is not more difficult than to sôlve it as to the dry goods district, or the cotton and wheat exchanges, or to the manufacture and sale of any commodities whatever. A great many men lose money in Wall street, but I seem to have a dim recollection of having heard somewhere, at some time, of the failure of certain wholesale, as well as of certain retail, dry goods dealers; and of the entrance of the sheriff upon the premises of grocery firms; and that men have been swamped by too much or too little wheat and cotton, and that some citizens have even come to grief in the manufacture and attempted sale of wooden bowls and clothespins and carpet tacks and such things. To speak seriously, is there any branch of human employment that is not exposed to vicissitudes? Can we absolutely rely upon the certainty of any given results which depends upon the combinations of the market?—Henry Clews, in Godey's.

TRADE AND NAVIGATION

The Government remarks in the speech from the Throne:

"The depression in trade which has prevailed throughout the world for the past few years has made itself felt in Canada, but fortunately to a less degree than in most other countries. Although this has not resulted in any considerable decrease in the volume of our foreign trade, yet owing to low prices and recent reductions in and removal of taxation, it had been followed by a serious decrease in revenue derived from customs and exise."

This may sound very well as coming from His Excellency, but the trade and navigation returns for the year ending June 30, '94 are out and they sing a song considerably out of tune with this. The aggregate foreign trade during that fiscal year was $230,618,000, which is nearly $10,000,000 less than the previous year. The Globe's Ottawa correspondent giving some figures from the returns says:

"Of this $241,000,000, the sum of $123,474,000 was in imports and 117 524 000 in exports. The duty collected was $19,379,000, compared with $21,161,000 in 1893. The rate of duty collected on dutiable goods entered for consumption was 30.8 compared with 30.2 in 1893. The revised tariff was in operation three Months of the last fiscal year, and its effect was to increase, not to decrease, the rate of taxation. Exports to the United States were $7,000,000 less than in 1893. The aggregate trade with that country, which was $90 000,000 in 1874, was only $88 000,000 last year. The aggregate trade with Great Britain, which was $108,000,000 in 1874, was $107,000 000 in 1894. Trade with France remained stationary, but increased over $3,000,000 with Germany. Trade with Newfoundland increased by $400,000, but was less than it was in 1873. The exports of agricultural produce to the world fell off from $22,000 000 in 1893 to $17 677 000 in 1894. Exports of animals and their products amounted to $31 881,000, an increase of $150,000. Ontario exported $32,726 000 against $33,850,000 in 1893; imported $42,025 000, against $48,243,000 in 1863. Ontario's total foreign trade declined, therefore, nearly $8,000,000."

The Mail and Empire correspondent goes back ten years to find figures that will afford a favorable comparison.

TO HALF THE GOVERNOR GENERAL'S SALARY

It is announced that Mr. Mulock will again introduce during the present session of Parliament his bill to cut down the Governor-general's salary by one-half, that last year reached only its first reading. Upon moving the first reading last year he submitted some information obtained in accordance with a motion for a return of all the expenses in connection with the vice-regal office since confederation. The total expense has been $2,851,917 which is $114 076 a year. The aggregate is made up of salary, at £10,000 a year, $1,216 666; Governor-General's secretaries' office $217 426; rent before the franchise of Rideau Hall $7854; cost of Rideau Hall $82,000; additions, alterations and repairs $547,143; furniture, $118,853; gardens and grounds, wages, etc. $94,349; fuel and light, $151,3611, which includes the annual grant of 8,000 to the Governor General for fuel and light. This latter sum Mr. Mulock deemed just an addition to the Governor's salary and found no justification for it whatever.

Referring to the Governor-General's salary the British North American Act says:

Unless altered by the Parliament of Canada the salary of the Governor-General shall be £10,000 stirling.

Canada since confederation has been paying $65,000 a year more than this and with these figures before the electors. Mr. Mulock's bill will meet with very general commendation. He will ask that the salary be $25,000 and that to include light, fuel, servants wages, travelling expenses, etc., the bill not to come into force until after the expiration of the term of Lord Aberdeen.

Yellow as a guinea —The complexion in a case af unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick headache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURES which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels there after to become regular. High professional sanction has been accorded to it; and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-simile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

If afflicted with scalp diseases, hair falling out, and premature baldness, do not use greese or alcoholic preparations, but apply Hall's Hair Renewer.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich every bodily function fags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, or contamination by bile, or other causes, bilious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery.

If you once try Carter's Little Liver Pills for sick headache, biliousness or constipation you will never be without them. They are purely vegetable, small and easy to take. Don't forget this.

Henry Ward Beecher once informed a man who came to him complaining of gloomy and despondent feelings, that what he most needed was a good cathartic, meaning, of course, such as Ayer's Cathartic Pills, every dose being effective.

THE CANADA LIFE.

Forty-Eighth Annual Report of the Company.

END OF A QUINQUENNIUM

Splendid Progress of a Great Institution.

Surplus of the Past Five Years To Be Distributed to the Policy Holders—Results of Sound Management

The annual meeting of the Canada Life Assurance Company was held Monday at the head office in Hamilton, when the following report was submitted to the meeting, which was largely attended:

The past year, 1894, being the 48th of the company's history, and the termination of a quinquennial period, when the surplus of the five years falls to be ascertained and distributed to the policyholders, the occasion is of more than usual interest, and the directors are highly gratified in being able to present another record of that continued success which has attended the operations of the company.

The applications for assurance during 1894 were 3678 for $8,259,501, of which 3438 for $7,708,801 were accepted. The sum of $550,700 upon 240 lives, which the board did not consider it desirable to accept, were declined, and 246 for $495,744, not having been carried out, the new business of the year was $7,213,057 of assurances under 3192 policies, with a new premium income of $246,310.59. The year's addition to the business made the total amount of assurances and bonus additions $66,807,397.25, upon 22,696 lives, under 30,868 policies.

The total income of the year was $2,661,985.74.

The year's claims by deaths of assured and by payments to assurers under endowment policies which matured during the year amounted to $651,618.58, under 330 policies, upon 427 lives, and after payment of these and of all other outgoings, the assets of the company were increased to $15,607,723.49.

As was pointed out five years ago, the gradual fall in the rate of interest obtainable upon satisfactory investments made it prudent and desirable that a lower rate of interest should be assumed for the future than 4 1-2 per cent. upon which the legal reserves of life companies had been based, and to add to the safety and security of the policyholders the 4 1-2 per cent. basis had been changed by our company to a future assumption of 4 per cent. By that change the company has voluntarily increased the reserve for its policy-obligations at the present time from $12,233,399.45 to $13,075,777, thereby setting aside for the future security of its policyholders no less than an additional sum of $842,377.55, and the fact that it has been able to do so without materially affecting the surplus cash bonuses to be paid to the policyholders is a striking evidence of the sound and satisfactory position occupied by the company.

The accompanying statements show that the total assets amount to $15,607,723.49, and, after deduction of all liabilities therefrom, there remained a surplus of $2,282,827.43 available for distribution, and out of which 95 per cent., $2,168,686.06, has been allotted to policyholders, giving bonus additions at the rate of $20 per annum for each $1000 assured under ordinary policies, and to endowment policies the equivalent value of life bonuses at the rate of $12.50 per annum for each $1000 assured.

To meet the cases of policies becoming claims by death before the next division of surplus in 1900, prospective or intermediate allowances will be made at the rate of a bonus addition of 1 1-4 per cent. per annum upon ordinary life and endowment systems. Where the surplus is taken otherwise than as bonus addition the equivalent value of that rate will be allowed. For ordinary endowments maturing by survivance before the next division of surplus in 1900, an allowance therefor will be paid at the rate of the equivalent value of a life bonus addition of 2 per cent. per annum.

To the stockholders an allotment of one-twentieth (5 per cent.) of the surplus has been made, and the amount is $114,141.37, which enables a bonus of $25 per share to be declared.

As required by the company's charter, the following directors retire by rotation at the present time: John Stuart, Adam Brown and William Hendrie, Esquires, of Hamilton; His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Kirkpatrick of Toronto, and A. G. Ramsay, Esq., all of whom are eligible for re-election, as is also the Hon. Senator MacInnes of Burlington, who filled the seat of the late Sir Alexander Campbell, K.C.M.G.

THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

Gentlemen.—The Directors' report and full statements of the financial position of the company being now before you, I beg to move its adoption, and say, that while we may esteem ourselves fortunate in that our annual meetings have hitherto afforded us the agreeable duty of continually reporting the successful progress of the company, the occasion of the present quinquennial division and distribution of the surplus of the past five years is of more than usual interest, and I am very glad, indeed, to see with us so many of our District Managers and local representatives, to whom we are indebted for so much of the company's progress and success.

We again meet you under very favorable and encouraging circumstances, for we are able to report the past year to have been one of advancement and prosperity.

Although the general trade and commerce of this country, and of the whole civilized world, in fact, have suffered from an unparalleled shrinkage and depression, the business of the Canada Life has during the year been marked by a liberal and solid increase. The new assurances were larger than ever before, and the total business in force at 31st December amounted to $66,807,397, or just about double what it was in 1885. The annual income and assets of the company have also each likewise rather more than doubled since then, the past year's income having been $2,661,985, or over $8 000 per day for every business day of the year. In 1885 the assets were $7,044,944. They now amount to $15,607,723, and throwing the figures of these respective heads into tabular form, for better comparison during the past 45 years, they stand as follows:

1850	$ 814,903	$ 27,838	$ 41,873
1855	2,349,608	83,908	217,758
1860	3,365,407	138,446	664,627
1865	4,013,268	114,698	717,379
1870	6,404,437	273,728	1,090,098
1875	13,430,037	581,735	2,412,361
1880	21,547,759	835,856	4,297,855
1885	34,890,890	1,336,681	7,044,944
1890	46,848,870	1,839,960	9,984,456
1894	66,807,397	2,661,985	15,607,723

As you will have observed by the report of the directors, the death claims of the year were $651,618, a very moderate amount, largely under what was calculated and provided for, and less, I may say, although our risks were larger than they had been during the previous two years. The result was no doubt to some extent due to the absence of the severe forms of la grippe and its results which were so general and so fatal in 1892 and 1893, but it is also an indication of the care exercised in the selection of the lives offered for assurance.

As I mentioned to you at our annual meeting last year, an investigation into the mortality experience since the commencement of the company's operations in 1847 was in progress, and we are now able to present to you a most interesting detailed publication of its results, and in doing so I would invite your attention to the evidence which is afforded of the very favorable mortality experience which our company has enjoyed during the lengthened period of its 48 years of existence. The various tables which are included in the publication gave proof of the salubrity of the climate of Canada and of the northern portion of the United States, to which we have confined our operations. They also show that the expectation of life there is found to be more favorable than has been experienced by the life companies of Great Britain, the United States and Germany, whose mortality tables have been made public. We can hardly be wrong, I think, in attributing some portion of our favorable experience to the careful attention to which I have already alluded as having been constantly given by the board and the management to the selection of the lives offered for assurance.

The gradual fall in the rate of interest obtainable on satisfactory securities, which has been going on for many years back, has had the board's anxious consideration. When the company was established in 1847 the rate of interest was then not unreasonably assumed at 6 per cent. and the calculations were then based upon that rate. In 1870, however, the reduction in the rates obtainable upon investments made it prudent to then alter our standard to 5 per cent. Subsequently, in 1880, circumstances having again changed, care for the safety and stability of the company and the security of its policyholders, which are at all times the board's first consideration, led to the rate for our future calculations being reduced to 4 1-2 per cent., which has also, I may say, been the rate adopted by the Government as a reliable basis for the calculations of the reserves which must be held for all assurance liabilities, and that rate is still continued as the standard required by the Insurance Department. As was mentioned, however, in our report of 1890, anticipating a continuance at as good rates as we had been obtaining, it was deemed prudent to still further add to the company's strength by making a provision towards another reduction to the rate of 4 per cent., upon which the calculations of the company's reserves have been based for the past five years, as will be seen by the published accounts. The additional security and strength which that change gives to our policyholders will be seen by the fact that in place of a 4 1-2 per cent. reserve of $12,233,399, we actually hold on a 4 per cent. basis $13,075,777, an additional amount of $842,378.

Having, as you are aware, upon 31st December last, completed five years since the last distribution of surplus, the amount which has arisen during that period has now to be divided, and it is very gratifying to be able to state that, notwithstanding that we have, as already explained, set aside the large additional reserve of $842,378, there remains the handsome surplus of $2,282,827, enabling us to give our policyholders a cash return equal to about 25 per cent. of all the premiums they have paid during the past five years, and it will hence be interesting that I mention what has been the surplus allowed to policy-holders during the last 24 years:

It was at 1870	$ 157,794
1875	388,311
1880	670,406
1885	1,260,433
1890	1,501,773

for 4 2-3 years, and this year, $2,168,686, which latter sum would have been $3,011,063 had we not changed from the 4 1-2 per cent. basis to that of 4 per cent.

Allusion being sometimes made by persons who are not well informed on the subject to the proportions of the surplus allotted to the policyholders, it may be well that I mention the facts as to these:

In 1870 it was 75 per cent.
In 1875 it was 75 per cent.
In 1880 it was 90 per cent.
In 1885 it was 93 1-3 per cent.
In 1889 it was 93 1-3 per cent.
And this year 95 per cent.

In conclusion, I would say that it will afford me much pleasure to supply any information or explanation which may be desired, feeling well assured that critical inquiries and explanations will but add to the confidence you may have in the company.

The President then moved the adoption of the report, which was seconded by Vice-President F. W. Gates, in a short speech.

Other resolutions were spoken to by Messrs. B. E. Walker, General Manager of the Canadian Bank of Commerce; Major McLaren, His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Kirkpatrick, William Gibson, M.P., Adam Brown, Esq., and others; while responses were made by Mr. J. W. Marling, on behalf of the agents; Dr. J. D. Macdonald, for the medical examiners, and Mr. Warren F. Burton on behalf of the solicitors of the company.

The following gentlemen were re-elected on the directorate: John Stuart, Adam Brown, William Hendrie, A. G. Ramsay, His Honor Lieutenant-Governor Kirkpatrick and Hon. Senator MacInnes.

The proceedings of the meeting were of a very harmonious character, and passed off very successfully.

In paragraph 6 of the Canadian Life report the bonus addition added to endowment policy reads $12 50 per annum for each $1000 assured. It should read $22.50 for each $1000 assured

Nervous People

And those who are all tired out and have that tired feeling or sick headache can be relieved of all these symptoms by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which gives nerve, mental and bodily strength and thoroughly purifies the blood. It creates a good appetite, cures indigestion, heartburn and dyspepsia.

The fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla, once fairly tried, becomes the favorite spring medicine speaks volumes for its excellence and merit.

LIGHT VERSUS DIRT.

Is the Most Effective Agent to Promote Cleanliness.

Light is the most efficient weapon with which to fight dirt in the domestic, as it is in the moral world, but the kitchen, where constant warfare must be waged with grit, grime and grease, is woefully apt to be the most ill-lighted apartment in the house. Many kitchens have but one window, more only two, and these so placed upon the same side as to but partially light the room. The sink is peculiarly unfortunate in this respect; the best economy of time and labor requires it to be placed near the range, often in a corner at some distance from either window, where the kitchen maid must stand with her hands and their occupation in needless shadow.

Small wonder that the work is neither clean nor accurate where by no possibility can one see how it is being done. Forethought by the architect, supplemented by coercion judiciously applied to the builder, would remedy the trouble in ninety-nine per cent. of such houses. The tribe of builders seems to have a hereditary antipathy to windows, as they have to closets; but let all corners be flooded with day and hidden iniquities of grease and rubbish will be routed, the army of predatory insects and vermin will vanish before the blessed conjury and sweetness reign with light.

The modern fashion of plumbing, that requires all the work to be in open sight, has been most successful in overcoming the worst dangers in our sewerage system; how long before common sense and science will combine to apply the same remedy to dirt? Only occasionally is a voice raised in protest against the clouds of dust in which we move, and with difficulty breathe and have our being.

In the ordinary boarded floor the space between the joists becomes an unseen cavern for the collection of dust in its most objectionable forms, while the crevices between the boards receive layer after layer of dirty soap and water, to be again dried, pulverized by the constant treading of feet and redistributed through the air of the kichen, falling upon the food as it is prepared for our tables and swept by currents of warm air through the whole house to be breathed.

Light Without Heat.

To the speculative mind, writes Lieut. F. Jarvis Patten in The Electrical World, none of the possible future applications of electricity is more attractive and none so full of immediate interest as the possibility that seems almost within our grasp of obtaining light without heat, of making the light waves without the heat waves that have thus far always been at the same time the companion and the burden of all artificial light. The time is ripe, and the exact science of the day seems all but ready and willing to give the analysis of two great problems, the answer to either of which would stand the crowning achievement of a century of progress in the application of nature's secret to the requirements of daily life. One of these—the navigation of the air—seems to be a mechanical problem only, while the other—the production of light without heat—we may as confidently say is only a question of properly handling the electric current. Nature presents us with beautiful examples of both solutions, but guards jealously the key to her method of operation, by which well-known forces are made to do the apparently impossible thing, and it is equally beyond our science to-day to explain how the bird soars aloft on motionless wing and how the glow worm emits a gleam of light without a ray of heat. But they do it, and the many imitators of the bird will soon be equaled in number by those who are chasing the firefly's secret. What nature does with nature's forces man should and doubtless will be able to do with a full knowledge of those forces and a better comprehension of the methods by which nature applies them. Who shall say which is the more difficult accomplishment, the production of an artificial ruby or the production of an artificial light without heat? There is no certainty, indeed, that the latter will not come from the hand of the chemist first. We are only too prone to hastily write that down as the impossible which is simply not yet done and our last achievement as the most difficult of all accomplishments. Let us not, however, forget that the chemist has striven for more than a century to make the artificial stone with commendable success, and the mechanic has striven a century to navigate the air, while the electrical engineer has wrestled but a comparatively short time with the problem of light without heat, and has already shown that the solution, far from being impossible on the lines of his attack, is, indeed, a reasonable expectation of another decade of electrical advance.

Engineering Education.

A system of education, says The Electrical World, that tends to broaden the mind and thus render it capable of dealing confidently with large questions is not only most likely to make the engineer educated under it more respected by those with whom he comes into contact in professional life, but it gives him a wider range of opportunities and a more ambitious scope at his strivings. Owing to the desire to start on a professional career at the earliest possible moment most technical courses are none too long for the bare purpose of teaching principles, and yet the tendency seems to be becoming greater and greater to subordinate the theoretical grounding to "practical work." Pattern shops, smith shops and even foundries, are becoming features of technical schools, and testing work is carried on more with a view to teach the practical manipulations than to illustrate principles. The difficulty with many of our engineering schools is that they attempt to combine three different courses, each of which in turn is sacrificed to the others. In Europe in some cases these are differentiated into engineering, industrial and manual training schools. Some of our technical schools partake more of the character of the French industrial schools, a graduate of which does not expect to become anything higher than a superintendent of a manufactory or plant, or an "expert" in his line of training.

Oysters in England.

"When I go back to London and tell my club friends that in Washington I can get a half a dozen of the finest oysters in the world on the half shell for 25 cents they will hardly believe me,' said Mr. Edward Mayne of England, at the Hotel Page. 'We pay $1 a dozen there for very tiny specimens of the juicy bivalves, and they don't compare in lusciousness with the Washington oyster. This is my first trip, and it seems to me that I have done nothing but cultivate my epicurean faculties, and I'll make an honest confession that the expectation of getting acquainted with some of the toothsome American dishes had a good deal to do with bringing me over."

- WALL PAPER -

THE DESIGNS of our spring wall papers are beautiful and the colorings exquisite. The effects they produce upon the wall have been studied with intelligent sympathy, and the "long-felt-wants" of a few years ago have been provided for with cultivated taste. A judicious employment of any of our papers leaves little to be done in a room—a few ornaments according to the taste or wealth of the occupant are all that is necessary to contribute to its beauty and comfort. Our papers thoroughly represent the standard of the prevailing taste in interior decorations.

WOMAN'S WORLD IN PARAGRAPHS.

What the Woman's Board of the Atlanta Exposition is Doing.

Too much canont be said in praise of the members of the women's board of the International and Cotton States Exposition, to be opened at Atlanta September 18. Before the board was appointed the men of Atlanta had already subscribed to the general fund all they could spare. The ladies were told that if they would raise $5,000 they might have the general fund $10,000. They held fairs and gave entertainments. They worked in all the ways known to those who have had long practice in clearing off church debts, and the result was that they got together $15,000. The exhibits for their building, designed by Miss Elise Mercur of Pittsburg, are so numerous that an annex to the original structure will be necessary. One of the most interesting of all the different divisions will be the colonial department, in charge of Mrs. W. L. Peel. All the industries in which women work will be represented, among them beekeeping and household economics. There will be connected with the woman's building an emergency hospital, in which these suddenly taken ill or who have been hurt can be carried and cared for for the time. One of the pleasantest features will be rooms where children will be carefully attended to while their mothers visit the exposition. If it had no other reason for being, this fine woman's board would have justified its existence by creating that department alone. One of the methods by which the board earned money was the publication of a woman's edition of an Atlanta Journal, whose proprietors kindly lent the plant for one day. The edition netted the energetic board $4,000. One of woman's especial fields is charity and philanthropy, and in the Atlanta building all the philanthropic and charitable societies of the world will be represented. When Mrs Joseph Thompson, the president of the board, and her able assistants are hereafter placed in positions where a knowledge of business management, speech-making and parliamentary usage are required, they will know just what to do. And this, besides a successful and beautiful exposition of women's work, will be a part of their reward for their unselfish labors.

The Baltimore Methodist conference has refused to allow women to be delegates to the general conference. I hope with all my heart that every woman in the Baltimore conference will leave the Methodist church before next Sunday.

Woman suffrage has been established in South Australia. The reactionists in the New York State constitutional convention who insulted the best women of this state by ignoring their petition signed by over 600,000 people to submit a woman suffrage clause to the voters last fall should make a note of this.

Women do not ape men in endeavoring to free themselves mentally, physically and pecuniarily. It is not mannish to wish to wear a suitable dress for walking and exercising, to get the highest education the land affords and to have free access to all paying occupations. It is only human. The mistake the Parkhursts of the community make is to say that these reasonable human wants arise only from a desire to imitate men. Man is not such a perfect creature, as far as he has got, that women should want to imitate him. We only want freedom such as he enjoys, and we are going to have it.

One of the prominent undertakers of Philadelphia is a colored woman, Mrs. Harriet Duterte. She arranges all the minutest details of funerals, and she has carried on her business successfully for 25 years.

A highly successful steam laundry is conducted by a woman, Mrs. M. A. Weaver, in Washington city. I have often wondered why women do not oftener go into the laundry business. It seems an occupation well fitted to their quick eyes and deft fingers in these days when steam and machinery do the hardest of the work. Why American women should starve on 10 cents a day at sweatshop sewing and let hundreds of heathen Chinamen come in and get thousands of dollars away from them at the laundry business is more than I can understand. In almost every good sized town in this country there is an opening for a good laundry run by women. Families would gladly welcome the opportunity to get their laundry work done out of the house if they could have assurance that it would be well and reasonably done.

I have always said that women ought to have charge of the street cleaning of cities. I am glad to find that there are persons in authority who think so too. It gives me pleasure to find that Miss Cynthia M. Westover has been appointed one of the inspectors of street cleaning in New York city. Street Commissioner George E. Waring, Jr., was the man brave enough to break away from traditionary politics and offer this place to Miss Westover. She is peculiarly fitted for her work. She was secretary to a former street commissioner of New York, Mr. Hans S. Beattie. She knows the Italian language, and was an angel of mercy to the laborers who found themselves imposed on. They flocked to her, to redress their wrongs, and she was generally able to do it. Miss Westover is a journalist and a brilliant and highly cultivated young woman. Another lady, Mrs. Fay Pierce, has likewise been appointed a street inspector.

The late maharajah of Mysore, who was only 30 when he died, was the first Hindoo prince to start a girls' school in India. If he had lived, he would have done much to change the deplorable condition of woman in India. It is a pity that a man ready to do justice to our sex has to die while so many old hunkses like some members of the Methodist Church general conference still survive.

ELIZA ARCHARD CONNER.

A Fad of the Czar.

One of the fads of the new Czar of Russia is the study of electricity. He is intensely interested in everything pertaining to electrical science, and reads eagerly descriptions of the latest experiments and applications in that line of endeavor. He is said to have made several ingenious contrivances himself in the simpler lines of electrical manipulation.

Ireland's Thrift.

Ireland, if poor, is provident. According to the Banking and Railway Statistics, just published, there has been a very large increase in savings during the year 1894, the total amount in the savings banks in Ireland being close on to seven millions sterling in December, 1894, as compared with 6,219,000 pounds for 1893. The actual increase is 740,000 pounds for the year following an increase of 48,000 pounds in 1893, and an increase of 239,000 pounds at the close of 1892, as compared with December, 1891.

The Serious Stage.

He knelt before her.
"I love you," he protested.
"Do you mean it ?"
"Ay."
She was evidently concerned.
"This is serious," she said. "I wonder whom we can get to introduce us ?"
This is at the seaside, some months hence.—Detroit Tribune.

FAR NORTH ESQUIMAUX.

THEIR QUEER CUSTOMS AND MODES OF LIFE.

People Who Scoff at Civilization and Enjoy Freedom From Its Enervating Vices and Crimes—Peculiar Esquimau Courtship.

The most northern Esquimaux are the most independent of people in the world, having among them neither chiefs nor rulers, rich or poor, neither high nor low classes. No one works for another, no one hires another, but each fights the fierce battle of life for himself and family.

The family institution is about the only institution recognized among them, and this is thoroughly established. The bonds of union between husband and wife and between children and parents are at times stronger among these children of nature than among ourselves. They are certainly less often broken.

DOMESTIC AFFECTIONS STRONG.

To the Esquimau no fire is ever quite so warm or light or so brilliant as the periodical affection and devotion of his little wife and restless children. Their isolation during that long, dreary Arctic night and their existence during a day of months makes this a necessity. The novelties that divert our attention, affections and passions are not formed among the Esquimaux. During the time of nightless days and dayless nights their life would seem to be a continuous monotony, desolation and destitution. But fortunately they find pleasure and comfort where we could find nothing but cold repulsiveness.

Esquimaux usually have but one wife and women but one husband, but in these matters, as in most others, the rule is that there is no rule, and men can be found with two or three wives as well as women with several husbands.

Their marriage customs are filled with romance and conspicuous by the absence of all formality or ceremony. Since the allotment of space will not allow me to detail all of the customs and habits, I can think of nothing more interesting to end my article than their wooing, courtship and marriage.

MARRIAGE CUSTOMS.

Our marriage ceremony, with the officiating priest or minister, the company of admiring, perhaps envious, guests, which surround the happy groom and bashful bride, the bountiful feast and friendly congratulations are entirely unknown adjuncts to the taking of a wife by a most northern Esquimau.

With him it is a purely business matter and is unaccompanied by any religious form. They have neither mosques nor priests, nor any official authority vested with a sacred charter or license. This makes matters very simple, for, aside from the parents, there is no law to interfere with the will or pleasure of the parties concerned.

They spend a short time together, away from their mutual friends. If, after this trial, they prove to be ill-mated, they separate and become once more a bachelor and a maiden in the eyes of their relatives. If, on the contrary, they find the society of each other agreeable they decide to become one.

OBEDIENCE TO PARENTS.

The parents of both parties have a decided voice in the selection and betrothal, and the children are apt to listen to and obey the dictates of their natural protectors. It is usually understood, while the children are very young, who are to be united to each other. Distance seems to lend enchantment to the scene, for there, as here, the parties most deeply interested are frequently members of villages at a distance from each other.

This gives the young man but little opportunity to learn either the good or bad qualities of his affianced. When she has reached the mature age of, perhaps, thirteen years, and he, who is some years older, has proved his ability to support a wife by his skill in hunting, fishing, etc., the expectant Benedict seeks the objects of his affection. He has the innate desire to mate, which is characteristic of the animal creation, and she possesses that same readiness to reciprocate which is manifested among the most highly civilized, as well as the savage, untutored, ignorant aborigines.

It is intensely interesting to watch these passions among a people as nearly wild as it is possible for the human race to be. It will be well, perhaps, to remember that these young lovers are about to unite in a country where the ice never disappears and the snow never melts. Seasons, as we know them, are quite unknown in the Arctics. For four months the sun never sets. This is their summer. Prior to this season and immediately following it are periods of two months each when they have a day and night in every twenty-four hours. Then upon this land of desolation drops the sable curtain of night, which does not lift for one hundred days. During this long Arctic winter not once does the sun show his round, ruddy, life-giving disk. All nature lies locked in the embrace of the Frost King passive and dormant, even the animal functions are more or less blunted.

But when the sun once more appears above the horizon all things, animate and inanimate, gladly give evidences of renewed life and vigor. It is at this time that the courtship takes place. The stalwart young wooer reaches the home of his inamorata after having traveled, perhaps, two hundred miles through deep snow. He is prepared to remain several months. The news of his arrival is communicated through the village, and cries of "Innuits ! Innuits" are heard. This is their word for people, and the exclamations mean that some one is coming.

CUSTOMS OF TRAVEL.

Esquimaux always travel in couples or families, never alone. Consequently parties approaching a village are frequently sighted miles away, and their approach is announced as I have stated. When the stranger proves to be the expected groom the bride elect disappears.

No one welcomes him or expresses surprise or pleasure because of his safe accomplishment of a long, toilsome, perilious journey. The saluting of friends is entirely foreign to an Esquimau's code of etiquette. Neither do they offer assistance to their guests in drawing their sleds over the ice foot, which is always rough and steep.

The new comers fasten their dogs securely to a piece of ice. Then all enter the stone house under the ground. Here the family and visitors sit in perfect silence for about half an hour. Then little by little conversation begins. Meanwhile the principal object of all this disturbance of the daily routine seeks the corner most remote from her intended husband, modestly turns her back to the audience and is apparently the least interested person in the room.

Like all the women, she is almost nude, wearing only a very short pair of sealskin trousers. The men are even less burdened with other covering than that which nature has provided, while the children are absolutely naked when within the house.

A NOVEL COURTSHIP.

Presently the lover leads the conversation. Calmly and in a modest, manly way he directs the subject under discussion so that the object of his speech is compelled to respond. At first she refuses to turn and meet his ardent glance as she talks, but as he quietly persists in addressing his remarks to her, she gives him a side glance, then looks him shyly but fully in the eyes.

The rest of the story is the same the world over. The distance between them gradually grows less, each meanwhile eagerly scanning the other, for remember they are almost entire strangers. There is a point at this stage of their courtship which differs from all other nationalities or tribes. When the intervening space has been reduced to nothing, their lips do not meet in a lover's kiss. In place of this method of proving their affection they rub noses, very much as birds and animals do.

When the man becomes fully enthralled and overpowered by a sense of the maiden's charms, he exclaims rapturously, "In a moes soch sua !" being interpreted, "You smell good." This is the highest compliment he can pay her, and shows his subjugation to be complete. When you remember these girls never bathe or perform ablutions of any description you can understand this form of flattery must require a strong imagination if the Esquimau olfactory nerves in any degree resemble ours.

CONDITIONS OF MARRIAGE.

We will now take it for granted that our hero and heroine are mutually satisfied, or, in other words, have fallen passionately in love with each other. The youth is now expected to present his lady with food enough to last a year. After a few weeks' diligent hunting he brings the spoils of his valor to the stone house and caches it in such a manner that bears and foxes cannot devour it. Then he obtains permission to bear his bride to his own tent or hut, but he is to keep her for only a short time—about three months.

This time of probation passes, as one would naturally suppose, very rapidly, and the end comes all too soon, but the young wife must return to her parents. The husband is then compelled to leave her for a year. All this time he neither sees nor hears of her.

This enforced separation is done in order to strengthen their mutual love or to provide an opportunity in which to change their minds. It is the privilege of either to dissolve the marriage tie if dissatisfied with the new relation. At the end of the twelve months the husband usually returns and joyfully repossesses himself of his girl wife for perhaps four months. Then she is again restored to her mother. This singular process is repeated for several years and at any time the contracting parties are at liberty to forsake the nest and choose another mate.

Finally, after five or six years, the first child makes its advent. This is the sign and seal to this primitive, rather convenient, experimental marriage contract. Now the wife loses her freedom of choice and becomes the sole property of her husband, who owns her absolutely. His power over her is unlimited and his word is law in his home as long as he lives.

THE HUSBAND'S AUTHORITY.

One might think this novel and untrammelled courtship would cause many changes. On the contrary, lovers once brought together usually prove faithful and rarely separate.

If, as sometimes happens, the woman bears no child her husband is privileged to loan her to his companions. In this way she may meet her true mate and give to the world a tiny reproduction of herself. To be fruitless is the most unfortunate thing that can happen to an Esquimau woman. A childless female is an object of neglect and derision. In times of famine she is the first to be turned of to starve. Then, when her strength has become exhausted and she dies from lack of food, her body is eagerly devoured by the more useful members of the tribe.

CHASE'S CHAPTER

1. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a combination of valuable medicines in concentrated form as prepared by the eminent Physician and Author, Dr. A. W. Chase, with a view to not only be an unfailing remedy for Kidney and Liver troubles, but also tone the Stomach and purify the Blood, at a cost that is within the reach of all. The superior merit of these pills is established beyond question by the praise of thousands who use them—one Pill a dose, one box 25 cents.

2. When there is a Pain or Ache in the Back the Kidneys are speaking of trouble that will ever increase unless relieved. We have the reliable statement of L. B. Johnson, Holland Landing, who says: I had a constant Back-Ache, my back felt cold all the time, appetite poor, stomach sour and belching, urine scalding, had to get up 3 or 4 times during night to urinate, commenced taking one Kidney-Liver Pill a day; Back-Ache stopped in 48 hours, appetite returned, and able to enjoy a good meal and a good nights sleep; they cured me.

3. Constipation often exists with Kidney Trouble, in such a case there is no medicine that will effect a permanent cure except Chase's combined Kidney-Liver Pill, one 25 cent box will do more good than dollars and dollar worth of any other preparation, this is endorsed by D. Thompson, Holland Landing, Ont.

WOMAN'S NEED

Women suffer unspeakable tortures from muscular weakness, caused by impaired nerves and poor blood. Uric Kidney acid poison, unsuspected, weakens the nerves and poisons the blood. By and by, if the Kidneys do not properly purify the blood, then comes prolapsus, retroversion, etc. Blood 75 per cent. pure is not a nourisher—it is a death breeder.

Delicate women need not be told how much they would give to get and STAY well. If their blood is free from the poisonous ferments of the Kidneys and Liver, they will never know what "weakness" is. The blood is the source and sustainer of health it cannot be kept pure except the Kidneys and Liver do their work naturally. Something is needed to insure free and natural action of these organs, one 25 cent box of Kidney-Liver Pills will prove to any sufferer they are a boon to women, can be used with perfect confidence by those of delicate constitution.

One Kidney-Liver Pill taken weekly will effectually neutralize the formation of Uric Acid in the blood and prevent any tendency to Bright's Disease or Diabetes.

For purifying the Blood and renovating the system, especially in the Spring, one 25 cent box is equal to $10 worth of any Sarsaparilla or Bitters known. Sold by all dealers, or by mail on receipt of price, EDMANSON, BATES & CO., 45 Lombard Street, Toronto.

B. B. B. removes every trace of Scrofulous poison and every vestige of Bad Blood, which is the fountainhead of neay all disease. It has cured terrible cases of Scrofula of 25 years' standing, and all Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Rashes, Sores, Ulcers, Abscesses, etc., yield readily to its specific healing powers, acting through the blood upon the entire system.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles ! Piles ! Itching Piles.

YMPTOMS. –Moisture ; intense itching and stinging ; most at night ; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelle's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

Germany reports 289 instances of suicide among school children during the last six years.

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes : "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal."

AT HEAVEN'S GATES

ANOTHER SERMOM OF RARE POWER BY REV. DR. TALMAGE.

Twelve Gates and All of Pearl—The Doorkeepers and the Password—A Few Words About Bigotry and Sectarianism—Some Rare Pearls.

"On the east three gates ; on the north three gates; on the south three gates; on the west three gates," Revelation xxi, 13.

The Cashmere gate of Delhi where converged a heroism that makes one's nerves tingle, the Lucknow gate still dented and scarred with sepoy bombardment, the Madeline gate, with its emblazonry in bronze, the hundred gates of Thebes, the wonder of centuries, all go out of sight before the gates of my text.

Our subject speaks of a great metropolis, the existence of which many have doubted. Standing on the wharf and looking off upon the harbor and seeing the merchantmen coming up the bay, the flags of foreign nations streaming from the topgallants, you immediately make up your mind that those vessels come from foreign ports, and you say, "'That is from Hamburg, and that is from Marseilles, and that is from Southampton, and that is from Havana," and your supposition is accurate. But from the city of which I am now speaking no weather beaten merchantmen or frigates with scarred bulkhead have ever come. There has been a vast emigration into that city but no emigration from it, so far as our natural vision can descry.

"There is no such city," says the undevout astronomer. "I have stood in high towers with a mighty telescope and have swept the heavens and I have seen spots on the sun and caverns in the moon, but no towers have ever risen on my vision, no palaces, no temples, no shining streets, no massive wall. There is no such city." Even very good people tell me that heaven is not a material organism, but a grand spiritual fact, and that the Bible descriptions of it are in all cases to be taken figuratively. I bring in reply to this what Christ said, and he ought to know, "I go to prepare"—not a theory, not a principle, not a sentiment, but "I go to prepare a place for you." The resurrected body implies this. If my foot is to be reformed from the dust, it must have something to tread on. If my hand is to be reconstructed it must have something to handle. If my eye, having gone out in death, is to be rekindled, I must have something to gaze on. Your adverse theory seems to imply that the resurrected body is to be hung on nothing, or to walk in air, or to float amid the intangibles. You may say if there be material organism then a soul in heaven will be cramped and hindered in its enjoyments, but I answer, "Did not Adam and Eve have plenty of room in the garden of Eden? Although only a few miles would have described the circumference of that place, they had ample room. And do you not suppose that God, in the immensities, can build a place large enough to give the whole race room, even though there be material organism ?

Herschel looked into the heavens. As a Swiss guide puts his Alpine stock between the glaciers and crosses over from crag to crag, so Herschel planted his telescope between the worlds and glided from star to star until he could announce to us that we live in a part of the universe but sparsely strewn wit worlds, and he peers out into immensity until he can find a region no larger than our solar system in which there are 50,000 worlds moving. And Professor Lang says that by a philosophic reasoning there must be somewhere a world where there is no darkness, but everlasting sunshine, so that I do not know but that it is simply because we have no telescope powerful enough that we cannot see into the land where there is no darkness at all and catch a glimpse of the burnished pinnacles. As a conquering army marching on to take a city comes at nightfall to the crest of a mountain from which, in the midst of the landscape, they see the castles they are to capture, and rein in their war chargers, and halt to take a good look before they pitch their tents for the night, so now, coming as we do on this mountain top of prospect, I command this regiment of God to rein in their thoughts and halt, and before they pitch their tents for the night take one good, long look at the gates of the great city. "On the east three gates ; on the north three gates, on the south three gates, and on the west three gates."

In the first place I want you to examine the architecture of those gates. Proprietors of large estates are very apt to have an ornamented gateway. Sometimes they spring an arch of masonry, the posts of the gate flanked with lions in statuary ; the bronze gate a representation of intertwining foliage, bird haunted, until the hand of architectural genius drops exhausted, all its life frozen into the stone. Gates of wood and iron and stone guarded nearly all the older cities. Moslems have inscribed upon their gateways inscriptions from the Koran of the Mohammedan. There have been a great many fine gateways, but Christ sets his hand to the work, and for the upper city swung a gate such as no eye ever gazed on, untouched of inspiration. With the nail of his own cross he cut into its wonderful traceries stories of past sufferings and of gladness to come. There is no wood or stone or bronze in that gate, but from top to base and from side to side it is all of pearl. Not one piece picked up from Ceylon banks, and another piece from the Persian gulf, and another from the Island of Margarette, but one solid pearl picked up from the beach of everlasting light by heavenly hands and hoisted and swung amid the shouting of angels. The glories of alabaster vase and porphyry pillar fade out before this gateway. It puts out the spark of fedspar and diamond. You know how one little precious stone on your finger will flash under the gaslight. But, oh, the brightness when the great gate of heaven swings, struck through and dripping with the light of eternal noonday !

Julius Caesar paid 125,000 crowns for one pearl. The government of Portugal boasted of having a pearl larger than a pear. Cleopatra and Phillip II, dazzled the world's vision with precious stones. But gather all these together, and lift them, and add to them all the wealth of the pearl fisheries, and set them in the panel of one door, and it does not equal this magnificent gateway. An almighty hand hewed this, swung this, polished this. Against this gateway, on the one side dash all the splendors of earthly beauty. Against this gate, on the other side, beat the surges of eternal glory. Oh, the beauty of the gate ! It strikes an infinite charm through everyone that passes it. One step this side of the gate and we are paupers. One step the other side of the gate, and we are kings. The pilgrim of earth going through sees in the one huge pearl all his earthly tear in cyrstal. O gate of light, gate of pearl, gate of heaven, for our weary souls at last swing open !

When shall these eyes thy heaven-built walls
  And pearly gates behold ?
Thy bulwarks with salvation strong
  And streets of shining gold.

Oh, heaven is not a dull place ! Heaven is not a contracted place. "I saw the 12 gates, and they were 12 pearls."

In the second place, I want you to count the number of these gates. Imperial parks and lordly manors are apt to have one expensive gateway, and the others are ordinary, but look around at these entrances to heaven and count them. One, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten, eleven, twelve. Hear it all the earth and all the heavens. Twelve gates !

I admit this is rather hard on sharp sectarianisms. If a Presbyterian is bigoted, he brings his Westminster assembly catechism, and he makes a gateway out of that, and he says to the world, "You go through there or stay out." If a member of the Reformed Church is bigoted, he makes a gate out of the Heidelberg catechism, and he says, "You go through there or stay out." If a Methodist is bigoted, he plants two posts, and he says "Now, you crowd in between those two posts or stay out." Or perhaps an Episcopalian may say, "Here is a liturgy out of which I mean to make a gate ; go through it or stay out." Or a Baptist may say, "Here is a water gate ; you go through that or you must stay out." And so in all our churches and in all our denominations there are men who make one gate for themselves and then demand that the whole world go through it. I abhor this contractedness in religious views. Oh, small souled man, when did God give you the contract for making gates ? I tell you plainly I will not go in that gate. I will go in at any one of the 12 gates I chose. Here is a man who says, "I can more easily and more closely approach God through a prayer book." I say, "My brother, then use the prayer book." Here is a man who says, "I believe there is only one mode of baptism, and that is immersion." Then I say, "Let me plunge you." Anyhow, I say, away with the gate of rough panel and rotten posts and rusted latch when there are 12 gates, and they are 12 pearls.

The fact is that a great many of the churches in this day are being doctrined to death. They have been trying to find out all about God's decrees, and they want to know who are elected to be saved, and who are reprobated to be damned, and they are keeping on discussing that subject when there are millions of souls who need to have the truth put straight at them. They sit counting the number of teeth in the jawbone with which Samson slew the Philistines. They sit on the beach and see a vessel going to pieces in the offing, and instead of getting into a boat and pulling away for the wreck they sit discussing the different styles of oarlocks. God intended us to know some things and intended us not to know others. I have heard scores of sermons explanatory of God's decrees, but came away more perplexed than when I went. The only result of such discussion is a great fog. Here are two truths which are to conquer the world—man a sinner; Christ, a Saviour. Any man who adopts those two theories in his religious belief shall have my right hand in warm grip of Christian brotherhood.

A man comes down to a river in time of freshet. He wants to get across. He has to swim. What does he do ? The first thing is to put off his heavy apparel and drop everything he has in his hands. He must go empty-handed if he is going to the other bank. And I tell you when we have come down to the river of death and find it swift and raging we will have to put off all our sectarianism and lay down all our cumbrous creed and empty-handed put out for the other shore. "What," say you, "'would you resolve all the Christian church into one kind of church ? Would you make all Christendom worship in the same way, by the same forms ?" Oh, no. You might as well decide that all people shall eat the same kind of food without reference to appetite, or wear the same kind of apparel without reference to the shape of their body. Your ancestry, your temperament, your surroundings, will decide whether you go to this or that church and adopt this or that church polity. One church will best get one man to heaven and another church another man. I do not care which one of the gates you go through, if you only go through one of the 12 gates that Jesus lifted.

Well, now, I see all the redeemed of earth coming up toward heaven. Do you think they will all get in ? Yes. Gate the first, the Moravians come up ; they believed in the Lord Jesus ; they pass through. Gate the second, the Quakers come up ; they have received the inward light ; they have trusted in the Lord ; they pass through. Gate the third, the Lutherans come up , they had the same grace that made Luther what he was, and they pass through. Gate the fourth, the Baptists pass through. Gate the fifth, the Free Will Baptists pass through. Gate the sixth, the Reformed Church passes through. Gate the seventh, the Congregationalists pass through. Gate the eighth, the German Reformed Church passes through. Gate the ninth, the Methodists pass through. Gate the tenth, the Sabbatarians pass through. Gate the eleventh, the Church of the Disciples pass through. Gate the twelfth, the Presbyterians pass through. But there are a great part of other denominations who must come in, and great multitudes who connected themselves with no visible church, but felt the power of godliness in their heart and showed it in their life. Where is their gate ? Will you shut all of the remaining host out of the city ? No. They may come in at our gate. Hosts of God, if you cannot get admission through any other entrance, come in at the twelfth gate. Now they mingle before the throne.

Looking up at the one hundred and forty and four thousand, you cannot tell which gate they came in. One Lord. One faith. One baptism. One glassy sea. One doxology. One triumph. One heaven ! "Why Luther, how did you get in ?" "I came in through the third gate." "Cranmer, how did you get in ?" "I came in through the eighth gate." "Adoniram Judson, how did you get through ?" "I came in through the seventh gate." "Hugh McKail, the martyr, how did you get through ?" "I came in through the twelfth gate." Glory to God, 12 gates, but one heaven.

In the third place, notice the points of the compass toward which these gates look. They are not on one side, or on two sides, or on three sides, but on four sides. This is no fancy of mine, but a distinct announcement. On the north three gates, on the south three gates, on the east three gates, on the west three gates. What does that mean? Why, it means that all nationalities are included, and it does not make any difference from what quarter of the earth a man comes up. If his heart is right, there is a gate open before him. On the north three gates. That means mercy for Lapland and Siberia and Norway and Sweden. On the south three gates. That means pardon for Hindustan and Algiers and Ethiopia. On the east three gates. That means salvation for China and Japan and Borneo. On the west three gates. That means redemption for America. It does not make any difference how dark-skinned or how pale-faced men may be. They will find a gate right before them. These plucked bananas under a tropical sun. These shot across Russian snows behind reindeer. From Mexican plateau, from Roman campania, from Chinese teafield, from Holland dike, from Scotch highlands, they come, they come. Heaven is not a monopoly for a few precious souls. It is not a Windsor Castle built only for royal families. It is not a small town with small population, but John saw it, and he noticed that an angel was measuring it, and he measured it this way, and he measured it that way, and which ever way he measured it it was 1,500 miles, so that Babylon and Tyre and Nineveh and St. Petersburg and Canton and Peking and Paris and London and New York and all the dead cities of the past and all the living cities of the present added together would not equal the census of that great metropolis.

Walking along a street you can, by the contour of the dress, or of the face, guess where a man comes from. You say, "That is a Frenchman ; that is a Norwegian ; that is an American." But the gates that gather in the righteous will bring them in irrespective of nationality. Foreigners sometimes get homesick. Some of the tenderest and most pathetic stories have been told of those who left their native clime, and longed for it until they died. But the Swiss, coming to the high residence of heaven, will not long any more for the Alps, standing amid the eternal hills. The Russian will not long any more for the luxuriant harvest field he left, now that he hears the hum and the rustle of the harvests of everlasting light. The royal ones from earth will not long to go back again to the earthly court, now that they stand in the palaces of the sun. Those who once lived among the groves of spice and oranges will not long to return, now that they stand under the trees of life that bear 12 manner of fruit.

While I speak an ever increasing throng is pouring through the gates. They are going up from Senegambia, from Patagonia, from Madras, from Hong Kong. "What," you say, "do you introduce all the heathen into glory ?" I tell you the fact is that a majority of the people in those climes die in infancy, and the infants all go straight into eternal life, and so the vast majority of those who die in China and India, the vast majority of those who die in Africa, go straight into the skies—they die in infancy. One hundred and sixty generations have been born since the world was created, and so I estimate that there must be 15,000,000,000 children in glory. If, at a concert, 2,000 children sing, your soul is raptured within you. Oh, the transport when 15,000,000,000 little ones stand up in white before the throne of God, their chanting drowning out all the stupendous harmonies of Dusseldorf and Leipsic. Pour in through the 12 gates.

Oh, ye redeemed, banner lifted, rank after rank saved, battalion after battalion saved, until all the city of God shall hear the tramp, tramp ! Crowd all the 12 gates. Room yet. Room on the thrones. Room in the mansions. Room on the river bank. Let the trumpet of invitation be sounded until all earth's mountains hear the shrill blast and glens echo it. Let missionaries tell it in pagoda and colporteurs sound it across the western prairies. Shout it to the Laplander on his swift sled, hallo it to the Bedouin careering across the desert. News ! News ! A glorious heaven and 12 gates to get into it ! Hear it ! Oh, you thin blooded nations of eternal winter—on the north three gates. Hear it ! Oh, you bronzed inhabitants, panting under equatorial heats—on the south three gates.

But I notice when John saw these gates they were open—wide open. They will not always be so. After a while heaven will have gathered up all its intended population, and the children of God will have come home. Every crown is taken. Every harp struck. Every throne mounted. All the glories of the universe harvested in the great garner. And, heaven being made up, of course the gates will be shut. Austria in, and the first gate shut. Russia in, and the second gate shut. Italy in, and the third gate shut. Egypt in, and the fourth gate shut. Spain in, and the fifth gate shut. France in, and the sixth gate shut. England in, and the seventh gate shut. Norway in, and the eighth gate shut. Switzerland in, and the ninth gate shut. Hindustan in, and the tenth gate shut. Siberia in, and the eleventh gate shut. All the gates are closed but one. Now, let America go in with all the islands of the sea and all the other nations that have called on God. The captives all freed. The harvests all gathered. The nations all saved. The flashing splendor of this last pearl begins to move on its hinges. Let two mighty angels put their shoulders to the gate and heave it to with silvery clang. It is done. It thunders. The twelfth gate is shut.

Once more I want to show you the gatekeepers. There is one angel at each one of those gates. You say that is right. Of course it is. You know that no earthly palaces or castle or fortress would be safe without a sentry pacing up and down by night and by day, and if there were no defenses before heaven, and the doors set wide open with no one to guard them, all the vicious of earth would go up after awhile, and all the abandoned of hell would go up after awhile, and heaven, instead of being a world of light and joy and peace and blessedness, would be a world of darkness and horror. So I am glad to tell you that while these 12 gates stand open to let a great multitude in, there are 12 angels to keep some people out. Robespierre cannot go through there, nor Hildebrand, nor Nero, nor any of the debauched of earth who have not repented of their wickedness. If one of those nefarious men who despised God should come to the gate, one of the keepers would put his hand on his shoulder and push him into outer darkness. There is no place in that land for thieves and liars and whoremongers and defrauders and all those who disgraced their race and fought against their God. If a miser should get in there, he would pull up the golden pavement. If a house-burner should get in there, he would set fire to the mansion. If a libertine should get in there, he would whisper his abominations standing on the white coral of the sea beach. Only those who are blood washed and prayer lipped will get through. Oh, my brother, if you should at last come up to one of the gates and try to get through and you had not a pass written by the crushed hand of the Son of God, the gatekeeper would with one glance wither you forever.

There will be a password at the gate of heaven. Do you know what the password is ? Here comes a crowd of souls up to the gate and they say, "Let me in, let me in. I was very useful on earth. I endowed colleges. I built churches, and was famous for my charities, and having done so many wonderful things for the world, now I come up to get my reward." A voice from within says, "I never knew you." Another great crowd comes up, and they try to get through. They say, "We were highly honorable on earth, and the world bowed very lowly before us. We were honored on earth, and now we come to get honors in heaven." And a voice from within says, "I never knew you." Another crowd advances and says, "We were very moral people on earth, very moral indeed, and we come up to get appropriate recognition." A voice answers, "I never knew you."

After awhile I see another throng approach the gate, and one seems to be spokesman for all the rest, although their voices ever and anon cry "Amen! Amen!" This one stands at the gate and says, "Let me in, I was a wanderer from God. I deserved to die. I have come up to this place not because I deserve it, but because I have heard that there is a saving power in the blood of Jesus." The gate keeper says, "That is the password—Jesus ! Jesus !" — and they go in and surround the throne and the cry is, "Worthy is the lamb that was slain to receive blessings and riches and honor and glory and power, world without end !"

No receptacle has ever been made strong enough to resist the bursting power of freezing water. Twenty-pound steel shells have been rent asunder as though made of pottery.

Modern maids of all work commonly object to waiting on the table. The objection was indicated in the case of a far western maid in search of a place by the inquiry: "Do you do your own reaching ?"

Professor Young finds by investigation that the sun's light is about 300,000 times as great as the moon's. If, therefore, the sky was covered with full moons, they would give but one-eighth as much light as the sun.

The women of Danville, Ky., have established a free industrial school for the benefit of children whose opportunities for home training are meager. The school is held every Saturday, and the attendance is about twenty.

Silver is cleaned at the shops by pressing the piece against a rapidly revolving wheel made of Canton flannel in many rolls. The wheel reaches all irregularities of the surface and the silver is polished without being scratched.

A short time ago the position of public executioner in Vienna was vacant, and a fine looking woman of 28 applied for the place. She said it would comfort a man about to die to have his last earthly gaze rest upon a beautiful young woman.

A Belgian inventor has devised an immense lamp, such as has probably never been seen before. It is composed of 3,000 pieces, six feet high and measures 7.10 feet in diameter. It is fed with lard oil and the consumption is said to be very small.

In White County, Georgia, there is a mountain stream which runs up hill, at a steep incline, for almost half a mile. It is supposed to be the continuation of a siphon, which has its course in a spring at a higher elevation, at the opposite side of the mountain.

One of the picturesque features of park decoration in New York this summer will be about one hundred large banana plants that will be set out in favorite places and permitted to make what growth they can during July, August and the hot weeks of September.

The records of Massachusetts are written in an official ink. The ink is made of the best galls, sulphate of iron and gum, the sulphate of iron not to exceed one-third of the weight of the galls. The specific gravity of the matured ink must not exceed 1,045, distilled water at 60 degrees being 1.

A Mexican professor of physics proposes to foretell earthquakes by connecting telephones to the pipes of deep artesian wells and to metal plates sunk in deep mountain crevices. Any unusual noise in the bowels of the earth would be audible in the telephone and would indicate trouble.

German geographers have made a careful estimate of the population of Africa and place the total at 163,953,000, which is 42,240,000 more than the aggregate population of North and South America. Europe and Africa combined have a population of 521,332,000, though their area is not greater than that of all America.

Lace is a fabric that can quietly be made to represent large amounts of money. The Astors have been credited with owning lace worth $3,000,000, and the Vanderbilts value their laces at $5,000,000. The pope is said to be content with only $75,000 represented in lace, and the Princess of Wales can boast of only the modest sum of $250,000 expended in the dainty meshes.

The late Ward McAllister gave this definition of a gentleman : "A gentleman is a person free from arrogance and anything like self-assertion, considerate of the feelings of others, and so satisfied and secure in his own position that he is always unpretentious, feeling he could not do an ungentlemanly act ; as courteous in his manners to his inferiors as to his equals."

An examination of 420 white and 420 colored minor school children of Washington by Dr. Belt gave these results : Normal acuteness of vision, white 74 per cent, colored 90 per cent ; myopia, white 16 per cent, colored 6 per cent ; astigmatic of all degrees, white 25 per cent, colored 10 per cent ; diseased eyes, white 10 per cent, colored 4 per cent ; choroidal atrophy, white 5 per cent, colored 1 per cent.

Bees' Working Capacity.

A bee expert says that when the weather is fine a worker bee can visit from forty to eighty flowers in six or ten trips and collect a grain of nectar. If it visits 200 or 400 flowers it will gather five grains. Under favorable circumstances it will take a fortnight to obtain fifteen grains. It would, therefore, take it several years to manufacture a pound of honey, which will fill about 3,000 cells. A hive contains from 20,000 to 50,000 bees, half of which prepare the honey, the other half attending to the wants of the hive and the family. On a fine day 16,000 or 20,000 individuals will, in six or ten trips, be able to explore from 30,000 to 1,000,000 flowers, say several hundred thousand plants.

Extermination of the Whale.

The whale is destined to disappear from the North Pacific much more speedily than he was driven from the eastern approaches to the Arctic. The whale fleet sailing out of the port of San Francisco has this year caught in the Arctic regions no less than 353 whales. The product of this season's catch would have been represented by about $2,000,000 had prices remained as they were about three years ago. When one small steamer takes 62 whales in a single season, and a still smaller one kills 64, there is a striking illustration of what steam is doing for the extermination of the whale in the Pacific. There will be no restriction. The whale fishery by sailing vessels has for some time been unprofitable. What the sailing craft could not do in a lifetime of years the steam whaler will pretty effectually accomplish in a very few years.

What Hurt Him.

"I don't mind your refusing me cold victuals, ma'am," said the time-worn and travel-stained pilgrim at the kitchen door, buttoning his faded remnant of a coat under his chin, "but when you call me a worthless tramp you do me a cruel injustice. I have a standing offer of $15, ma'am, from one of the best medical colleges in this country for my corporosity, just as it stands." And with a stately bow he turned away, shuffled down the steps and carried his insulted corporosity to the next kitchen.

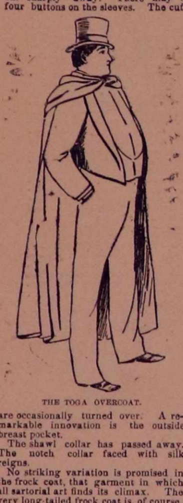
MEN'S STYLES THIS SPRING.

Large Checks—New Shaped Hat—The Toga Overcoat.

According to The New York World, the young man's fancy this spring will lightly turn to thoughts of large check clothes. This direction of his fancy will be accomplished without much effort on his part for the best London tailors have decided that cloth of a large check pattern shall be worn.

The most trustworthy features of the latest form of evening dress is the piping which edges the waistcoat and the tails of the coat. It is of gros-grain silk.

The tails of the coat are not very long, fit closely to the figure and are cut sharply away. There may be four buttons on the sleeves. The cuffs are occasionally turned over. A remarkable innovation is the outside breast pocket.



THE TOGA OVERCOAT.

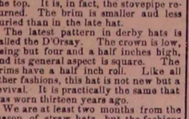
The shawl collar has passed away. The notch collar faced with silk reigns.

No striking variation is promised in the frock coat, that garment in which all sartorial art finds its climax. The very long-tailed frock coat is, of course, an abomination in the eyes of those who sit on the pinnacles of fashion. The frock coat should barely cover the knees and fit closely below the waist.

The new silk hat is of exactly the same design as the one that was in vogue about seven years ago. The body is perfectly straight and produces the effect of tapering slightly towards the top. It is, in fact, the stovepipe returned. The brim is smaller and less curled than in the late hat.

The latest pattern in derby hats is called the D'Orsay. The crown is low, being but four and a half inches high, and its general aspect is square. The brims have a half inch roll. Like all other fashions, this hat is not new but a revival. It is practically the same that was worn thirteen years ago.

We are at least two months from the season of straw hats, but the fashions may be foretold. For a few summers past London swells have taken kindly to straw hats. At first they wore them with very wide brims and low crowns, but they were soon adopted by every Tom, Dick and 'Arry. Then the gilded ones were forced to hats with high crowns and narrow brims. These are still to be the fashion.



THE NEWEST DERBY.

Soft felt hats for summer use, called Alpine and Italian, will also have high crowns and narrow brims. In color they will vary from pearl gray to light brown.

The crowns will not be dented in the middle.

The new overcoat for evening wear is called the toga. It is believed that the Roman Senator's garment was made of a great circular piece of cloth, in which a hole was cut for the head. The new overcoat is constructed on a similar principle. It opens, of course, in front, where there is but one fastening, a clasp, at the neck, with chain. The material is black cloth without lining. It requires about seven yards of cloth to make a toga. It's great recommendation is that it is difficult to wear with grace.

Looked That Way.

Wool—Benedict says his wife's clothes cost a mere trifle.

Van Pelt—Did he marry a living picture?

O'Brien—Poor Doherty! He's so short-sighted he's bound to work himself to death.

O'Grady—Phwat has bein' short-sighted to do with it?

O'Brien—Whoy, he can't see when the boss ain't looking', an' has to keep shovellin' away all the time!—Puck.

POLITENESS OF THE MEXICANS.

An Engineer's Experience With It After a Session With Tequila.

"For manifesting a grave and imperturbable courtesy in every circumstance in life give me the Mexican people," said a civil engineer who lived long in the southwest. "Here is a case in point. A dozen years ago I was visiting Hermosillo, the capital of Sonora, and falling in with an old engineer comrade one afternoon we drank not a little tequilla. Tequilla or mescal, perhaps you know, is a clear white liquor distilled from the century plant, and possessing much of the taste and potency of Irish whiskey. There was a circus in town, and in the evening Johnson and I went up the street to see it. The performance did not greatly interest us and we left the show before it was half through and we started on our way down the stret to the hotel. The tequilla we had drunk was still animating us and inspiring a spirit of adventure. As we came opposite the great house of Dr. Monteverde, one of the grandees of Sonora, we saw perched on a stone post at the entrance of the courtyard a white turkey; and here we stopped and fell to guessing the weight of the bird.

"At last to settle our differences of opinion we started into to catch the turkey. It ran into the courtyard and we followed. Upon the veranda at one side of the courtyard the household were sitting enjoying the evening coolness. At our unceremonious advent they raised not a word of protest, but only laughed as the turkey ran wildly around with Johnson and me in pursuit. After a long chase we caught the bird and approaching the group on the veranda tried to inform them that we should like a pair of scales to weigh it with. Neither Johnson or I had any idea what the Spanish word for scales was, and so we indicated the best we could by signs what we wanted. They showed much in the endeavor to catch our meaning and at last we made ourselves understood.

"'Si senor,' said the head of the house with perfect bonhomie, and calling a servant, gave him directions in Spanish. The servant departed and presently came back with a pair of scales, which were placed at our disposal. We weighed the turkey, set the bird at liberty, returned the scales with thanks, and declined the courteous invitation of the hospitable hidalgo that we should sit down and have a glass of wine, we lifted our hats and went on our way.

"Fancy, two strangers invading private premises and going through such a madcap performance anywhere else you have ever heard of, and then tell me the Mexicans are not the politest people in the world."—Chicago Tribune

The Constituents of a Man's Body.

An interesting exhibit at the National Museum shows the physical ingredients which go to make up the average man weighing 154 pounds. A large glass jar holds the 96 pounds of water which his body contains. In other receptacles are 3 pounds of white of egg, a little less than 10 pounds of pure glue—without which it would be impossible to keep body and soul together—43½ pounds of fat, 8¾ pounds of phosphate of lime, 1 pound of carbonate of lime, 3 ounces of sugar and starch, 7 ounces of fluoride of calcium, 6 ounces of phosphate of magnesia, and a little ordinary atmospheric pressure, the space of primary chemical elements; the same man is found to contain 67 pounds of oxygen—enough to take up, under ordinary atmospheric pressure, the space of a room 10 feet long, 10 feet wide, and 10 feet high. His body also holds 15 pounds of hydrogen, which under the same conditions would occupy somewhat more than two such rooms as that described. To these must be added 3 pounds 13 ounces of nitrogen.

The carbon in the corpus of the individual referred to is represented by a cubic foot of coal, It ought to be a diamond of the same size, because the stone is pure carbon, but the National Museum has not such a one in its possession. A row of bottles contain the other elements going to make up the man. These are 4 ounces of chlorine, 3½ ounces of fluorine, 8 ounces of phosphorus, 3½ ounces of brimstone, 2½ ounces of sodium, 2½ ounces of potassium, 1-10th of an ounce of iron, 2 ounces of magnesium, and 3 pounds 43 ounces of calcium.—American Analyst.

GENTLEMEN,—In the spring of 1891 I got a bottle of B. B. B. for my mother, who had been troubled with Sick Headache. I got it from Mr. H. Paxton Baird, of Woodstock, N. B., who gave me two other medicines to take home and let my mother take her choice. Fortunately she chose the B B. B., and I returned the other bottles. She used it for three months and has had no headache since. We are sure it was B. B. B. cured her as she took no other medicine.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an ag of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.

MOLECULAR LIFE IN DIAMONDS.

Gems Declared to be Masses of Enormously Active Atoms.

If you think your polished diamond is a mere aggregation of inanimate crystals, you are away wrong. If you imagine that its components are devoid of orderly, coherent motion, you are equally mistaken. It has come to pass that we are given to understand that diamonds are masses of active molecules. Inasmuch as everybody is composed of multitudes of exceedingly small yet not indistinguishable molecules, it might be concluded that in a solid, at least, these particles would be clustered together in an indivisible mass. This theory as applied to diamonds is incorrect, and has been completely overthrown by the researches and experiments of Sir Robert Ball, of Liverpool. The facts set forth by Mr. Ball with reference to the structure of the diamond are fascinating. He asserts that were the sensibilities of our eyes increased so as to make them a few million times more powerful, it would be seen that the diamond atoms, which form the perfect gem when aggregated in sufficient myriads, are each in a condition of active movement of the most complex description.

Each molecule would be seen swinging to and fro with the utmost violence among the neighboring molecules, and quivering from the shocks it receives from encounters with other molecules, which occur millions of times in each second. The hardness and impenetrability so characteristic would at first sight seem to refute the supposition that it is no more than a cluster of rapidly moving particles; but the well-known impenetrability of the gem arises from the fact that, when attempt is made to press a steel point into a stone, it fails, because the rapidly moving molecules of the stone batter the metal with such extraordinary vehemence that they refuse to allow it to penetrate or even to mark the crystallized surface.

When glass is cut with a diamond, the edge which seems so hard is really composed of rapidly moving atoms. The glass which is cut is also merely a mass of moving molecules, and what seems to happen is that as the diamond is pressed forward, its several particles, by their superior vigor, drive the little particles of glass out of the way.—New York Herald.

A Pastel.

My friend was a guest of the morning train,
And once, as a prosperous town it neared,
He idly glanced through the window-pane,
And this is the picture that turned;

A good-faced man in a fiendish plight;
His cheeks were bloated and stained with red,
He slept the day of a sin-cursed night,
A pillow of stones beneath his head.

By him the midnight's revelling storm
Sent stains to the morning's balmy breath,
And manhood's towering, godlike form
Lay low in the tomb of a drunkard-death.

And brooded this wreck of a man above;
Her brow was a glimpse of all things good;
Her eyes were symbols of home and love.

Stood close by his side, and yet apart,
A motionless gesture of despair,
As if she would clasp him to her heart,
If only the man himself were there.

She stood as maybe if she had known
What marks the one she had found there bore,
She had prayed to God with a bitter moan
To keep her searching for evermore.

She stood like one who had felt the touch
Of needless worry and senseless strife;
Who early in years had learned how much
Of death there is in a woman's life.

She stood like one who had set a goal;
Who ne'er by her God would be denied,
Until He had helped her lead that soul
Safe up to the hill-tops by her side.

All this appeared in a moment's glance—
This flash-light picture of grief and wrong;
The train made sudden and swift advance,
But carried the husband and wife along.

For ever after, my friend confessed,
Went with him that scene of crime and pain;
Through days of striving and nights of rest
It hung in the halls of his heart and brain.

And other pictures are wont to throng;
Of sleeping children and waking wives—
Waiting and waiting the whole night long
For one they love as they love their lives;

Of praying for him till night is o'er;
Of listening for his step in vain;
Then searching as if on fields of gore,
And finding him almost worse than slain.

But sometimes these will vanish away;
And Faith is painting a promise bright
That God, and Woman, and Home, some day,
Will draw Mankind to the hills of right.

—Will Carlton.

GOSSIP OF SERVANTS.

A Malicious Practice That Leads to Much Trouble.

Often the most vicious and malicious gossip is disseminated through the medium of vindictive and irresponsible servants, who curry favor with their new mistress by telling tales of those for whom they formerly worked.

It is useless to remonstrate that real ladies will not listen to the gossip of servants, for even real ladies are only human, and, alas, it is very human to be interested in the misbehavior of others.

The writer was told the other day of a maid who has wrought incalculable harm in numbers of families and whose calumnies are so serious that they really ought to be punished. She has spread her evil slime of calumny everywhere where it will stick. Hairdressers are notorious scandal-mongers, and so are many nurse girls, and many a tale that has wrought ruin and sorrow has had its evil beginnings in the kitchen or from the mouth of the peripatetic hairdresser, who "amuses" her ladies while smoothing their plaits.

In the South our "hired help" is particularly irresponsible. Most of the cooks are picked up in the street, as it were, and their temporary mistress knows neither the name of their last employer or even their own homes. What such a creature may have to say of her last "madame" has about as much moral value with a fair-minded woman as an anonymous letter—that scurrilous, stealthy stiletto that is a weapon of the traitor, whose deceit is thus smirched by the equal stain of cowardice.—New York Advertiser.

A Slight Difference.

THE LETTER CARRIER.

A Truthful Tribute to the Worth of a Public Servant.

That one-half of the world does not know how the other half lives, is a familiar adage. It applies to men's vocations as well as to their other relations to the general economy. Among the callings of life there is none of more general interest to everyone than that of the letter carrier, who is the daily servitor of the many and the familiar servant of all classes and of every nation. His goings and comings are recorded by nearly everyone upon the district that he serves, and he is probably the most interesting visitor the merchant and conservative man of business has during the course of a day.

Considering the responsibilities of the position he holds, there are few public servants who receive more meager pay or whose duties are more onerous. His duties are of the kind that must be performed. They cannot be shirked, as the interests involved are too vital, and the mail he delivers of too great a value to be delayed. Promptitude industry, exactness must be his motto, and in this regard he is a modern illustration of the "little busy bee" which pointed school day morals.—Baltimore World.

A Portland boy attended the recent fire at the orphan asylum in that city. Soon after it was extinguished, he was asked: "Where was the fire, Harold?"

"At the orphan asylum," was the reply.

"Is that so?" said the enquirer, in excitement. "Why, it must have been awful!"

"Oh, no," said Harold, "it wasnt very bad. The building wasn't damaged much, and as soon as the fire was discovered they sent the orphans home to their parents, so none of them was hurt."—Kennebec Journal.

THE MODEL VENTILATOR

Now in order to get proper ventilation you must have your window sash adjusted so that you can lower the top sash down, which is the proper place to ventilate your houses from, and also let the foul air out at the same time.

This will keep the air in your house pure and healthy, thus saving sickness and doctor's bills: but raising the bottom sash causes direct draught which is a well known fact to be very injurious to health more particularly in sleeping rooms. FOSTER'S FAKE FINANCING.

With $5,000,000 Deficit He Claims a Surplus.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT'S FACTS

This Enormous Deficit Rolled Up in Nine Months—The Last Loan Dissipated—No Funds to Meet Maturing Obligations — A Merciless Exposure.

Ottawa, April 22.—Sir Richard Cartwright's exposition in Friday's debate in the House of the finances of the Dominion and the condition to which they have been brought by the present Government was most timely and concise. He made plain one of two conclusions: Either the Government, and notably the Finance Minister, had been most careless or reckless in their making provisions for the present.

He said: The hon. gentleman (the present Finance Minister) is confronted, and he knows he is confronted, with a huge deficit. Let us know the facts. I have observed with some amusement the desperate contortions and evasions made on the part of the honorable gentleman's organs to escape the pressure of this deficit. I have observed something more. Newspaper correspondents and newspaper editors are not supposed to be very well versed in the mysteries of the finance department, and according to the Minister of Justice they could not always be relied upon even if the were. But, sir, what shall we say when we find in the last copy of The Official Gazette a statement like this: Revenue and expenditure on account of consolidated fund; expenditure to the end of 31st March, 1895; revenue at the end of 31st March, 1895; surplus $708,107. I believe this is the first time since confederation that the word "surplus" has ever been inserted or this line ever appeared in the public gazette.

What does it mean? Why was it inserted? There were four bye-elections—of course that is a matter of detail—about to come off a few days after this first appeared. But what does the honorable gentleman mean by it? Here is the official statement of the department that on March 31, 1895, there was a surplus of $708,107. If that means anything it is that it has been inserted for a purpose. I am sorry to say I can conceive of no purpose except the purpose of confusing the minds of the people at large and creating absolutely a false impression as to the real state of the case. It is true, no doubt, that the audited expenditure certified by the finance department up to March 31, 1895, may only show what is stated here, a total expenditure of $23,844,000, as against a total receipt of $24,353,000. But every man who knows anything at all of the Department of Finance or of the way in which our national bookkeeping is managed knows perfectly well that from the nature of the case a very large portion of the expenditure which has actually been incurred and which is payable at that moment or in the latter month of the year is never credited at all or entered in the public accounts until some weeks after the termination of the financial year, and that, therefore, although this may be a correct statement as regards the audited expenditure, yet this statement which I hold in my hand is most unquestionably a very false statement in the impression which any ordinary reader will take from it on seeing for the first time in 27 years a declaration that there was such and such a surplus in favor of the Government on March 31.

Now, sir, I am going to show the House what the real state of the case is, and I challenge the hon. minister to contradict these facts. I desire the attention of the House, because this is a grave matter. If I am wrong I desire to be corrected, and if I am right I desire that every member of this House should bear in mind what it means. It means that to-day, after nine months' receipts are in, after nine months' audited expenditure, so called, is in, so far from having a surplus of $708,000 we have to-day, as it will be presently shown, an ascertained deficit of $5,016,000 on the transactions of these nine months.

I do not think that the hon. gentleman will have any ground to complain of want of plainness with respect to the statement I have just made. It is well known to every member of this House that we unfortunately closed the last financial year with a deficit of $1,200,000 in round numbers. Now, on March 31, the date on which a surplus of $708,000 is claimed by The Official Gazette, and for which the Minister of Finance is entirely responsible; on that date the revenue from all sources received fell short of the revenue for the nine months of 1894 by the sum of $3,291,747. The expenditure for the same period exceeded the expenditure for the first nine months of 1894 by the sum of $513,236. We stated, therefore, with a deficit of one and a quarter millions in round numbers. We have got in these nine months a revenue of three millions and a quarter less, and we have spent half a million dollars more, and if you add these three sums together you will find that if it is the desire of the department of Finance to enlighten the public as to the real state of the case, instead of putting in a fictitious and imaginary surplus of $708,000, they would state that in those nine months there was an ascertained deficit of $5,016,000.

What the remaining three months may have in store for us I do not know, and the hon. gentleman does not know; but I am afraid that it is extremely improbable that any material portion of this $5,000,000 will, under the most favorable circumstances, be reduced; and, on the other hand, if the same expenditure continues in proportion, and the same falling off in the revenue continues, it is extremely probable that in the ensuing three months the figure which was named by my hon. friend is likely to be increased to $6,000,000.

The honorable gentleman, be it remembered, was very strong some time ago in telling us that he was going to put a stop to the increase of the net debt; yet the total net debt of March 31, 1894, amounted to $240,189,000, while on March 31, 1895, it amounted to $248,150,000, being as nearly as possible an increase of $8,000,000 in one year. Now, sir, I do not ask much from the honorable gentleman, but I think, under the circumstances, I have the right to ask for some information. If the statements that I have made be true, if it be the fact that there is to-day at the close of nine months, an ascertained deficit of over $5,000,000, I think, sir, that, although we are not entitled to ask the honorable gentleman for details, we are entitled to ask him whether he seriously proposes to allow this monstrous deficit to exist without taking any steps to reduce it or to equalize expenditure and revenue by imposing an additional taxation.

Judging from what I stated I should imagine the honorable gentleman intends to do nothing. Judging from the tone of his speech the honorable gentleman lives in hope and desires us to live also. Now, Sir, the honorable gentleman can surely tell us his policy must have been settled on this head long ago—whether it is part of his intention to meet that deficit by the imposition of an additional amount of taxation or not. He can likewise tell us whether he intends to add to the burden of the people by making any new and additional grants, and that is a thing the House ought to be seized of at the earliest possible moment under existing circumstances.

The honorable gentleman might likewise tell us does he propose to execute any new loans? Sir, I have taken the opportunity of analysing the statements of the amounts at the honorable gentleman's disposal, and so far as I can see, and again I am open to correction, the honorable gentleman's loan amounting to about $10,700,000—I think that is about the amount it realized—appears to have entirely disappeared. Sir, I find that up to the first of April, 1895, we had a capital expenditure of $3,273,000; we had borrowed £500,000 sterling in England, which we have repaid; we had the deficit of 1895 to provide for $1,210,000; we have a deficit for the current year to date of $5,016,000. So that against $10,700,000 the hon. gentleman has either spent or will be called upon to provide for sums amounting to $11,932,000, without counting any additional expenditure which may be incurred on capital account within the next three months.

Now, sir, as to the amount of cash in hand, and here again the hon. gentleman can correct me if I am wrong. I find that in the various Canadian banks the hon. gentleman is credited with $5,300,000. That sum is all anticipated already. If the sums due to date were paid the whole amount would disappear. That is the position in which we stand to-day.

In the Speech from the Throne it is intimated that legislation will be required before the French treaty can go into effect. Mr. Foster explains this by the statement that as Great Britain has treaties with some powers in which the most favored nation clause appears, she is anxious that her other colonies should have as good treatment as is given to France in this respect, as to any other other foreign power with which Canada makes a treaty. As regards the most favored nations, it is absolutely necessary, under the treaties, that their articles, which are of the same nature as those mentioned in the French treaty, must receive most favored nation treatment. The Canadian Act of Parliament in which the treaty is embraced does make such a provision, and the fact of the existence of the treaty does not override the tariff law of the country. Accordingly Great Britain wishes that, before ratifications are exchanged and the treaty is proclaimed, the actual law shall make that point clear as regards the most favored nations and the colonies. This explanation on the part of the Finance Minister, while not as definite as it might be, puts an altogether different complexion upon the French treaty. In other words, it is held to be essential that the privileges in trade which Canada extends to France must also be extended to Germany and Belgium.

This interpretation necessarily puts quite a different complexion upon the unfortunate French treaty. It means that Canada must concede advantages to Germany and Belgium, in return for which we get no equivalent. The new arrangement is bound to create considerable discussion in the House.

FITZ AND CORBETT TO FIGHT.

"It's a Go," Says Corbett's Manager—The Money Goes Up On Monday.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 19.—James J. Corbett has received the following telegram from his manager: "Fitzsimmons will put his money up Monday next sure, and it's a go. Take care of yourself."

"That settles it at last," said Corbett, "and I know for the first time that the match is a go. I shall close my theatrical dates at St. Louis three weeks earlier than I expected, and, after a rest of two weeks, will go into training at Asbury Park. I am glad that the match is closed, for I have been anxious to show the world the merits of the two men. I expect to win, as I think I outclass Fitzsimmons, who is a clever man, and who will go into the ring in better condition than ever before. I think I know every blow and every move in boxing, and I am sure I shall never be put out except by a chance blow, which is something that might happen to any man."

New York Central Taps Duluth.

Duluth, Minn., April 21—The New York Central Friday completed arrangements with the Canadian Pacific and the Duluth, South Shore and Atlantic Railroads, which will give it a direct road to Duluth, and two trains are to be run daily between these points. This step is the result of the recent extensions of the Canadian Pacific into United States territory, which make that road a direct feeder from St. Paul to the Pacific Coast, and is believed to hinge directly on the pending extension of the Duluth and Winnipeg road to Winnipeg, which will give Duluth a direct line to the Pacific Coast.

Atrocious Murder in New York.

New York, April 21.—A murder, which has not been surpassed for atrocity since "Old Shakespeare" was found butchered in the East River Hotel three years ago, was committed in Thompson-street or its immediate vicinity some time during the early hours of this morning. The victim of the crime was a woman known as Annie Walsh, who was found unconscious in a pool of blood in the hallway of Nos 143 Thompson-street. The crime is of the Jack the Ripper type.

Liberals Lose Oxford City.

London, April 21.—A Parliamentary election was held in Oxford city Saturday to fill the seat left vacant by the death of Sir George Chesney, Conservative. Viscount Valentia, the Unionist candidate was chosen by a vote of 3745 to 3143 for Dr. Fletcher Little, Liberal. The Liberals have lost ground in the constituency since the last general election, when the Conservative majority was but 126.

Minister Crushed Under a Train.

Somerset, Pa., April 21.—Rev. Robert M. Patton, a minister of the Disciples Church, was crushed to death by a passenger train Saturday near Casselman. It is not known whether he accidentally fell between the coaches or threw himself off with suicidal intentions. He told several friends that he had made a mistake in entering the ministry, and it is thought he had been to Pittsburg Saturday trying to secure other employment.

In France, a very good gas is made from the fatty material contained in the soapsuds, after washing wools and yarns. The wash water of a wooden mill with 20,000 spindles will annually yield enough of this substance to produce 1,100,000 feet of gas.

MARRIED IN A BAGGAGE CAR

The Groom a Convict En Route to Sing Sing.

THE BRIDE A JARVIS, ONT., GIRL

He Was Sentenced to Six Years in Jail—She Could Not Wait So Long and They Were Married in the Car—A Romantic Story.

New York, April 22.—Jacob Herzig, who was convicted here of forging his father's indorsement to a draft for $898, was sentenced to six years and six months' imprisonment Friday, and was taken to Sing Sing in the afternoon.

Just before the train started, a young lady, smartly gowned, and carrying a large bouquet, rushed up to Herzig. He kissed her fondly and they talked for a few minutes. Then the young lady's companion stepped forward. He was a minister, and all entered the car just as the train was starting.

After the train had cleared the tunnel young Herzig, the lady, the minister, another convict and the keepers went into the baggage car. Then Herzig and the woman were married. There was no wedding breakfast. The bridal trip ended at Sing Sing, when the party walked up the railroad track to the prison and were received by Warden Sage.

Young Jacob or "Jack" Herzig is the third son of Simon Herzig, a furrier, of the firm of Herzig Brothers, at No. 133 Mercer-street, New York. He is in his 25th year. According to his relatives he is a confirmed spendthrift and gambler. He paved his way from the Atlantic to the Pacific with drafts on his father and uncle, Philip Herzig. That trip cost his relatives more than $40,000.

The maiden name of the bride was Theramutis Ivey. She is a tall, stately brunet of French-Canadian extraction, having been born about 18 years ago in Jarvis, Ont., where her parents now reside.

Mrs. Herzig first met her husband in the Catskill Mountains two summers ago, and the pair fell in love. They corresponded, and Herzig, who was then traveling for his father, visited her at her home in Jarvis, Ont. Their marriage was set for last Christmas. Last November she heard of Herzig's trouble and went to New York, where she has since remained.

She said: "Jack put off the marriage, and when he was sentenced Friday he wanted me to wait until he came out of prison. I told him that six years and a half was a long time to wait, and I asked him if he would object to be married at once. He thought no minister would marry us, but when I spoke to Mr. Lindsay, one of the Tombs missionaries, he promised he would perform the ceremony. There was no time to have the marriage in the Tombs, and I hustled Mr. Lindsay up to the Grand Central Depot, and before he knew it had him aboard the train where Jack was."

"We were married in a baggage car just as the train pulled out of High Bridge Station. Mr. Lindsay got off the train at Yonkers, and I went to the prison gates with my husband. Why did I marry him? Because I loved him. I wanted to prove my devotion." Mrs. Herzig says she intends to return to Jarvis, Ont., and will visit her husband at Sing Sing as often as she can. Mrs. Herzig says she is a graduate of a Toronto convent. She is well educated and plays several musical instruments.

To another reporter Mrs. Herzig told that her parents opposed the marriage, because Herzig was a Hebrew. Her father, she said, was a retired merchant living at Jarvis. She has been disowned by her parents for the persistency with which she has clung to Herzig, even after he was convicted.

Sir Robert Hamilton Dead.

London, April 22.—Sir Robert Hamilton, K.C.B., died at 2.45 o'clock this morning. He was born in 1836 and was educated at Aberdeen University. He entered the civil service in 1855 and in the next 20 years held several departmental offices. In May, 1882, he was appointed Under Secretary of the Admiralty and soon afterward Secretary for Ireland. In 1886 he was made Governor of Tasmania. He was supposed to have much to do with Mr. Gladstone's foreign policy.

A Life Saved by a Human Brute.

Boston, April 22.—John L. Sullivan saved a woman's life to-day. Mrs. Margaret Donnelly, a cook at No. 51 Dover-street, was preparing some food and a kettle of hot fat fell to the floor and the contents scattered over her clothing, setting it on fire. John L. was in one of the upper rooms of the house, and the woman's screams attracted his attention. He rushed to the kitchen and quenched the flames with his hands. His hands and arms were badly burned.

Alleged Feeling Against Confederation.

St. John's, Nfld., April 22.—The steamer Grand Lake arrived to-day, having on board the Newfoundland delegates who have been in Ottawa negotiating terms for the colony's entrance into the Dominion of Canada. The feeling here against confederation is gaining strength and an effort will be made to prevent any attempt on the part of the Government to rush the measure through the Legislature without submitting it to a popular vote, which is believed to be the present intention.

Two Burned in a B.C. Hotel Fire.

Kamloops, B.C., April 22.—Word has just been received at Nicola Lake that Driard Hotel was destroyed by fire on Thursday morning. Alexander Ferguson and Joseph Moore perished. The other boarders had a narrow escape. Loss $3000.

Stables in Thorold

Thorold, Ont., April 22.—The Welland House stables here were burned Saturday night. All the horses were got out but one. The buildings were owned by John Schwaller. Loss about $600; insured for $400.

Spanish Boat Fires on an English Smack.

Jacksonville, Fla., April 22.—A cablegram to The Times-Union from Key West, Fla., says: Nassau schooner Gertrude Roberts, master, arrived at this port this morning and reports that on Monday last a Spanish gunboat fired into an English smack off Long Key, on the east coast of Cuba, killing two of the crew.

Wales Will Open the Railroad Congress.

London, April 21.—The Prince of Wales will formerly open the International Railway Congress, which is to convene in this city on June 26. The sittings will occupy a fortnight. All of the principal countries except Germany will be represented. Eleven American railway companies will send delegates.

"Mercy! Goodness!" exclaimed Mr. Watkins, dropping his pipe in consternation, "what is that awful riot in the kitchen?"

"That's the war with China," answered his wife placidly, going on with her book.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelle's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

Germany reports 289 instances of suicide among school children during the last six years.

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal."

For Over Fifty Years

AN OLD AND WELL-TRIED REMEDY.—Mrs. Winslow's Sothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by Druggists in every part of the World. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

She (bitterly)—Before you married me I was an angel. I'll never be that again I suppose. He (sarcastically)—Well, I live in hopes.

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

The Pekin (China) Gazette, a journal that was 200 years old when the Normans conquered England, has the further distinction of having had 1,600 of its editors beheaded.

THE EVIL OF BONUSES

The other day we stated in somewhat general terms what we thought of bonusing industries, but the Halifax Chronicle speaks more specifically as follows.

EXCHANGE: It is proposed in the city of Kingston to loan $250,000 to an iron smelting company, to give a free site for its furnaces and place of business, and to exempt it from taxation for ten years. These are sadly great terms for the home iron industry.

THE HERALD: The people of Kingston are following the example of Hamilton and certainly do not anticipate an early accession to power of Mr. Laurier with his policy of "free trade as it is in England, without a vestige of protection."

We gather from the Herald's remarks that it is not only in favor of bonusing the iron industry by high customs tariff protection and by direct subventions from the public treasury, but that it is also in favor of giving that greedy "infant industry" additional hot-house nursing by municipal gifts of money, free sites and exemption from taxation. That is, the Herald endorses and justifies as wise and right a policy which empowers the federal and municipal authorities to lay hands upon the property of the people and bestow it upon favored industries, in order that they may become prosperous and remunerative to their promoters. In the case of the Kingston project the iron smelting company are to be given a municipal loan of $250,000; the citizens are to put their hands into their pockets and give them a free site, and they are to further put their hands in their pockets and pay the taxes for which the iron company would be liable. The iron company is to get the dividends and the citizens of Kingston who are to be legislated into partnership in the business, in other words, are to be compelled to take stock in the concern—are not to share in the dividends; but must be content with the indirect advantages, if any, which may accrue to the city from the establishment of such an industry there.

Is not such a proceeding, besides being exceedingly unwise from an economic point of view, utterly indefensible from the standpoint of right and justice? It is simply another phase of the system of "legalized robbery" involved in the maintenance of a protective tariff which compels the masses of the people to contribute to the enrichment of the favored few.

The Ottawa Citizen, government organ, takes an entirely different view of the proposed Kingston experiment from that taken by the Herald. The Citizen points out that the action proposed by the civic authorities of Kingston is a violation of law, because, three years ago, the legislature of Ontario passed a law depriving municipal councils of the power of granting bonuses to manufacturing and other enterprises. The reason why is thus described by our Ottawa contemporary:

"In dealing with municipalities it has been found necessary by the provincial legislature to put a restraint upon the powers of councils to burden the inhabitants with taxes or pledge them to onerous engagements. Until recently municipal corporations were permitted to grant aid by way of bonus for the promotion of manufactures within their limits as well as by exempting the industry from the payment of its regular taxes. This provision was found to lead to widespread abuse. Sharp speculators took advantage of it to make towns and cities bid against each other for the location of a factory, promising all kinds of glittering benefit in return. The municipal councils were easily led. Money that should have gone to the proper and normal purposes of civic government was wasted upon ill judged enterprises which were incapable of paying their way, and sometimes left no other reminiscence after a few years of activity than the empty walls to remind the people of their folly."

This is putting the case quite plainly. The civic or municipal bonus system, besides being unwise and costly, in nine cases out of ten, results disastrously to the bonusing city or municipality. In addition to all that it is morally wrong and a gross abuse of the legal and constitutional powers bestowed upon cities and municipalities. It is, however, a natural appendage of the protection system and along with the latter should be swept out of existence, so that every industry may stand on its bottom, with its prosperity dependent upon its own merits and on the intelligent enterprise, energy and economy of its promoters.

Nervous People

Hood's Pills are easy to take, easy in action and sure in effect. 25c.

The fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla, once fairly tried, becomes the favorite spring medicine speaks volumes for its excellence and merit.

DR. L. A. SMITH & CO., Toronto.

As Commented on by Some New York Correspondents

London, April 22.—The public assurances of the Right Hon. George J. Goschen, that the reports of the imminent disruption of the compact between the Conservatives and the Unionists are unfounded, and the asseverations of Sir William Hart Dyke, that the leaders of both sections are on the friendliest terms with one another, have failed of their object of dissipating belief that discord exists to the ultimate rupture of the close political relations of the two parties. There is no doubt that the Conservative leaders will strain every possible point to secure the cohesion of the parties, but the rank and file are not too rooted to tactical considerations, and refuse to admit the necessity of observing the Tory compact with Mr. Chamberlain and his followers. The reports emanating from the Carlton Club agree that there is bitter discontent with Mr. Balfour's course in submitting to the leadership of Mr. Chamberlain. This feeling has gone to such extremes that the older Tories openly declare that Mr. Balfour ought not to hold the confidence of the party any longer.

Associated with the Unionist dissension from the Conservatives is an internal movement in the Liberal party towards placating the Unionists. Although Mr. Chamberlain remains an object of detestation on the part of the Radicals, the genuine Home Rulers and the moderate Liberals who are Home Rulers from motives of expediency continue to regard him as not only a possible leader, but a desirable one, if the Gladstone form of Home Rule is abandoned so that the tentative and temporary Home Rulers can privately and through the medium of the press proceed toward a reconciliation.

Mr. Chamberlain, to-day's Graphic says, will not be lured into the Gladstonian fold, but once let the Liberals drop Mr. Gladstone's hateful legacy and then it will be time for him to join and lead the reconstructed Liberal party.

The Evening News, the only Gladstonian organ in Edinburgh, declares that the Scotch Liberals will be glad of a great excuse for abandoning Home Rule. Mr. Gladstone's is recognized as an impossible measure and continues to be an incubus to the party. The present alliance with the anti-Parnellites is demoralizing and it would better be dissolved, and Mr. Chamberlain invited back to the Liberal fold upon a basis of modified Home Rule. The opinion of The Evening News is doubtless an expression of the feeling of the Liberals constituting Mr. Gladstone's Midlothian constituency and it has not escaped the attention of the Irish members, among whom the conviction is growing that Home Rule as promised by the Liberals will prove to be a mirage.

The proceedings of 84 delegates of the Independent Labor party in session in Newcastle have derived especial importance as influencing 24 parliamentary seats in the next elections, and embodying the left wing of the Radical party. So ultra-Socialist were the resolutions passed that The Daily News and another Ministerial newspaper found it necessary to repudiate them. The delegates passed a resolution pledging themselves to compel all their adherents to vote at the next elections as dictated by the Governing Committee of the Independent labor party. They also approved bills to compel the local authorities to provide work for every adult, the hours to be eight per day, and the minimum wages 30 shillings a week; providing for state pensions for everybody after reaching the age of 50 years; for a weekly special provision for widows and orphans; free education, including access to the universities; free schools for the children of the poor, with food and clothing; that land shall be treated as public property; that the railways and waterways shall be nationalised; that the liquor traffic shall be controlled by the municipal governments, and finally a resolution condemning anarchism, was rejected. The Spectator contends that such a program, if it be the result to which Radicalism tends, will alarm the whole community and cause a strong reaction towards Conservatism.

M. FAURE TO VISIT WINDSOR.

It is reported, and the rumor is credited in official circles, that communications are passing with the object of arranging for M. Felix Faure, President of the French Republic, to pay a visit to Windsor. It is understood that M. Faure, who for some time sojourned in London, is willing to accept the invitation, which is likely to be sent immediately after the Queen returns. A similar reception to the late President Carnot was under discussion at the time of his death.

The Anarchist scare, based upon an alleged conspiracy to assassinate M. Faure while in Havre, is not shared by the police here, who declare that the Paris stories of the departure of Anarchists from London for Havre are pure fiction. The London Anarchists, the police say, were never quieter than they are now.

The entente between England and Russia has led to elaborate preparations for an interchange of naval demonstrations. According to the program a Russian squadron will pay an official visit to Portsmouth in the fall and a British squadron will visit Cronstadt or the Black Sea. The movements of the Czar are as yet unsettled. It is thought likely, however, that the ships will go to Cronstadt.

The ninetieth birthday of the Rev. James Martineau, the eminent theologian and philosopher, younger brother of Harriet Martineau, which occurs Sunday, has been the occasion of a flood of congratulations from American and English representatives of religious thought. The aged philosopher is in fine health and endowed with vigorous working power. His voice is strong and his movements easy. In an interview, he said that no special regimen had contributed to his longevity. For many years, he said, he had been a total abstainer from intoxicants upon moral grounds, but now that his circulation had become languid the doctors had prescribed a spoonful of whisky nightly.

Double Drowning at Quebec.

Quebec, April 22.—Last night four men in a small boat were crossing Montmorency River near the Three Falls, and, about four miles above Montmorency Falls the boat upset and two of its occupants, Gilbert Heinse and a man named Dubreuil, were drowned. As the river is very swift, particularly at this time of the year, it is probable that the bodies will never be recovered.

Prince of Wales to Visit America.

New York, April 20.—A dispatch from Newport, R. I., to a morning paper says: The announcement was made here to-day that the Prince of Wales will visit America this summer. A prominent society man has received a letter from England announcing that he will attend the cup races and spend several weeks at Newport.

SOLDIERS DIED LIKE WORMS.

The Strange Plague That Swept Away the Schismatic Enemies of the Papacy.

The epidemic of the Middle Ages were so numerous that even such indefatigable historians as Hecker and Hoesor have been compelled to leave many of them unnoticed. One of the most interesting of these, both from the historic and medical standpoints, is the plague which fell upon the German army in Italy, A. D. 1167, and which has been fully described by several contemporary chroniclers. The following outline is based mainly on the account given by Henry, Archdeacon of Salzburg, who says that he has carefully compiled it from the narratives of eyewitnesses.

The long controversy between the Empire and the Papacy had culminated in an open schism and the establishment of an Anti-Pope, to support whom with a great army, directed at once against the independence of the Church and of the Lombard cities. The terrible destruction of this army in the moment of its triumph sent a thrill of mingled horror and exultation throughout Europe.

"Then happened a thing unheard of since the creation of the world, which till the end thereof will make the ears of whoso heareth it to tingle. Peruse the chronicles of the nations; where will you find a tale such as that which tells how the power, wealth and pride of all Germany died, not as men die, neither fell like one of the princes, but were destroyed in heaps, like the rainworms or the locusts after a tempest?"

The great church of St. Peter at Rome had been taken by storm. "They broke down the gates thereof with axes and swords, and cut off chips from the doors, boasting that they would take them to their wives as tokens of their own powers, and of the ignominy of the blessed Peter; so the vengeance of God came upon them in the pestilence."

Three days later, Aug. 1, Frederick and Beatrice were crowned with great pomp by the Anti-Pope Paschalis, in the still blood-stained church. The next morning was marked by a sudden tempest of thunder and rain, after which the sun shone out brightly, till a thin mist rising from the ground covered the tents of the schismatic army, and then the plague began. The number of the victims, says Henry, great as it was, was less terrible than the suddenness of their deaths.

There were a hundred chosen men in armor (loricati) who formed the Emperor's bodyguard, and camped apart from the rest. "The Emperor had mounted his horse and, wondering at the delay, sent a messenger for them. He found their weapons piled and their horses tethered, but the hundred men in armor and their attendants were all of them corpses."

The plague seemed specially to single out the great men of the army, particularly the schismatic clergy. Rainald, Archbishop of Cologne, "head and leader of the schism"; the Bishops of Prague, Regensoburg, Spires, Verdun and Liege all died in a few days, and the death of so many princes and nobles brought into prominence, if it did not originate, a curious custom of some interest for the history of anatomy. Many persons "ashamed to leave their dead friends in a hostile country," boiled their bodies and extracted the bones, in order to take them home to their fatherland. Thus they boiled Bishop Daniel and took his bones to Prague, but his clergy refused to pray for his soul till it appeared to one of them and told him he had repented of his schism before death. Some, according to Henry, tried to preserve the whole body by cooking and salting it. "A certain man was cooking his brother in a caldron, when a friend sent to borrow it for a similar purpose; but he replied that he could not have it, for, after cooking his brother, he should want to be cooked in it himself, which was also done."—The Hospital.

Curious occupations for women crop out in these days, when any talent, from that of sharpening a lead pencil specially well to teaching Greek, seems to find a money equivalent from some circle of patrons. A novel way of earning a living is afforded a certain number of young girls in one or two places of business in the East End of London. Their sole duty is to test eggs, by holding them between the eye and the light. From skill and experience they are able instantly to determine their condition in this way. Another woman, also English, is a purveyor, or provider, for a consideration, of appropriate names for children. For the modest sum of 25 cents she proclaims in the newspapers her willingness to suitably name any baby of high or low estate. All the proud parents have to do, who wish to take advantage of her professional assistance, is to forward with the requisite fee such particulars as to their position in life, temperament, the color of the baby's eyes, the month of its birth, and one or two more of like import, and by return mail the applicant will receive a name which, it is stated, "is warranted to give satisfaction."

LIGHT VERSUS DIRT.

It is the Most Effective Agent to Promote Cleanliness.

Light is the most efficient weapon with which to flirt dirt in the domestic, as it is in the moral world, but the kitchen, where constant warfare must be waged with grit, grime and grease, is woefully apt to be the most ill-lighted apartment in the house. Many kitchens have but one window, more only two, and these so placed upon the same side as to but partially light the room. The sink is peculiarly unfortunate in this respect; the best economy of time and labor requires it to be placed near the range, often in a corner at some distance from either window, where the kitchen maid must stand with her hands and their occupation in needless shadow.

Small wonder that the work is neither clean nor accurate where by no possibility can one see how it is being done. Forethought by the architect, supplemented by coercion judiciously applied to the builder, would remedy the trouble in ninety-nine per cent. of such houses. The tribe of builders seems to have a hereditary antipathy to windows, as they have to closets; but let all corners be flooded with day and hidden iniquities of grease and rubbish will be routed, the army of predatory insects and vermin will vanish before the blessed conjury and sweetness reign with light.

The modern fashion of plumbing that requires all the work to be in open sight, has been most successful in overcoming the worst dangers in our sewerage system; how long before common sense and science will combine to apply the same remedy to dirt? Only occasionally is a voice raised in protest against the clouds of dust in which we move, and with difficulty breathe and have our being.

In the ordinary boarded floor the space between the joists becomes an unseen cavern for the collection of dust in its most objectionable forms, while the crevices between the boards receive layer after layer of dirty soap and water, to be again dried, pulverized by the constant treading of feet and redistributed through the air of the kitchen, falling upon the food as it is prepared for our tables and swept by currents of warm air through the whole house to be breathed.

Light Without Heat.

To the speculative mind, writes Lieut. F. Jarvis Patten in The Electrical World, none of the possible future applications of electricity is more attractive and none so full of immediate interest as the possibility that seems almost within our grasp of obtaining light without heat, of making the light waves without the heat waves that have thus far always been at the same time the companion and the burden of all artificial light. The time is ripe, and the exact science of the day seems all but ready and willing to give the analysis of two great problems, the answer to either of which would stand the crowning achievement of a century of progress in the application of nature's secret to the requirements of daily life. One of these—the navigation of the air—seems to be a mechanical problem only, while the other—the production of light without heat—we may as confidently say is only a question of properly handling the electric current. Nature presents us with beautiful examples of both solutions, but guards jealously the key to her method of operation, by which well-known forces are made to do the apparently impossible thing, and it is equally beyond our science to-day to explain how the bird soars aloft on motionless wing and how the glow worm emits a gleam of light without a ray of heat. But they do it, and the many imitators of the bird will soon be equaled in number by those who are chasing the firefly's secret. What nature does with nature's forces man should and doubtless will be able to do with a full knowledge of those forces and a better comprehension of the methods by which nature applies them. Who shall say which is the more difficult accomplishment, the production of an artificial ruby or the production of an artificial light without heat? There is no certainty, indeed, that the latter will not come from the hand of the chemist first. We are only too prone to hastily write that down as the impossible which is simply not yet done and our last achievement as the most difficult of all accomplishments. Let us not, however, forget that the chemist has striven for more than a century to make the artificial stone with commendable success, and the mechanic has striven a century to navigate the air, while the electrical engineer has wrestled but a comparatively short time with the problem of light without heat, and has already shown that the solution, far from being impossible on the lines of his attack, is, indeed, a reasonable expectation of another decade of electrical advance.

Engineering Education.

A system of education, says The Electrical World, that tends to broaden the mind and thus render it capable of dealing confidently with large questions is not only most likely to make the engineer educated under it more respected by those with whom he comes into contact in professional life, but it gives him a wider range of opportunities and a more ambitious scope at his strivings. Owing to the desire to start on a professional career at the earliest possible moment most technical courses are none too long for the bare purpose of teaching principles, and yet the tendency seems to be becoming greater and greater to subordinate the theoretical grounding to "practical work." Pattern shops, smith shops and even foundries, are becoming features of technical schools, and testing work is carried on more with a view to teach the practical manipulations than to illustrate principles. The difficulty with many of our engineering schools is that they attempt to combine three different courses, each of which in turn is sacrificed to the others. In Europe in some cases these are differentiated into engineering, industrial and manual training schools. Some of our technical schools partake more of the character of the French industrial schools, a graduate of which does not expect to become anything higher than a superintendent of a manufactory or plant, or an "expert" in his line of training.

Oysters in England.

"When I go back to London and tell my club friends that in Washington I can get a half a dozen of the finest oysters in the world on the half shell for 25 cents they will hardly believe me,' said Mr. Edward Mayne of England, at the Hotel Page. 'We pay $1 a dozen there for very tiny specimens of the juicy bivalves, and they don't compare in lusciousness with the Washington oyster. This is my first trip, and it seems to me that I have done nothing but cultivate my epicurean faculties, and I'll make an honest confession that the expectation of getting acquainted with some of the toothsome American dishes had a good deal to do with bringing me over."

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or Irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause than Itching Piles, yet its affects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

TROUBLE OVER THE TREATY

Russia Anxious to Revise Japan's Terms.

GERMANY AND FRANCE WILL HELP

Russia Wants Territorial Compensation in Manchuria, and May Get It—Details of the Actual Treaty Not Yet Made Public—European Feeling Regarding It

New York, April 22.—The Times London cable says: There is still a complete and baffling uncertainty as to what is to come out of the situation in the far east. The London Foreign Office never gossips, and now it is more severely buttoned up than ever. On the Continent there is more fluent expression of opinions, but these are not obviously speculation. Everything depends upon Russia, and everybody is perforce waiting for a hint what direction she is to move in. There is a theory here that she will turn up with a demand for territorial compensation in Manchuria, and probably get it. This, however, and everything else, is complicated by our real ignorance of Japan's mood and aims, and of her actual as distinguished from her published understanding with Li Hung Chang. The statement from Washington that Russia has been all along consulted by Japan, and was in complete accord with her at every step, is laughed at here.

The Sun's London special says: Europe awaits with the keenest interest authentic news of the treaty of peace between Japan and China. The matter is regarded by all the great powers as of the gravest importance of any diplomatic event since the Berlin treaty was signed. Now that the war has ended in a manner such as no European prophet has foretold, there are not wanting expressions of regret in all the great capitals that Lord Rosebery's advice to the powers to interfere at the outset was not acted upon.

The diplomatic apprehension which is almost everywhere expressed tends, however, to much exaggerate the danger from Japan's menacing growth from a child to a giant among the nations. Few fears are felt of any immediate effect upon European interests, but all the foreign offices profess to see the gravest dangers in the suggestion of a Chinese-Japanese alliance, with an avowed Asia for the Asiatic's policy.

It is generally understood that the forthcoming treaty will contain no clause to this effect, but the impression prevails that there will be several secret agreements, which are not included in the official treaty. It is understood that Japan has been carefully testing European opinion for several weeks past, by throwing out this and other suggestions in so-called forecasts of the terms of peace. This special point aroused such unanimous opposition that the Japanese Government made haste through its Minister to France yesterday to allay the apprehension. He denied, with authority, that the treaty contains any provisions for an offensive and defensive alliance. He added: "It appears to me impossible that there can be any entente between two nations which have long been separated by feelings of antipathy and even deep hatred. Indeed, I am almost certain that there is no alliance, and that the treaty is a mere pact putting an end to hostilities."

He went on to remark that in spite of an armistice and approaching peace, the Japanese Government had been compelled to interfere with many local newspapers, as they were abusing China in a most violent manner. Europe, he concluded, had no reason to feel disturbed at the stipulation of the treaty, as Japan, far from becoming a military or commercial adversary, would open fresh markets in Asia for Europeans and Americans.

There is no doubt that the treaty will be secretly revised by the European Cabinets before it is ratified on May 8, but whether any suggestions which may be made will be accepted by China and Japan is, of course, impossible to say. The belief is strong that both Russia and England will make an active use of the influence on the impression prevailing in the diplomatic circles of London, that Japan will be shrewdly willing to make important strategic concessions in Asia to those powers, in order to secure liberty to carry out her plans without interference.

The Treaty Ratified

London, April 22.—A despatch from Hiroshima to the Central News says that the Mikado ratified the Chino-Japanese treaty this afternoon.

Russia Will Protest Against the Treaty.

St. Petersburg, April 22.—A semi-official note has been issued to the newspapers here to the effect that the Russian Government is in no wise satisfied with the Chino-Japanese treaty, especially the clause providing for the cession of Liao-Tong. Russia, the note says, will act in concert with other powers in protecting the interests of Europe, even supposing one of the great powers does not share in such action.

Germany and France Will Assist Russia.

Berlin, April 21.—The Koelnische Zeitung contains this statement: In view of the pressure exercised by the Japanese war party, Germany urged Japan at the beginning of March to be moderate in her terms of peace, adding that a demand for the cession of mainland territory would be especially calculated to induce European intervention. When it appeared from reports of the conditions offered by Japan, that she was little disposed to follow this friendly advice, initial steps were taken on March 23 to establish an understanding with the European powers. A complete agreement was reached by Germany and Russia, and the co-operation of France was secured. The three powers will now proceed to take joint steps in Japan to protect their interests. The territorial changes at which Japan aims will be the first point to be kept in view. The object is to prevent Japan from entwining herself so tightly round China as to be able, in case of need, to shut off the latter entirely from Europe. Such an injury to their interests the powers desire to avert in good time. Japan has shown hitherto such circumspection that she may be expected now also to desist from drawing the bow too tightly.

The Nord Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung says: Germany never had any idea of abstaining from intervention in the east. Throughout the war she has been fully alive to the great danger that might arise for Europe, both politically and commercially, as a result of the new order of things in East Asia. Germany's share in the European interests concerned is so important that the Government would be guilty of serious neglect in case it should not vindicate our claims with firmness and determination to the full extent.

JAPAN WANTS HAWAII.

Conquest of the Islands Would Be Easily Effected—Volney Ashford Ill

San Francisco, April 21.—Honolulu, April 13.—Correspondence of the United Press, per steamer Australia: Col. V. V. Ashford, the Canadian imprisoned for connection with the late rebellion, has been pardoned out of prison on condition that he leave the island, not to return. He intended to sail to-day for Germany, but had to be taken to the Queen's Hospital. His condition is somewhat critical. While in prison he was well cared for in comfortable quarters. He was serving a sentence of one year's imprisonment for treason.

It is positively learned here that public sentiment in Japan is strongly turned in the direction of taking possession of Hawaii. While the native Hawaiians still constitute the largest nationality, 34,000, to the Japanese 25,000 the latter have the greater number of male adults, being 20,000 to the natives' 16,000. There can be no doubt that a small Japanese squadron, with 1000 troops, co-operating with the resident Japanese, could easily overcome any resistance possible for all the rest of the population of Hawaii to make.

The safety of this Government against an early conquest by Japan must be in the protection of the United States. Failing in that, appeal must be made to British protection. The feeling of this Government is becoming clear that they may at an early day find themselves under the necessity of surrendering these islands to England in order to escape from the Japanese aggression, unless the United States adopts a definite and decided policy of protection.

GOOD NEWS FROM THE CHITRAL

Robertson's Garrison in the Chitral Relieved by General Low

Calcutta, April 20.—General Sir Robert Low, who commands the Chitral expedition, telegraphs from the fort of Jambatai Pass, which he is about to cross, that disturbing news has reached him regarding the British garrison in the Chitral fort. The garrison, he says, is hard pressed by the tribesmen, who, on April 16, carried the mines within 10 yards of the fort. General Gatacre, the commander of the second brigade, who is advancing upon Dir, is pushing forward with all possible haste. The news received in Simla in the last few days justifies the fear that the efforts to relieve Mr. Robertson and his companions in the fort will prove too late.

A late despatch says: General Sir Robert Low telegraphed this morning from his camp at Batai Pass that Mr. Robertson, the British agent, and the rest of the garrison of the Chitral Fort had been relieved. No details were given.

A Thedford Block Burned.

Thedford, Ont., April 22.—The block containing Dr. McEdwards' drug store and Bell Telephone office, Walter Robson's jewelry store and the Odd Fellows' Hall was totally destroyed by fire early this morning. McEdwards had $2000 insurance on stock, which fully covered his loss. The building was insured for $1500. The Odd Fellows lost everything in the hall. They carried $150 insurance. The fire started in the ceiling of the hall, and, as there has been no one in the hall for days, an investigation is likely to follow.

Phil Armour in His Office.

The first time I saw Armour was in his office, a bustling nest of desks and scribbling men and ticking instruments; a working hive where they never see a drone, except he comes to beg, as one fellow did while I was standing there. Armour is the most accessible man in the United States, or, at all events, he was so until recently. It is only within two years that he has had a private office. Until that time his desk stood with the others in a big room, and it was surrounded by the desks of the heads of departments. It was the easiest thing in the world to get to him. But now a corner of the room has been cut off by a plain partition, making an unpretentious nook, in which the director of great enterprises spends the greater portion of his working hours, with his touch upon the pulse of the commercial world. The chief office of Armour & Company is in the Home Insurance building in La Salle Street. It is a big apartment sprinkled with desks, and everybody seems to be prodigiously busy with the exception of one man. This man is Armour, and that is characteristic of him. He luxuriates in work, but he makes no parade of it. He works as a great general does, a Wellington, a Bonaparte. He impresses me as having Napoleonic characteristics. He would be the coolest man in Chicago, and has been so, in times of panic. He is most himself and most absolutely his own master, and the master of affairs, when he faces a crisis. His ease of manner is one of the most remarkable attributes of the man. You see him walking slowly, quietly, and apparently without object through his big establishment; but nothing passes there that escapes the keenness of his vision, and there is not a page in all the volumes of character that are collected in the lives of all these men and youths who daily surround him that he has not closely scanned.—McClure's Magazine.

THE L. Y. R. A. MEET.

The Royal Hamilton Yacht Club is after the Lake Yacht Racing Association meet for this year. The annual meeting of the Club was held Saturday night. The Globe correspondent says:—Most of the evening was occupied discussing the next rendezvous of the L. Y R. A. The members expressed themselves as anxious to secure the meet for Hamilton, but the cost, from $1500 to $2000, was considered somewhat of a difficulty. The matter, however, was referred to the Management Committee to feel the public pulse in regard to the subscriptions. The meet this year will include the Lake Sailing Skiff Association and the smaller class of yachts, for which no races were held at Sodus Point last year, and the racing will, in all probability, last a week, instead of the usual four days.

Death of Sir Bedivere

Sir Bedivere, the champion St. Bernard died of gastritis at Little Rock., Ark., on Friday. Sir Bedivere, who was bread by Thomas Green, a druggist, of Wallasey, Cheshire, England, was undoubtedly the finest specimen of the rough-coated St. Bernard ever sent into a show-ring. He was seven years old, and measured 33 inches at the shoulder, while he weighed about 215 pounds. In 1891, when three years old, he was sold to Mr. E B. Sears, of Melrose, Mass., for $11,500, which is about the highest price ever paid for a dog. He was brought to this country on the Umbria in February 1891, and remained in Melrose for some time, when Mr. Sears sold him to Mr. W. C. Reick, of this city. In 1893, when Mr. Reick disposed of his kennel, Sir Bedivere was sold to C. A. Pratt, of Little Rock, Ark., the owner of the Argyle Kennels.

T. S. Cole in the Baptist Church.

Mr. T. S. Cole, Provincial Travelling Secretary of the Y. M. C. A. preached last night in the Baptist church to a large congregation. The last time he was in that pulpit he talked, he said, about some of the things that salvation had saved believers from, this time he wished to consider some of the things, to consider all were impossible, that salvation saved people too.

Mr. Cole is not so much a preacher as a bible reader, he says himself he hasn't the gift of preaching, and he tells simply what the Spirit of God says to him through His Word. His text was: Ephesians 1 34. His talk was especially to christians. He has no sympathy with the "may I, shall I, can I" christians who try to get out of the world what they loose by a lack of communion with God. He emphasized the present promise "now are ye the sons of God,"

On The Inside.

While wheeling our milk-can to the "pump" this morning before sending it to the factory, we fell to musing on the beauties of nature as they seem on such a lovely morning when suddenly a strange bugging attracted our attention and we soon saw a large swarm of potato bugs alight in our front yard. Being of a somewhat insectorous turn of mind we decided to await developments.

The bugs evidently did not approve of their quarters and were soon out on the highway steering their course due west. We followed and soon we reached the front gate leading to Mr. Albert Sager's lawn, crossing the lawn they marched deliberately into Mr. Sager's garden when they immediately became lively, but after a careful inspection of the potatoe patch they retreated to the cover of the fence, evidently deciding to wait a little longer. Now the question is have these little insects the power of reasoning? And did they know that those "murphies" had been planted? Or was it a mere casualty? Be this as it may "Albert" is the acknowledged potato king of this place and succeeds every time in producing the choicest tubers within the shortest period possible. Mr. Sager has brought in some very fine potatoes, among which are Carmen No. 1, Rural New Yorker and Burpee's Extra Early. He is experimenting this year with an entirely new potatoe which is said to come to maturity in from two to three weeks earlier than any other.

Winter wheat and clover look fine and good crops are expected.

Since the Patron fever has quieted and the Manitoba School question has been entirely exhausted, the residents of that booming village of Rednersville have hit upon a rather novel plan of employing themselves, viz: the organization of an anti secret society known as the "Sons of Rest." As the name signifies the members toil not, but alas! they spin (yarns). The following is an "ad verbatim" version of a story told your correspondent by one of the worthy "Sons of Rest" We read the Bengal Tiger encounter as given by the Belleville Sun without even a tremor of fear, but when such a thrilling snake story as this was sprung upon us we do not mind confessing we shook from head to foot and began to wish we lived in any other land, rather than this worse than African jungle. While walking along a side-road not far from here one bright moonlight night, he was startled by a hissing sound coming from the opposite side of the road, and looking in that direction he noticed some dark object lying on a large rock, he went over to investigate, when the rattler raised its body suddenly and darted to within a few feet of his face. He was no coward (so the story goes) and although he had no weapon of defence he resolved "to be or not to be" and gazed steadfastly in the r ptil 's eyes, when suddenly he thrust his hand in his vest pocket, pulled out a ponderous silver plated tooth pick, and was about to plunge it in the serpents "heart" when the beast gave one mighty rattle and disappeared in the wood. This is yarn number two. First a Bengal Tiger secondly a huge Rattle Snake. Now all we want is a genuine, old fashioned, bald-headed Sea Serpent, which will soon be discovered no doubt, for the vivid imagination and monumental originality of the Sons of Rest are unlimited.

Some people claim that these stories are told for the purpose of frightening from our shores our Belleville friends who come over to imbibe our creamery butter milk, and sample our juicy pumpkins and other delicacies, but we are not so evil-minded. We welcome them all except the lawyers, for these we keep a dog and a gun to greet them.

TWO OPERATIONS.

BOTH FAILURES

A Case of Kidney Complaint that Would Not Yield to Surgery or Medicine until B. B. B. Was Tried.

GENTLEMEN,—After having undergone two operations for Kidney Complaint without securing the least relief, and hearing of some remarkable cures made by B. B. B. in our neighborhood, I decided to try it. I was given up by the doctors after the operations failed, and it was providential that I heard of B. B. B. After the use of six bottles I experienced so great relief and so great a change for the better that I felt the good effects would be lasting, as indeed they have been. The seventh bottle perfectly cured me, and I am now stronger and better than I ever was before. People who saw me before I took B. B. B. and who see me now can scarcely believe that I am the same person.

I knew thou wert coming, O Lord Divine,
I felt in the sunlight a softened shine,
And a murmur of welcome I thought I heard
In the ripple of brooks and the chirp of bird;
And the bursting buds and the springing grass
Seemed to be waiting to see Thee pass;
And the sky and the sea, and the throbbing sod
Pulsed and thrilled to the touch of God.

I knew thou wert coming, O Love Divine,
To gather the world's heart up to Thine;
I knew the bonds of the rock-hewn grave
Were riven that, living, Thy life might save.
But, blind and wayward, I could not see
Thou wert coming to dwell with me, e'en me;
And my heart, o'erburdened with care and sin,
Had no fair chambers to take Thee in;

Not one clean spot for Thy foot to tread,
Not one pure pillow to rest Thy head;
There was nothing to offer no bread no wine,
No oil of joy in this heart of mine;
And yet the light of Thy kingly face,
Illumed for Thyself a small, dark place,
And I crept to the spot by Thy smile made sweet,
And tears came ready to wash Thy feet.

How let me come nearer, O Lord Divine,
Make in my soul for thyself a shrine;
Cleanse till the desolate place shall be Fit for a dwelling, dear Lord, for Thee.
Rear, if Thou wilt, a throne in my breast,
Reign, I will worship and serve my guest.
While Thou art in me—and in Thee I abide—
No end can come to the Easter tide.

A HAPPY CHOICE.

AFTER 25 YEARS

GENTLEMEN,—In the spring of 1891 I got a bottle of B. B. B. for my mother, who had been troubled with Sick Headache. I got it from Mr. H. Paxton Baird, of Woodstock, N. B., who gave me two other medicines to take home and let my mother take her choice. Fortunately she chose the B B. B., and I returned the other bottles. She used it for three months and has had no headache since. We are sure it was B. B. B. cured her as she took no other medicine.

TRUE INWARDNESS OF IT.

English Papers Gives the Real Cause of the Vanderbilt Divorce Suits.

An English paper is authority for the statement that one of the principal grievances which have led to the divorce between Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt was the lady's habit of spending money. Mr. Vanderbilt possesses property real and personal to the value of $80,000,000. His wife's pocket money was an allowance of $100,000 a year. As she possessed under any circumstances almost anything that a woman could possibly desire, she no doubt found much difficulty in getting rid of the little hundred "thou" of dollars, so she had to seek for original methods. Her latest achievement in that way was a little while ago in Paris. She and her husband were staying at the Continental Hotel. She did not like her apartments, so the story goes, and so she engaged the whole of the first floor of the enormous hotel and had it completely refurnished at her own cost. As she was only going to stay six weeks, Paris was simply dumbfounded at this prodigality. The furnishing bill amounted to $35,000, the weekly hotel bill was $3,000. Mrs. Vanderbilt desired proceedings to have the allowance increased to $300,000.

Just how she is going to spend that $300,000 is an interesting question. Possibly some of it will go in the purchase of a foreign title for her daughter Consuelo, who recently sailed with her mother for London. There is, in fact, a rumor that the young lady will soon marry the Prince of Battenberg. It is said that on the passage over both the ladies had in their staterooms hammocks that are supposed to be the most complete protection against seasickness ever invented. It is consoling to those of us who do not possess it to know that even $300,000 a year cannot purchase immunity from seasickness.

A Pharaoh's Humiliation.

The official Egyptian has apparently no particular respect for the remains of his ancestors, even when these are of royal lineage. Brugsch Bey, who has been assisting M. de Morgan, the Egyptologist, in his explorations, recently discovered a mummy—believed to be one of the Pharaohs—and prepared to transport the prize to Cairo. On reaching the railway station he resolutely declined to confide this precious package to the luggage-van. This the officials did not greatly mind, but they compelled the discoverer to take a first-class ticket for Pharaoh as well as one for himself. On reaching Cairo, there was fresh trouble with the "octori" officials. "What have you got there?" Brugsch Bey was asked. "Ah, you can't get that through without paying." "But," urged Pharaoh's guardian, "mummies surely don't pay 'octroi' duty?" "Don't they!" replied the official; "we will see what the register says." Here the entire staff consulted the register, but, strangely enough, the article in question has been overlooked by the administration. "Well," said the officer, "we will enter that as dried fish; duty, three piastres!" And so poor Pharaoh was compelled to make his solemn entry into Cairo under the degrading category of dried fish.—Westminster Gazette.

hilip D. Armour's Simple Life.

For a man of many millions, Mr. Armour's life is an amazing simple one. He has a good-sized house; on Prairie Avenue, but there are many men in Chicago, worth, say, one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, who live with more ostentation than he. He belongs to several clubs, but he very rarely goes to any of them. He is very fond of his home, and he has the faculty, when there, of dropping everything that pertains to business. He sheds care as a duck's back sheds water. All his tastes are of the simplest sort. He is not a teetotaler, but he scarcely ever touches wine and never touches spirits. He is not a bookish man, and his reading is chiefly confined to newspapers and periodicals. But his books are living men; his favorite study, character. And I take it that no man in the United States can read character more shrewdly and clearly than he. Nowadays he leaves his office at three or four o'clock in the afternoon and goes for a drive. He loves to handle the reins over a spanking team of nervy horses. Such exercise draws the blood from the brain, sets the muscles tingling, and stirs to healthy action the physique of the man who spends the greater portion of his day within doors. He usually drives first to the Institute, and after chatting a little with Doctor Gunsaulus, and looking in at some of the classrooms to see if anything is wanted, he has a spin along the Lake Shore Drive, and then perhaps calls in at the homes of his sons, Ogden and Philip, Jr. He always spends his evenings in his own house, with his sweet and gracious wife, to whose influence he ascribes the origin of much of the work which other men call noble, but which he calls sometimes "play," and sometimes "exercise for the ideas."
—McClure's Magazine.

On Saturday evening Mr. T. S. Cole, Secretary of the Provincial Y. M. C. A. visited our Association at Albert and gave us a most interesting and instructive address in the college chapel. After a few remarks concerning the progress and condition of the Young Men's and Young Women's Association work, Mr. Cole took as the basis of his talk Luke XXIV: "And beginning at Moses and all the prophets he expounded unto them in all the scripture things concerning himself," and he showed by direct quotations and references to the various books of the Old Testament how full they were of prophecy concerning Jesus the Christ. His talk was much appreciated by all.

There was a good attendance at the Mission Band meeting yesterday afternoon and a most interesting programme was given. After the opening exercises, Miss M. Howard read a letter from one of our lady missionaries in Japan in explaination and defence of the Industrial Work being carried on there in the mission stations. Miss S. Hawkins gave a very beautiful recitation "The Missionary's Dream;" a reading by Miss A. Cuttson the life of Samuel Morris, and "Items of Interest from Various Fields" by Miss O. Williams completed the literary part of the programme. This was interspersed with singing which consisted of a solo by Miss Helen Dyer, a duett by Misses Hopkins and Jewell, "A Song of Trust," and some hymns. Althogether the meeting was not behind, in excellence and variety, the past efforts of the Mission Band.

Now in order to get proper ventilation you must have your window sash adjusted so that you can lower the top sash down, which is the proper place to ventilate your houses from, and also let the foul air out at the same time.

This will keep the air in your house pure and healthy, thus saving sickness and doctor's bills; but raising the bottom sash causes direct draught which is a well known fact to be very injurious to health more particularly in sleeping rooms. BOWELL'S SCHOOL POLICY.

Speech by the Premier in the Senate.

APPEAL TO MANITOBA'S 'PATRIOTS'

If Manitoba Is "Patriotic" It Will Pull the Bowell Government Out of the Mire — If Not Remedial Legislation Must Come.

Ottawa, April 23—More interest attached to the proceedings in the Senate yesterday than in the Commons. Mr. Primrose, mover of the address, and Mr. Arsenault, the seconder, delivered excellent speeches. Hon. Mr. Scott congratulated both gentlemen upon their addresses and then proceeded to criticise the Speech from the Throne. Coming to a consideration of the Manitoba school question he strongly condemned the action of the Greenway Government and urged that Canada should live up to the guarantee given to the minority at Confederation. He declared that there was no such thing as provincial rights, when rights of minority were affected.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell in reply said:

I sincerely regret the tone, although very mildly uttered, in which the hon. gentleman alluded to the vexed question of the Manitoba schools. A moment's reflection would have shown him that if he were true to the party to which he belongs, and of which he is the honorable leader in this House, he would not have given utterance to the sentiments which pervaded his whole speech. The five years which have rolled around since this question came before the public had been occupied in going through the courts from one appeal to another and, when he tells us that there should have been no difference of opinion as to the powers and authority of the Province of Manitoba, he forgets, or if he did not forget, he signally failed to give expression to fact that these differences of opinion existed in the highest courts of the land, and he should also have told us that when this question was first looming up his great leader, the Hon. Edward Blake, in the House of Commons introduced a resolution to remove the question altogether from the political arena, and take it out of the power of any registrar to declare that the interference with the rights of the minority in any province should be dealt with by the administration. His resolution was clear and distinct in its character and accepted by the different leaders of the Opposition, and Sir John Macdonald and all parties believed that this question of sentiment would have been removed from the political arena altogether and left to the courts to decide.

He is not in accord either with the sentiments expressed so often by the hon. leader of the Opposition in the Lower House. Scarcely a speech has that hon. gentleman made in which he has not affirmed strongly his belief in what are termed provincial rights. He says, and I fully concur with him in the sentiment, that it is with the greatest reluctance that a government should interfere with any of the rights and privileges given to a province under the constitution which governs it. Mr. Blake, when he moved the resolution to which I refer, had the one object in view. He said that he had no desire to embarrass the Government of the day, but, seeing the difficulties which were arising in Manitoba upon this very school question, he attempted as a true statesman to remove it from the arena of politics. This was in 1890, the very year that this act was passed. Mr. Blake saw the difficulties arising, saw the political animosity that would be engendered by the discussion of a question of this kind, for no matter what our religious views may be, whether we are Roman Catholic or Protestant, the moment you touch a question affecting a man's conscience you rouse the very worst passion in his nature, though it is a question of religion.

Desiring to remove that vexed question from the political arena to take from the Administration the power to deal with it, he moved a resolution to that effect.

Senator Scott: I spoke for myself. I think Mr. Blake would admit now, in the light of subsequent events, that he made a mistake when he proposed that resolution. I think the experience of the last five years would convince anyone that it was a mistake.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell: I shall not vouch for the stability of Hon. Edward Blake's opinion any more than I would for that of the hon. gentleman. We are all apt to change to a greater or less extent. It is only a question of time as to how it may affect us. Now, that is precisely the course that was followed by the administration on this question. I might quote from Mr. Blake's remarks, in which he proved beyond a doubt what his intentions were, and his great desire to prevent the introduction of those semi-religious or educational questions, and their being dealt with by the executive for the time being.

My hon. friend says that in 1871, when the Separate School Act was enacted by the Province of Manitoba, they then understood what they were doing. I quite agree with the hon. gentleman, and it is a matter of satisfaction to me to know that the Conservative party in 1871 were in power in Manitoba, and that they were desirous of maintaining intact the obligations into which they had entered when that province came into the confederation, and it may also be a satisfaction to the hon. gentleman to know that it was his party that was in power in 1890 when they violated their agreement, into which they had entered when Manitoba became a province of the confederation. So it has been from the beginning with that party. If the minority in any province expects to have its rights preserved, whether that minority be Roman Catholic or Protestant, it will have to look to the Conservative body, which has controlled Canada since Confederation, with the exception of five years. Minorities will have to look to the Conservative party to maintain those rights.

Although I am not an advocate, nor am I in favor per se of Separate schools, yet I hold that the word of the sovereign when pledged, no matter if it is in accord with my particular sentiments or not, should be held inviolate in the governing of the country. The honorable gentleman referred to the debate which took place in 1871, and he stated quite correctly the opinions then held by the then members of the House of Commons. I remember the discussion very well, and I took the same position then that I take to-day, and the same position that I maintained in 1863, when I was defeated in my own county.

I stated to my constituents that if the question was whether we should establish Separate schools in this country or not I should vote against them, but the Separate schools having been established, I would not be a party to depriving the minority of the rights that they had acquired under the constitution which governed them.

I expected that the hon. gentleman would do as Mr. McCarthy did when he argued the question before the Privy Council, point out how I had voted on that question. I remember that debate. Mr. MacDougall stated distinctly that the passing of the Act with that amendment would be a perpetuation of the Separate school question in Manitoba. Mr. Chaveau, Mr. Cauchon and others took the same line, and it proves to my mind, and it must prove to every reader of that debate, this important fact, that when the resolutions were introduced admitting Manitoba into the Confederation, it was believed at that time that we were granting the same rights and privileges to the Roman Catholics of Manitoba that had been granted to the minority in Quebec and to the minority in Ontario in relation to schools. It was for that reason, believing that we were conceding to that province what they did not then have, that I recorded my vote as I then did, and I trust the day will never arrive when the party with which I am connected will violate any agreement into which they have entered, and that the minority who did not obtain their wishes at that particular time should not forget that this country has to be governed by the majority and in the interests of the whole and not in the interests of the few. I might enlarge on this question, but I do not think it at all necessary to do so.

The Government took the strictly constitutional course in reference to the Manitoba School Act. I am a very strong believer, as Mr. Blake is, in provincial rights, and it was for that reason that I was obliged in 1888 to record my vote (nearly getting defeated by my constituents subsequently for doing so) in support of the contention of the province in regard to the Jesuits' Estates Act I believe that the Province of Quebec had a perfect constitutional right to pass that act, that they acted within their powers. They were disposing of their own moneys, and I took the view that it was none of my business in what manner they chose to dispose of those moneys. They consequently refused to support the motion seeking to condemn the Government for not disallowing the legislation of the province in that regard, and I hold that the same principle must be applied to the whole of the legislation and administration of the country.

Under the very principles embodied in this resolution of Mr. Blake's the Manitoba school case was referred to the Supreme Court of Canada. That court decided that the school act of the province was ultra vires. The hon. the leader of the Opposition says that everybody knew that, or that if they did not know it they did not understand the matter. Notwithstanding this statement on his part, there was a considerable diversity of opinion on the point, and we find that when the case came before the Lords of the Privy Council in England they decided that the School Act was intra vires; that the Legislature of Manitoba had a perfect right to legislate as they had done. Then arose the question of the right to appeal to the Privy Council of Canada for remedial legislation or interference, That, again, went to the courts in Canada, and our Supreme Court decided that the minority had no right of appeal. Then the matter was laid before the Judicial Committee of the Imperial Privy Council, who declared that, while the act which had been passed by the Legislature of Manitoba in 1890 was within the powers of that Legislature, the people of Manitoba belonging to the Roman Catholic faith, having no rights either by law or practice in respect to Separate schools at the time of the admission of Manitoba into the confederacy in 1870, that act had infringed upon the special privileges conceded to the minority by the Provincial Legislature in 1871, and that, therefore, the minority had a constitutional right of appeal to the Privy Council of Canada. The Government lost not a day in summoning the parties interested on tither side to appear before the committee of the Privy Council of Canada, there to argue the question in its various aspects pro and con. It was not a week afterwards before the Remedial Order was issued, asking the Legislature of Manitoba to give to the minority those rights and privileges, of which they had been deprived.

I do not know that the hon. leader of the Opposition stated it, but it has been stated here and throughout the counttry, it was stated in the debate on the address in the othar House, that the Remedial Order meant nothing. Then, in the very next breath we are told that the Government had issued a dictatorial order to the Province of Manitoba. The views of those who are in opposition to the Government on this question are as diversified as the colors of the chameleon.

Senator Power: As diversified as the opinions of those who are supporting the Government.

Mr. Bowell: My remark applies particularly to those who belong to the party led by the honorable gentleman opposite. In Antigonish we were condemned in not going far enough; we were assailed at Vercheres on the ground that we had done nothing to relieve the minority; on the other hand, we have it on the authority of a gentleman intimately associated with the Liberal party, speaking in the constituency of Haldimand, that the Remedial Order was issued for the purpose of buying the votes of the members from Quebec. No matter where you turn, no matter to what station of the country you refer, the same divergence of opinion may be observed; all you have to do is to ascertain the views which are held by the majority in that particular section and you will learn that these are views which are being taken up by the members of the Opposition who are agitating this question.

The organ of the party—which is leading them on (as my honorable friend hopes) to victory, when we shall be cast into the shades of Opposition, and he shall be triumphantly seated on this side of the House directing the affairs of the country in the course in which he thinks they ought to go—is telling the people of this Dominion what a bad lot the Conservative Government are how terribly wicked they have been in even suggesting to the people of Manitoba that they should do justice to the minority. Think of unity—the Liberal party is an admirable specimen of unity, I must say.

Senator Scott: The organ you mention is not the mouthpiece of this party.

Mr. Bowell: I know the hon. gentleman has already repudiated it, and I am quite sure that anyone who is consistent in his opinions, and who desires to see this country governed properly, will always repudiate that organ, but it is always a pleasure to me to hear that repudiation come from hon. gentlemen of the party to which it ostensibly belongs, seeing that they will look to it for inspiration when the proper time comes.

I am aware that it has been claimed that a certain hon. gentleman, who formerly belonged to the Conservative party, and who has been active in his opposition to the appeal, still is a member of our party. All I can say is that we cannot prevent anyone in calling himself a Liberal or a Conservative, but it is very strange if the proper course to pursue to maintain one's position with a political party is to adopt the opinions (I was going to say fads, but that might be unparliamentary, and consequently I will not use the word) to adopt all the views held commercially and otherwise by the opponents of that party. If that entitles a man to be called a member of a party I can only say that I have yet to learn what political allegiance means.

I hope sincerely with the mover and seconder of the address that the people of Manitoba may see their way clear to settle this question among themselves and to relieve the Parliament of Canada from the serious obligation which will devolve upon them otherwise. It is a very serious matter for the Government of the Dominion to undertake to deal with a question which affects solely any one section of the country. If the people of Manitoba are patriots they will keep this question out of the arena of Dominion politics, but if they [illegible] to continue ill-going firebrands among the electorate of this country (who, I am sure, are desirous of living in peace and harmony) they will reject all overtures and act upon the suggestions of those who are leading the Opposition throughout the country. I can only say that when the time comes, if it should come, for action by this Government, the people of Canada will find that the present administration are quite prepared to assume the responsibility which may fall upon them no matter what the results may be.

SPEAKER GULLY INSTALLED.

The Formal Ceremonies Attending the Initiation of the New Speaker.

London, April 23.—The House of Commons, which stood adjourned over the Easter recess, resumed its sittings today. Speaker-elect Gully took the chair, but almost immediately afterward the usher of the Black Rod appeared in the House, and summoned him before the House of Lords. The Speaker, accompanied by the Sergeant-at-Arms, and a majority of the members of the House proceeded to the bar of the House of Lords. Lord Herschell, Lord High Chancellor, and Lords Kimberley, Spencer, Carrington and Kensington, constituting a royal commission, occupied seats in front of the Throne, which was uncovered. Lord Herschell, bowing to the new Speaker said:

"Her Majesty has most fully approved and confirmed your appointment."

Speaker Gully replied: "I submit myself to Her Majesty's most gracious will and pleasure."

Then followed an exchange of salutations, the Speaker and his party bowing to the Royal Commission and the assembled Lords, who dignifiedly returned the salute.

The Speaker and the members of the House then withdrew. Upon his return to the House the Speaker retired to his private rooms, where he donned his robe of office and full-bottomed wig. Reappearing in the House Mr. Gully took the Speaker's chair, and in a brief speech said that as Her Majesty had signified her approval of the House's choice of himself to fill the office of Speaker he took the opportunity to repeat his acknowledgments to the House of the honor done him.

Sir William Harcourt announced that the Queen had approved the petition of the House that Her Majesty confer a mark of royal favor upon ex-Speaker Peel, and gave notice of his intention to introduce a motion on the subject.

Speaker Gully made an excellent impression. He has a fine bearing, a stately manner and a good voice. He has, however, a good deal to learn in regard to his new position, as was evidenced by his tripping up at the very outset. When Home Secretary Asquith moved the second reading of the Factory bill in the usual dumb show way, by merely rising and lifting his hat, the Speaker omitted to put the question, "Shall the bill be read?" until he was prompted by the clerk.

Viscount Peel.

London, April 23.—The Right Hon. Arthur Wellesley Peel, ex-Speaker of the House of Commons, has been elevated to the peerage, with the title of Viscount.

FELL ON A BUZZSAW.

Fearful Death of a Sawyer in a Saginaw Mill.

Saginaw, Mich., April 23.—At Wall & Webber's sawmill to-day Head Sawyer Frank J. Mavelle took a small stick to steady the saw into a true motion, when the saw drew the stick into the blade, and Mavelle, losing his balance, went head-first on the saw, which took the scalp off the back of his head, and cut a gap eight inches into the right shoulder, severing the spinal column and spinal cord, and cutting into the lung. Mavelle lived an hour and a half, and was conscious most of the time.

WEDDED AT WASHINGTON.

G. N. Curzon, M.P., Marries Miss Leiter of Chicago

Washington, April 23.—This morning at St. John's Episcopal Church, George Nathaniel Curzon, M.P., of England, and Miss Mary Victoria Leiter, eldest daughter of the Chicago millionaire, L. Z. Leiter, were married in the presence of the British Ambassador and Mrs. Cleveland and a large and distinguished company, including guests from England and from leading cities in the United States.

The wedding dress was of white satin, entirely plain. The skirt had a long train, and the bodice was severely simple—high at the neck and fastened with a diamond brooch, the gift of the groom. At the neck and sleeves some bands of old rose point, which her mother wore on her wedding day, served to finish the gown. The tulle veil was edged around the head with some point lace, worn by the bride's grandmother, Mrs. Benjamin Carver of Utica (formerly Miss Nancy Fish), on her bridal dress years ago. The veil was fastened with a bunch of white orchids, and the bouquet of the same flowers finished the bridal outfit.

The bridesmaids wore youthful dresses of pink mull, the skirts full, over pink satin, and the bodices finished with huge sleeves. The large hats were made of the same material, with pink satin bows, and each carried a bunch of pink roses.

Where Railroad Passes Are Illegal.

New York, April 22.—Collis P. Huntington, the railway magnate, was arrested on an indictment found against him by the grand jury of the Northern District of California for making an unjust discrimination against the Inter-State Commerce law, by issuing a free pass to G. M. Stone.

When you buy a pair of new shoes never put them on a shelf higher than your head, unless you want to bring bad luck; and if you blacken them before you have had both shoes on you may meet with an accident, or even have a sudden death. This is an old Irish superstition. The Scotch girls believe that if they drop their shoes before they are worn trouble will ensue, while a French lady losing her heel is sure of a disappointment in love, and a German mother in the same predicament, feels that she will soon lose one of her children. You must not put your right shoe on your left foot or your left on your right, nor must you put your left shoe on before the right unless you want bad luck. This superstition dates back to one of the Emperors of Rome, who, it is recorded, put on his left shoe first one morning, and came near being assassinated during the day.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles ! Piles ! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelle's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

Germany reports 289 instances of suicide among school children during the last six years.

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal."

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

CORRUPTION

INTELLIGENCER.—The people having decided to conduct their affairs in their own way, the would-be dictators of the Grit party, in their chagrin at successive failures to secure a majority in support of their opinions, declare the majority to be in error. This is quiet in accord with received experienced, which has shown that when you scratch a "Liberal" you find a tyrant.

Truly our country is all right, and it is equally true that our people know how to govern themselves and will keep in opposition the hungry hordes of Grits who plundered Quebec and have shown themselves to be corrupt and extravagant in all the provinces which have fallen under their sway.

This little Tory etching purporting to represent the present state of the Canadian public mind, is as botched a conglomeration of distorted facts as art in either words or colors ever disowned But to get the good of it one must view it sympathitically and in a good political light of memory.

CORRUPT AND EXTRAVAGANT! Shades of Evil light our way amid the maze of corruption made up of the last five years of Tory rule. Larkin, Connolly & Co. were paid $3,140 000 for $2,185,000 worth of work that $170,000 might come back to the Tory election fund. Sir Adolph Caron was a share holder of the construction company that received over a million dollars subsidies granted to the Quebec and Lake St. John Ry while Sir Adolph was a member of the Government and when he applied to the President of the Co., Senator Ross, for election funds he received $25,000 at a clip. Evidence before the Royal Commissioners showed that the Temiscouta Ry. had returned from their subsidies $25,000 to the Tory corruption funds. "The Prince Albert Colonization Co." is an old but not forgotten incident though some might exonorate the present Premier upon the plea that charity begins at home. Then there was Mr. Turcotte, a Tory member of Parliament who supplied the Militia Department with groceries Note also Haggart's Ditch, estimated to cost $132 666 but the Government paid out on it $476,128. The Curran bridges over the Lachine Canal estimated at $122,000, cost $394,000. The economy has been marvellous as attested by an increase of $105,821,960 in the net public debt sence Mr. Mackenzie was in power.

These are but desultory notes of a regime of corruption and extravagance but they will suffice.

Compare with it the twenty years rule of Sir Oliver Mowat in this province without a breath of slander and with a financial record that the Opposition can find no fault with.

GOVERNMENT OWNERSHIP OF RAILWAYS

Government control or ownership of railways, telegraphs and telephones though not at present a political issue in Canada is nevertheless an acknowledged problem in the field of national economics. In an able article in the April Arena Prof. F. Parson concludes that the people of the United States would save annually by ownership of railways $662 000,000. He say: "In 1891 the people paid the railroads in round numbers $1,200,000,000; the same or better service would have cost them only $540,000,000 if they had owned the roads free of debt and under good management."

1. By abolishing 599 presidents and their staffs (one would do)	$25 000,000
2. By abolishing the high-priced managers	4,000,000
3. Attorneys and legal expenses	12 000,000
4. Abolition of merely competitive offices	12,000,000
5. Saving five-sevenths of advertising account	5,000,000
6. By abolishing traffic associations	4,000,000
7. By exclusive use of shortest routes	25,000,000
8 By consolidation of working depots, offices, etc	20,000,000
9. By uniformity of rails, cars, etc	15 000,000
10. By avoiding strikes and promoting better spirit among workmen	10,000,000
11. Saving on corruption fund for influencing legislation	30,000,000
12. By abolishing pass evil	30,000,000
13. By abolishing rebates and commissions	50,000,000
14. By having no rent or interest to pay	285,000 000
15. By having no dividends to pay	82,000,000
16. By putting surplus in public treasury	52,000,000
Total saving	$662,000,000

THE GOVERNMENT'S BABY.

Hon. David Mills Makes a Cutting Speech.

MR. PATERSON ON THE DEFICIT

Mr. Casey Shows by the Figures of the Manufacturers' Association How the Government Truckles for Campaign Funds—A Bad Day for Wallace and Tupper.

Ottawa, April 23.—The recent Ministerial dissensions which have disturbed the harmony of the Cabinet and made some of its members appear ridiculous in the eyes of the country have afforded Opposition speakers during the debate on the address unlimited opportunities of saying sarcastic things. Young Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, who, like the spoiled child of his father that he is, sulked and then repented, has since the opening of the House received a large share of the attention of Liberal speakers, who have subjected him to an unmerciful chaffing.

There never was a more spirited debate than that which is now proceeding in the House, but, while the arguments advanced from the Liberal point of view brook no compromise with principle, a certain amount of good nature pervades the discussion and somewhat mitigates the rancor of politics, which so frequently emerges when Greek meets Greek on the floor of Parliament.

Since the Liberals have been in Opposition there never was a time when fortune smiled so brightly upon them, and they are taking out of the situation that the mistakes of the ministers have created all the advantage that it is possible to extract, and some fun into the bargain. The weakness and disorganization of the Government forces was never more evident than it has been since the opening of the House on Thursday last. The absence of a leader of sufficient proportions to command the respect and inspire the loyalty of the Conservative following has produced an indifference in the ranks that must be, to say the least of it, discouraging to Mr. Foster, upon whose shoulders rests the responsibility of the leadership in the Commons.

Hon. David Mills, the veteran parliamentarian, led off yesterday with a brief speech upon the political situation. He indulged in some good-natured badinage at the expense of the members of the Cabinet. But, before alluding to the ministerial wrangling, he ventured the opinion that the explanations given by Mr. Foster and Sir Hibbert Tupper of the delay in calling Parliament together would not be satisfactory to the House or to the country. Speaking of the Remedial Order, he said that the Government had put its chestnuts in the fire and had come to the Liberal leader to haul them out, a service that Mr. Laurier very properly refused to perform.

The Minister of Justice, said the member for Bothwell, had the courage to discuss this question in Antigonish, although he said that it was improper to discuss it here, although it would be quite proper for the leader of the Opposition to discuss it. This new baby was not altogether like Jinks' baby, the whole Government were not united in undertaking to drown it. Rumor says that the real parent is the Minister of Public Works. He has a good deal of interest in this youngster, which, amongst the members of the Government, has led to a good deal of difference of opinion and angry discussion. Here is a dispute in regard to its character, some wishing to cast it out, and others wishing to give it the greatest possible attention. There is in fact, so far as one can judge, a dispute as to the sex of the infant, and they wish to bring it to my hon. friend (Mr. Laurier) to decide the question. They have asked Manitoba to take charge of it, and until they know what Manitoba will do they are not in a position to say anything further in regard to it. It is rumored that the Controller of Customs was greatly scandalized by the appearance of this youngster, that in fact he threatened to desert the family if the family didn't desert it.

Mr. Mills, much to the amusement of the House and the discomfiture of Clarke Wallace, called attention to the change of front displayed by the Controller of Customs, who was prepared to stand with his friends in Ulster in preventing Home Rule in Ireland and to take an entirely opposite position when he turned his face towards the west.

There was a mild protest from both sides of the House when Mr. Mills, in discussing the Minister of Finance, made a Scriptural allusion. This is what he said: "The Minister of Finance has adopted the Scriptural rule, not putting his trust in kings, and the hon. gentleman has gone to the temple to worship. That is where he is now said to be paying his devotions and there is an impression abroad, I don't know how well it is founded, that he will require to sacrifice something more than a turtle dove and two young pigeons to be successful, that nothing less than an unblemished male sheep will serve the purpose.

Mr. Paterson of Brant, who is a source of great strength to the Liberal Parliamentary party, made an excellent speech. He alluded to the hesitancy of the Government to meet Parliament, and said that he didn't wonder at it when the state of the finances was taken into account. It was not a pleasant thing for a Minister erstwhile boastful and accustomed to point to deficits as perfect proof of incapacity, to be obliged to face parliament with the largest deficit in the history of the country. During his campaigning tour the Minister had carefully evaded all reference to the finances, and had devoted himself to inflated estimates of developments to come in the future. In parliament he could no longer avoid discussing the fact that for last year there was a deficit of a million and a quarter, and that during the nine months of the present fiscal year there was a deficit of $3,800,000, with the likelihood of a $5,000,000 deficit for the year, as compared with deficits of $3,250,000 for the whole three years, in which there were deficits under the Mackenzie Government, about which the Minister had said so much for so many years.

Another speaker on the Liberal side was Mr. Casey, who by the official statements of the officers of the manufacturers association convicted the Government of a slavish servility to the dictation of the members of that body.

The Conservative side of the debate was upheld by Sir James Grant and Mr Davin.

To secure better observance of the Lord's Day, commonly called Sunday.—Mr. Charlton.

To repeal the Electoral Franchise Act and to make certain provisions in place thereof.—Mr. Charlton.

An act to amend the Criminal Code, 1892, for the purpose of making more effectual provision for punishment of seduction and abduction.—Mr. Charlton.

To reduce the salary of the Governor-General.—Mr. Mulock.

To amend the act respecting the Senate and the House of Commons.—Mr. Mulock.

To amend the Superannuation Act.—Mr. McMullen.

To amend the 10th chapter of the Consolidated Statutes for Lower Canada respecting seditious and unlawful associations and oaths.—Mr. White (Cardwell).

To amend the act respecting weights and measures.—Mr. Wilson.

To prevent the letting of contracts to aliens.—Mr. McLennan.

Respecting the sale of railway return fare tickets.—Mr. McLennan.

Respecting liability of the Government and public companies for labor used in construction of public works.—Mr. McLennan.

Respecting detective corporations and mercantile agencies.—Mr. Sproule.

Mr. Wilson stated that his measure to amend the Weights and Measures Act was designed to correct standard weights on certain articles.

In reply to calls for an explanation of his bill to reduce the salary of the Gov.-General, Mr. Mulock said the title explained itself.

"How much do you propose to reduce it by?" asked Mr. Foster.

"That is a matter of detail," replied Mr. Mulock.

"Curtail, you mean," ejaculated Mr. Boyle, and there was a hearty laughter at the sally.

Robert White's bill to remove the Quebec Masonic Grand Lodge from the category of a seditious or unlawful association led Sir Richard Cartwright to ask if by seditious association was meant an organisation for the purpose of promoting rebellion, in Ulster for example.

Monday is question day and those on the order paper elicited some information of interest.

Mr. Foster informed Mr. Edgar that the British Government had not yet denounced the Berne Copyright Convention on behalf of Canada, nor had that Government yet given its assent to the Canadian Copyright Act of 1889. After personal communications had passed between Sir John Thompson and the Colonial Office, a request was received a few days ago by the Dominion to send an official over to England, so that by personal interview with the Imperial Government possibly an understanding might be arrived at. The Government purposed assenting to that request and the Canadian Act would not be proclaimed until a conference had taken place.

To Col. Prior's request for information Mr. Costigan stated that the request of the British Columbia sealers, that the Imperial Government be asked to advance the sum of $425,000 as compensation to sealers, had been transmitted to the Imperial authorities on March 6. The Canadian Government did not consider this as "proper compensation," but had accepted the offer on the understanding that it would be paid immediately by the United States.

Mr. Foster explained to Mr. McMullen that, so far as the Government could learn, medals and diplomas awarded to Canadian exhibitors at the Chicago Fair would be ready in May or June next.

Mr. Casey was informed that the final report of the Prohibition Commission had been presented to the Government.

A message was received from the Governor-General conveying the Queen's thanks for the joint addresses of both Houses, passed last session, congratulating Her Majesty on the birth of a son to the Duke and Duchess of York.

It is stated that the basis upon which negotiations will take place between Great Britain and France for a settlement of the French shore question in Newfoundland is that exclusive rights for fishery purposes shall be given to France on the western coast of Newfoundland for a distance of from 40 to 50 miles. At the present time France has by treaty fishing rights on a shore line of 425 miles, viz., from Cape Ray to Cape St. John. If some such arrangement as that mentioned be consummated, it will mean a withdrawal of France's jurisdiction from 375 miles of coast. The total population, all British, of the French shore portion of Newfoundland two years ago was 11,973.

There is talk to-day of sweeping reductions in the civil service, and several superannuations are contemplated. Among the names mentioned in this connection are two chief inspectors of Inland Revenue, Henry Godson of Toronto and John Davis of Windsor.

Controller Wood will introduce a bill entitled The Lumber Inspection Act of 1895. It is proposed to superannuate cullers and make the inspection of timber conform to the inspection of all other articles of trade and commerce, but not compulsory. In the matter of square timber, however, inspection is to be compulsory for the next two or three years.

As a result of the cattlemen's deputation, which waited on Hon. Mr. Costigan to-day, it is understood that the cattle space on spar deck of steamers will be restored to the former figure of two feet eight inches for each animal.

Premier Haultain of the Northwest is in the city in connection with financial affairs of the Territories.

J. B. Mills of Annapolis will reintroduce his bill to disfranchise from voting in Dominion elections civil servants in those provinces which disfranchise Dominion officials from voting in provincial elections.

Fever and Ague and Bilious Derangements are positively cured by the use of Parmelee's Pills. They not only cleanse the stomach and bowels from all bilious matter, but they open the excretory vessels, causing them to pour copious effusions from the blood into the bowels, after which the corrupt mass is thrown out by the natural passage of the body. They are used as a general family medicine with the best results.

LIFE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

HUNTING ON THE VELDT IS AN IDEAL SPORTING TRIP.

Of Course It Has Its Drawbacks, but Pleasures Far Outnumber Them, and With Settled Weather for Seven Months in the Year the Hunter Has a Royal Time of It Among Strange Game.

Wagon life in the South African interior has, of course, its drawbacks, yet in a climate where for about seven months absolutely settled weather may be relied upon, its pleasures outnumber them fifty to one. To mount one's pony on a clear, bright morning; to ride forth into the veldt with a friend and a brace of pointers, with the blessed feeling that you have not a care in the world beyond the march of your wagon to the next water; to be absolutely certain of some pretty shooting in a wild country innocent of farms and fences; to return to camp toward evening with perhaps ten or twelve braces of birds and a small buck—these things, to the average healthy male, seem as near perfection as may be found in this vale of tears.

It is 8 o'clock on a bright April morning in South Bechuanaland. The air is full of light, brisk and wonderfully exhilarating. Four gunners have just breakfasted under the lee of their wagon. Now, having mounted their ponies—the average South African horse is seldom more than fourteen hands—they ride quietly down the hither side of the shallow valley, "laagte," it is called in these parts, wherein they were outspanned, and climbed the farther rise.

It is a picturesque scene. The slopes are clothed with a long growth of waving grass, now greenish-yellow after the rains, amid which great boulders of dark-red rock crop up. Here and there small patches of blue and green bush start out fom the grassy veldt. Beyond, crowning the valley, begins a thickish woodland of short trees—bastard yellow-wood, the Boers call them—which extends for some miles in front, till the great open plains are again reached. As the gunners ride up the further slope, their wagon is already in motion behind them, starting upon its day's trek—seventeen miles to the next water. Through the clear, nimble air comes the crack of the driver's great whip and his shrill cries, hurled at the oxen, and the unwieldly home on wheels crushes slowly through the yielding sand. But now the gunners have spread out in line, and the pointers are already busy. Near some boulders one of the dogs feathers a little, then stands rigid as a figure of bronze. The two nearest gunners dismount. They already carry their guns and bandoliers, and ride, as men do in the veldt, in their flannel shirts with their sleeves well rolled up the arms. There is little to incumber their movements. Breeches, gaiters and stout boots, a shirt and a shady hat, are all that a man needs in Africa.

The reins are thrown over the poines' necks and hang in front of them and the steeds will stand quietly for hours. Now the gunners are close upon the pointer, still standing with rigid tail and outstretched neck. These francolin lie close in the long grass. "Where the deuce—!" on a sudden up spring three brown birds within five feet of the sportsmen. Twenty yards of law, the guns are up, two light reports from smokeless cartridges and a brace of the birds hit the earth. Almost instantly a third report follows and the rear gunner has secured his right and left—not a difficult matter with these francolin. But the pointer is not yet content. Another brace of birds is found and brought to bag within thirty yards.

The partridges are now gathered. they prove to be the small Coqui francolin—"N'swimbi" the natives call them—perhaps the most beautiful game birds in the world. As one of them lies in the gunner's palm for a few moments the bright nank-in-yellow and orange of the head, the clear, hawk-like markings of the breast and the beautiful shape and feathering mark this partridge of Africa as a gem among its fellows. The birds are bestowed in a saddle-bag and the gunners mount and ride into the forest on the right-hand side of the wagon road. Meanwhile their comrades have entered the woodland more to the left hand and their guns can be heard already going.

For two hours the sportsmen quietly walk their horses through the forest, moving due west. Once their pointer gets into a small troop of guinea fowl delving for bulbs, and, after a smart chase, drives three of them into a tree, whence, as they fly off, the gunners secure them easily enough.

At length, after picking up a few butterflies in the forest clearings, for they carry a net, our gunners emerge upon broad, rolling, sun-drenched plains, covered with long, pale yellow grass. Through these they ride steadily hour after hour, picking up every now and again a head or two of game. Now it is a brace of big red-wing partridge (Orange river francolin); now one of those annoying, yet handsome, game birds, the black and white bustard—swarth koorhaan, the Boers call him—whose very noisy and chiding ways are familiar everywhere in open veldt in South Africa. Now, after keenest search, a leash of tiny bush quail are flushed and secured, one after the other having literally to be kicked up. A hare and a solitary "dikkop"—thick-knee plover—are added to the growing bag.—London Saturday Review.

A Ring Cut Out of a Single Diamond.

Antwerp Exhibition, where it was the admiration of the diamond cutters and merchants, being the first successful attempt to cut a ring out of a single stone. There are a great many difficulties in this method of cutting diamonds, as the stones have a certain cleavage and particular veins, all of which have to be carefully studied in order to prevent the splitting of the stone just as success seems within reach. After several unsuccessful attempts and three years' labor, the feat was accomplished by the patience and skill of M. Antione, one of the best-known lapidaries of Antwerp. The ring is about six-eights of an inch in diameter. In the Marlborough cabinet there is a ring cut out of one entire and perfect sapphire.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause than Itching Piles, yet its affects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

WERE PARTNERS IN CRIME

But the M.D. Swindled the Simcoe Hotelkeeper.

A TALE OF OPIUM SMUGGLING

H. F. Teeter Arranged to Deliver Opium in Buffalo—A Bogus Detective Took the Drug and a Note for $525 — The Note Now Sued.

Buffalo, April 23.—It is stated that amongst the cases to be tried at the Spring Assizes at Simcoe is one to recover on a promissory note, made by Henry F. Teeter, a Waterford, Ont., hotel-keeper, for the sum of $525. The note is said to be the result of an unlawful bargain, and therefore invalid.

According to this evening's Times, in October, 1893, a well-known Buffalo physician and his brother went to Teeter's hotel and arranged for the purchase of a large quantity of opium in Toronto, which Teeter was to bring to Buffalo on Nov. 4. On that day Teeter, it is alleged, reached the Continental Hotel in this city with the opium, and met the Doctor and his brother. One-half the opium was at once handed to the Doctor, and Teeter was to convey the balance at the Doctor's house at 8 o'clock that evening, which he did.

While sitting in the Doctor's office a muffled up, mysterious-looking stranger forced his way into the room. "Well, I've got you, have I?" said he, gruffly. "I'm a detective, and I've shadowed you all the way from Toronto. I knew you were handling this stuff, and now I want both of you to come with me."

The Doctor remonstrated, pleaded, begged, and finally the alleged detective agreed to accept $1000, and this partly in cheques, notes and cash was given him, and he departed, taking with him the smuggled opium.

Then the doctor, who apparently was much perturbed, told Teeter that the latter would have to stand his share of the loss, and Teeter gave a note for $525. Nothing further was done until recently, when a man named Robertson sued Teeter for the face of that promissory note, and then an investigation brought out the fact that the alleged detective who got $1000 and all the opium was not a detective, but an accomplice of the physician, who was brought on to swindle Teeter out of all part in the crooked transaction. It also showed that Robertson is related to the physician's wife and that the physician never had an account in the bank on which he had drawn the cheque.

CHINA OPEN TO ALL.

Japan Denies That the Concessions Obtained Are Exclusive.

London, April 23.—A despatch from Tokyo to the Central News says in view of the various European misstatements and misrepresentations in regard to the China-Japan treaty of peace, the Government affirms that the commercial concessions obtained by Japan were not exclusive, but extended to all treaty powers. Japan secured these privileges for the general good of all countries, and therefore expects her efforts to meet with friendly appreciation.

TILBURY'S TREASURER SHORT.

Arrested on a Charge of Appropriating $5900 Township Funds.

Windsor, April 23.—Clement Mailloux, ex-treasurer of Tilbury North, will appear at the Police Court here on Saturday next, charged with stealing the sum of $5900. He was arrested at his home in Stoney Point by Detective Campau, and has been released on $12,000 bail. He was treasurer of the township for over three years, but was discharged on Jan. 1. The auditors who examined his books found the amount of the shortage and Reeve Samuel Mather swore out the warrant.

Levying on Gould's $10,000,000 Personality.

New York, April 23.—The Tax Commissioners have decided to hold the Gould estate for $10,000,000 of personal property this year, notwithstanding the fact that George J. Gould, in whose name the assessment is made out, claims Lakewood as his residence. The decision doubtless will result in a renewal of the legal battle which was waged over the matter last year. If the estate pays the tax levied on the assessment it will be under protest.

SOLDIERS DIED LIKE WORMS.

The Strange Plague That Swept Away the Schismatic Enemies of the Papacy.

The epidemic of the Middle Ages were so numerous that even such indefatigable historians as Hecker and Hoesor have been compelled to leave many of them unnoticed. One of the most interesting of these, both from the historic and medical standpoints, is the plague which fell upon the German army in Italy, A. D. 1167, and which has been fully described by several contemporary chroniclers. The following outline is based mainly on the account given by Henry, Archdeacon of Salzburg, who says that he has carefully compiled it from the narratives of eye-witnesses.

The long controversy between the Empire and the Papacy had culminated in an open schism and the establishment of an Anti-Pope, to support whom Frederick Barbarossa invaded Italy with a great army, directed at once against the independence of the Church and of the Lombard cities. The terrible destruction of this army in the moment of its triumph sent a thrill of mingled horror and exultation throughout Europe.

"Then happened a thing unheard of since the creation of the world, which till the end thereof will make the ears of whoso heareth it to tingle. Peruse the chronicles of the nations; where will you find a tale such as that which tells how the power, wealth and pride of all Germany died, not as men die, neither fell like one of the princes, but were destroyed in heaps, like the rainworms or the locusts after a tempest?"

The great church of St. Peter at Rome had been taken by storm. "They broke down the gates thereof with axes and swords, and cut off chips from the doors, boasting that they would take them to their wives as tokens of their own powers, and of the ignominy of the blessed Peter; so the vengeance of God came upon them in the pestilence."

Three days later, Aug. 1, Frederick and Beatrice were crowned with great pomp by the Anti-Pope Paschalis, in the still blood-stained church. The next morning was marked by a sudden tempest of thunder and rain, after which the sun shone out brightly, till a thin mist rising from the ground covered the tents of the schismatic army, and then the plague began. The number of the victims, says Henry, great as it was, was less terrible than the suddenness of their deaths.

There were a hundred chosen men in armor (loricati) who formed the Emperor's bodyguard, and camped apart from the rest. "The Emperor had mounted his horse and, wondering at the delay, sent a messenger for them. He found their weapons piled and their horses tethered, but the hundred men in armor and their attendants were all of them corpses."

The plague seemed specially to single out the great men of the army, particularly the schismatic clergy. Rainald, Archbishop of Cologne, "head and leader of the schism"; the Bishops of Prague, Regensoburg, Spires, Verdun and Liege all died in a few days, and the death of so many princes and nobles brought into prominence, if it did not originate, a curious custom of some interest for the history of anatomy. Many persons "ashamed to leave their dead friends in a hostile country," boiled their bodies and extracted the bones, in order to take them home to their fatherland. Thus they boiled Bishop Daniel and took his bones to Prague, but his clergy refused to pray for his soul till it appeared to one of them and told him he had repented of his schism before death. Some, according to Henry, tried to preserve the whole body by cooking and salting it. "A certain man was cooking his brother in a caldron, when a friend sent to borrow it for a similar purpose; but he replied that he could not have it, for, after cooking his brother, he should want to be cooked in it himself, which was also done."—The Hospital.

Paine's Celery Compound Overcomes the Foe.

The Great Spring Medicine Cures After All Other Means Fail.

It works Like a Charm for All Sufferers.

In every province of our Dominion there are thousands of men and women who have cause for joy and gladness; they have, by the use of Paine's Celery Compound, banished forever mankind's worst enemy—rheumatism and sciatica. Every sufferer should get rid of the torturing agonies of these terrible troubles before the end of the spring season.

Mr. G. J. McDonald, Merchant Tailor, Cornwall, Ont., who was a martyr to rheumatism for three years, writes as follows:—

"After having given your Paine's Celery Compound a thorough testing, I am pleased to say a few words in its favor.

"For three years I suffered terribly from rheumatism. It seemed to me that I was forced to endure all the agonies and pains that a mortal could possibly experience from the dreadful disease.

"While suffering I tried many of the advertised medicines and also doctor's prescriptions; but never found a cure until I procured a supply of Paine's Celery Compound from McHaffie & Elvidge, druggists, of this town. Paine's Celery Compound worked like a charm—it seemed to strike at the very root of my trouble. I am now cured; every pain is banished, and in every respect I am a new man.

"I shall always consider it a pleasure and a duty to strongly recommend Paine's Celery Compound to all who are afflicted with rheumatism."

A QUIET WEDDING

Took Place This Afternoon at the Bride's Residence, Foster Avenue

An interesting ceremony took place this afternoon at 2.30 at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William Couch on Foster Av. when their eldest daughter Blanche was united in wedlock to Mr. E. Rowe of Trenton. Only a few near relatives of the contracting parties were present. Rev. E. N. Baker tied the nupital knot. The bride looked very pretty in a dress of pearl grey trimmed with watered silk. She was assisted by her cousin, Miss Bertha Symons who was tastefully dressed in brown cashmere trimmed with lace. Mr. Alfred Symons did the honors of best man. After the ceremony was concluded the wedding party sat down to a pleasant wedding breakfast, after which the happy couple took their departure for their new home in Trenton taking with them the best wishes of their many friends for a long and prosperous career.

A FOOLISH WASTE OF TAXES

The Council Propose to pay the Sun $100 to Help Advertise Itself

That the sum of $100 be granted to the Sun newspaper for 2000 copies of the special "Trade edition" of said paper a column and a half relating to Belleville and its interests is to be inserted under the supervision of the chairman of this committee and also in 200 other newspapers throughout the Dominion of Canada.

This is a clause of the Industrial Committee's report that passed the Council last night and it is now in order for the committee or its chairman to tell the people what it means. In reply to a query this morning Mr. Wills said it was not right. Yet he allowed it to pass the council last night without correcting it or offering any explanation.

If it means that this column and a half write-up will be copied by 200 other Canadian newspapers it shows only that our Industrial Committee has become foolish, or possibly that they were hypnotized. Just look at it and see how utterly foolish the stipulation, if it be a stipulation, is. A column and a half of advertising matter in a reputable paper might be bought at a very low figure of say $50 and for 200 papers would mean $10,000. This the Committee say is what Mr. Brown promised them and Mr. Wills says so.

And two thousand copies of the trade edition scattered through the country may be a very good ad. for the Sun, especially as the city pays for it, but what possible good is it going to do Belleville? A trade edition of any paper, page upon page of advertisements is not, as far as we know, taking the place of the ordinary newspaper or popular novel in the estimation of the reading public. They may do for people suffering from insomnia, but the majority of people would rather be excused.

Belleville, like every other Canadian city is at present feeling the pressure of hard times superinduced by a ruinous "protective policy" and the working men and mechanics of the city, the people who pay the taxes, have for some time found the Sun's twaddle about the rush of business and work nauseous to say the least, and we believe they will not jubilate over the prospect of paying $100 to advertise the sheet.

POLICE COURT.

Mrs. Clapper was Discharged this Morning in the Alleged Assault Case.

This was circus day at the police court and the benches were crowded all morning. Magistrate Flint presided. The first case called was Minor v Pelkey. This was an action brought by George Minor to recover four dollars rent alleged to have been due him. The case has been on for some time and the rent has been reduced from $4 to $1 50. The defence brings in a counter action for the loss of a hen which is valued at $1. The balance due is only 50c. The case has been laid over until next Friday when something will no doubt turn up to wipe out the 50c.

The next case called was Kelleher v Clapper. It is alleged that Mrs. Clapper called some vile names to Mrs. Kelleher. The case took up about an hour during which a number of witnesses were called, but the evidence was of such a contradictory nature that the magistrate dismissed the case. He said if Mrs. Clapper had been found guilty he would have inflicted a heavy sentence and gave her a warning to be careful in the future.

The toast list comprised "The Queen," "The Archbishop and cleygy of the Diocese," "The Wardens," "The organist," "The choirs of the city," "The boy chorister," "The Sunday School" and "The Ladies." Recitations and songs filled in the menu of joviality. V. Wensley, proposed the toast to Her Majesty. Among those who sang were J. J. Petty, F. W. Elliott, J. Bedser, and Geo. Henthorne. Recitations were given by F. Ferguson, Rev. C. J. Hutton and Dr. Ackerill.

Dr. Gibson was sent for and succeeded in relieving her, but she is still suffering from the effects of the neighbor's mistake.

Last week Mr. E. Babbet took a dose of saltpetre for salts but he discovered the mistake before the dose was all the way down and sent for a doctor at once.

THE CITY COUNCIL.

PASSED THE HOSPITAL GRANT LAST NIGHT

It was a Quiet Session—Not Much Business Transacted

The City Council met last night in regular session Mayor Walmsley in the chair. Those present were Alds. Yeomans, Walker, Landenberger, Marshall, Mackie, Grills, Petty, Hay, Robinson, W. H. Gordon, Hart, Green, Luscombe, Faulkiner, Clarke and LaRoche.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Inspector Hulme submitted an estimate of the work which he thinks should be done by the Public Works committee during the coming year. From the solicitor, re extension of the Front Street sewer. He said it was necessary to submit the plans and specifications of the system to the Provincial Board of Health before the work was commenced. Timothy Hogle said he had ten cords of stone ready to be laid on the streets. He asked $3 a cord.

The communications were referred to the Public Works committee.

The reports of the various committees were read as have already appeared in these columns. The Industrial committee recommended that the sum of $123 be accepted by the city in settlement of taxes due from the Belleville Canning Factory.

The council went into committee of the whole on committee reports, Ald. Petty in the chair.

The item of $300 the cost of the proposed new vault caused some discussion:

Ald Yeomans wanted to know why such a location was recommended. If the vault was constructed downstairs it would be necessary for the clerk to carry his books up and down stairs every day.

Ald. Hay said it was not deemed prudent to build it in the tower.

Ald. Robinson said he did not think a vault was necessary. With the new fire extinguishers that the city had and the additional hose which was forthcoming he did not see how these papers were going to be burned.

Ald. W. H. Gordon said that there was not enough accomodation at present for the valuable books and papers belonging to the city clerk.

Ald Yoemans said that he thought this clause should be allowed to go back to the committee. He thought that a vault sufficient to meet the wants of the city clerk could be constructed on the second floor for a less sum than $300. He would move that the committee reconsider the clause.—Carried.

Ald. Faulkiner objected to letting the Belleville Canning Factory off with part payment of their taxes. He appealed to the Finance Minister on this matter.

Ald. Wills said the committee had acted fairly and if Ald. Faulkiner was not present at the committee when the matter was discussed it was his own fault. The past year was a hard one on the canning factories in this province. The company agreed to pay half their taxes.

Ald. Faulkiner said that it was a fraud to allow these men to get off without paying their taxes. The company had not kept their agreement and they had no right to get off. The poor man had to pay his taxes and why not make the rich.

Mayor Walmsley said the company had not done as much this year as they had in the past. If the former years were taken into consideration each year would average the requirements of the by-law. He was of the same opinion as Ald. Faulkiner until he had looked up the matter. The company should be encouraged now as well as when they first came here.

Ald. Landenberger said that the company had acted fairly. The only declaration missing was that of '93 and during that year the company had done more work than they agreed to and the city did not ask one.

Ald. Faulkiner—Those are not declarations. I asked the city solicitor if those declarations are the same as stipulated for in the by-law.

Solicitor Henderson.—They are not the same as I would draw out.

Ald. Yeomans said he had the matter referred back to the committee for the opinion of the solicitor and that afternoon the committee had thrashed it out thoroughly. He did not think that the matter should again be thrashed out in the council. He thought the committee should receive the support of the council.

Ald. Green said that this amount was what the company thought was due the city. If this was so the tax payers made their own assessments.

In reply to Ald. Green, Ald. Wills said that the Court of Revision fixed the assessments.

This ended the debate and the clause carried.

In regard to the Solicitor's opinion re the Front street sewer Mayor Walmsley said that while in Toronto he called upon Dr. Bryce but he was not at home. An answer would be sent to the council at an early date.

Ald. Wills moved that a plan of the proposed sewer be sant to the council at an early date.

Ald. Wills moved that a plan of the proposed sewer be sent to Dr. Bryce before the contract was signed.—Carried.

The other reports were adopted.

The committee rose and council resumed.

ENQUIRIES.

Ald. Hay wanted to know from the chairman of water and gas why the lamp was taken from the corner of Pine and Bleecker streets, and that corner left in darkness.

Ald. Robinson said there was another lamp stolen from a more thickly populated place and it was taken for that purpose.

MOTIONS.

Ald Yeoman's moved that the sum of $1000 be granted to the Women's Christian Association to assist in the erection of additional building for the use of the hospital and Home for the Friendless and that the manner of payment be left to the Executive committee. That before the grant be paid the plans and estimates be submitted to and approved by the following committee namely His Worship the mayor, Ald. Doyle, Walker and the mover and seconder.

Ald. Wills said in seconding the motion he did it because he thought that it was furthering a good work. He was of the opinion that the city could not afford more than $500. This could be arranged by paying $500 this year and $500 next.

Ald. Walker said it was hardly fair to put $500 on next year's council. He did not see how this council could do it.

Ald. Robinson said he thought the full amount should be granted this year.

Ald. Clarke wanted to know the solicitor's opinion on the matter.

The solicitor did not like to give an opinion until he had looked the matter up. Without looking it up however he was of the opinion that the council could not promise $500 on behalf of next year's council.

Ald. Yeomans did not see what great hardship the council of next year would have in shouldering this $500.

Ald. Petty was in favor of giving the ladies $500 this year and trust to the generosity of next years council in giving the other $500.

Ald. Walker said that it was not fair for this council to get the credit of giving the Hospital $1000 and then taking $500 from next years council. He would vote for the whole being granted this year.

Ald. Landenberger agreed with the opinion of Ald. Walker.

Ald. Yeomans said if the council passed this resolution there would be no difficulty in having the $500 paid next year.

Ald. Yeomans said that if the seconder was willing the motion might be referred back to the Executive Committee in order to allow the solicitor to express his opinion on the matter.

This was carried unanimously.

Ald. Robinson moved that the Mayor, Ald. Harts, Luscombe, W. H. Gordon and the mover for the purpose of investigating the matter of fines and fees with the view of ascertaining what amount of these, in which this corporation is interested, remain uncollected in the last five years, and what portion of the same can be considered as collectable and further to ascertain the reason why the fines and fees in default are not collected and if the amounts paid are entered in a cash book as recommended by the auditors and properly and promptly paid over to the treasurer. Also that the said committee be empowered to have access to any books which may be in the hands of the police magistrate or the chief of police in which a record of police court fines is left; and if necessary to employ an accountant, at an expense of not more than $15 to assist in this work and prepare a statement for this committee.

Ald. Landenberger said that a resolution of this kind had been brought into the council for three successive years. He did not see the use of it.

Ald. Grills thought there was no harm in appointing this committee. If there was nothing wrong there was nothing to be made right.

Ald. Petty said he would support his motion. The auditors recommended it.

Ald. Wills said that the mover of the motion was fighting shadows. If Ald. Robinson would bring a specific charge he would support it.

The motion was put to a vote and carried.

Council adjourned at 10.40.

AN UNPLEASANT EXPERIENCE

A Graduate of the D & D Institution Arrested and Jailed on a Charge of Theft.

An interesting story of an adventure of a graduate, of the D. & D. Institute, named Clarke comes from Peterboro.

The circumstances of the case are as follows: Clarke is a deaf and dumb boy of good education, being a graduate from the Ontario Institution for the Deaf and Dumb at Belleville. He had adopted the calling of a peddler, and sold sticking plaster and other wares of a similar nature. Being a hard-working and indefatigable canvasser, he made money at the business and generally carried a well lined pocket book.

In the course of his travels he came to the village of Lakefield early last week, and in canvassing it came across an old school mate in the person of young Isbister, the deaf and dumb son of the village blacksmith, Clarke was at once invited to make the Isbister homestead his home while in Lakefield and he took advantage of the offer. On Wednesday he left Lakefield and worked along to Lindsay and the villages in Victoria county. Thursday, Mr. Isbister discovered a purse which he was positive of having left in a coat pocket, was missing. As the wallet contained between $60 and $70, the loss was a serious one, and it being known that Clarke had purchased a bicycle in Lindsay the suspicions were justifiable. He was traced from village to village by Constable Cochrane of Peterboro, who finally came up with him at Uxbridge and took him back to Peterboro. On Saturday he appeared before the Magistrate remanded until to-day. In the meantime however the wallet was found at the blacksmith's home hid away in an old fur mitten and Clarke was at once released.

A Humorous Fact

About Hood's Sarsaparilla—it expels bad humor and creates good humor. A battle for blood is what Hood's Sarsaparilla vigorously fights, and it is always victorous in expelling foul taint and giving the vital fluid the quality and quantity of perfect health. It cures scrofula, salt rheum, boils and other blood diseases.

As the Philharmonic concert will be held on the 30th of this month there will be only two (2) more practices, three at the very most it is therefore most necessary that every member intending to take part in the concert be in their place to-night and at every practise till after that event has taken place. Practise begins to-night at 8 o'clock sharp.

"Half a span of Angry steel" will produce no more fatal results than a neglected cold or cough. For all throat and lung diseases, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is the best remedy. It is invaluable in cases of croup whooping cough, bronchitis and la grippe.

"After years of dyspeptic misery, I can at last eat a good square meal without its distressing me," gratefully exclaimed one whose appetite had been restored by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This remedy wonderfully sharpens the appetite and improves digestion.

This is the last regular practice of the Philharmonic Society for this season as he concert will be held on the thirtieth of this month. Let every member be in his or her place this evening without fail, so as to put the last finishing touches to Wagner's Hail Bright Abode," the chorus from the Bohemian Girl. Do not fail to attend this concert if you desire to listen to true merit, the ladies trio is one of its many attractions and is most artistic in every way.

LACTATED FOOD A SCIENTIFIC PREPARATION.

Lactated Food is the only scientifically prepared food in the world. When cooked it is entirely free from starch. Young infants cannot digest starchy substances.

Lactated Food possesses the highest percentage of any artificial food of the true nutritive principles of wheat, barley and oats—the three perfect cereals.

Sugar of milk being the basis of Lactated Food, the effect of the food in young infants is identical with mother's milk.

Lactated Food is easily assimilated; it is a perfect corrective of stomach and bowels, and the most perfect strengthener and vitalizer for babies who are weak, puny, sleepless, cross and fretful.

Greenleaf. Bert Cummings is given as doubtful.

Parallel Cases.

The shooting of Li-Hung-Chang recalls the attack on the Czarewitch, now Czar Nicholas II., in May, 1891, while he was in Japan on his journey around the world. He was visiting Otsu, a place near Kioto, when a Japanese policeman Tsuda Sanzo struck him with a sword inflicting a cut on his forehead. The Czarewitch's sun helmet broke the force of the blow, and Prince George of Greece, his travelling companion, felled the would-be assassin with a heavy walking stick before the man could inflict another wound. Various explanations of the attempted assassination were made. It was said that Sanzo was a half-crazy fanatic, who belonged to the Samurai, noted for their hatred of foreigners, and also that he was a Nihilist who had escaped from the island of Saghalien, belonging to Russia, and had succeeded in entering the Japanese police service. It was at first proposed to inflict the same penalty as if he had attacked a member of the Japanese Imperial family—death—but as the Japanese law contained no provisions regarding assaults on foreign princes, the supreme court pronounced him guilty of ordinary assault with intent to kill, and sentenced him to imprisonment at hard labor for life. This will probably be the penalty in the presence instance, cases like that of the Czarewitch's assailant, in which event Koyama would probably be put to death, since the viceroy represents in his own person, as envoy, the power and dignity of his imperial master.—New York Tribune.

"Mercy! Goodness!" exclaimed Mr. Watkins, dropping his pipe in consternation, "what is that awful riot in the kitchen?"

"That's the war with China," answered his wife placidly, going on with her book.

Chinese Rumor.

It is a rare thing—even in the gorgeous East, for the real life to be funnier than comic opera. But, though no real Mikado has ever been quite so laughable as the Mikado invented by Mr Gilbert, the Chinese General Wu has managed to surpass all actual or imaginable travesties of the eccentricities of his native land. It was a question of persuading the Japanese to become his prisoners of war. Any other commander might have felt that the first step to take was to defeat the Japanese in battle. General Wu—as became a general in a country where competitive examination rules promotion—hit upon a more intellectual method. He erected a number of posters bearing the legend, "Surrender and avoid death." He called upon the enemy to prostrate themselves before these posters; they should then be taken care of by officers "with a reputation for charity and justice." And yet the unexpected happened, and the Japanese charged and broke the troops of Gnral Wu. One wonders whether he holds them guilty of a breach of faith for thus ignoring the rules of the game which he had drawn up so elaborately for their use and benefit.—London Graphic.

In France, a very good gas is made from the fatty material contained in the soapsuds, after washing wools and yarns. The wash water of a wooden mill with 20,000 spindles will annually yield enough of this substance to produce 1,100,000 feet of gas.

A new imitation of gold is made of 94 parts of copper and six of antimony, with a little magnesium and carbonate of lime added while it is melted. It is said that it preserves its color, is an almost exact imitation of gold and that it costs only a shilling a pound to make it.

THE DESIGNS of our spring wall papers are beautiful and the colorings exquisite. The effects they produce upon the wall have been studied with intelligent sympathy, and the "long-felt wants" of a few years ago have been provided for with cultivated taste. A judicious employment of any of our papers leaves little to be done in a room—a few ornaments according to the taste or wealth of the occupant are all that is necessary to contribute to its beauty and comfort. Mr. McMullen on How to Meet the Deficit.

CATTLEROOM ON SHIPS UNCHANGED

Unless There is Absolute Economy in the Estimates Mr. McMullen Declares the Session Will Be a Long One—McCarthy on the Remedial Order.

Ottawa, Ont., April 24.—The Government's ill-advised order in council, changing the regulation with regard to cattle space on board steamships from 2 feet 8 inches to 2 feet 6 inches, was the subject with which the House opened its session yesterday. Mr. Laurier had inquired about the Government's intentions the previous evening and was promised a reply. To make sure of getting an immediate and definite response to his question he moved the adjournment of the House, after having spoken of the importance which it is to the cattle shippers throughout the country, that it should be known at once what the regulations are to be during the season, which is now opening.

Mr. Featherston, who is listened to as an expert upon questions affecting the cattle interests of the Dominion, opposed the reduction of the space. To the statement that 2 feet 6 inches was the space allowed from United States ports, he replied that the United States cattle were hardier and stronger upon their legs than Canadian cattle, and being fed out of doors were better prepared for sea voyage than cattle which spent six months in the stable. To reduce the space two inches would be to increase the capacity of the steamers 6 2-3 per cent. At 40 shillings per head the space would be increased to 42 shillings and 6 pence for 2 feet 8 inches, and speaking for himself he thought he would rather, from a business standpoint pay 42 shillings 6 pence and get 2 feet 8 inches than 40 shillings and have his cattle crowded into 2 feet 6 inches.

Mr. Costigan, the new Minister of Marine, complained at the emphasis which the leader of the Opposition had given to his request for information. He would say that after hearing the deputation of cattle shippers, which had waited upon him last night, he had considered their representations of so much force that it had been decided not to change the old regulation.

Mr. Laurier: If the new regulation is to be cancelled and the old one maintained I am satisfied.

Mr. Mulock, who for several sessions has given a good deal of most intelligent attention to the cattle interests did did not let the Government off with the Minister's announcement of their retreat. He reminded the House that several years ago after a full discussion of the subject by both the parties interested held before the ministers a decision had after due deliberation been arrived at and the space was fixed at 2 feet 8 inches. Now the Government had upon an ex-parte statement, upon representations made by the steamship companies, and without saying anything to the shippers, decided to revoke that old and unsatisfactory arrangement and to decrease the space to 2 feet 6 inches. He protested against that kind of hasty action taken in the dark and interfering with an important interest. He commended the repentance of the Government but condemned their rashness in the first instance. (Opposition applause.)

Mr. McMullen was the first to speak on the debate on the address from the throne. He said that the revision of the tariff really amounted to nothing. When the Minister of Finance attributed the deficit to a reduction of taxation he was giving a reason for the decline of revenue which was not the real one. There was no doubt that the deficit was the result of a very general depression, but that depression had not been brought about without the Government being responsible to a large extent. In the face of the enormous deficit that had occurred the House would expect considerable reductions in the estimates. It was time to apply the pruning-knife, and the Minister of Finance should make substantial reductions in the estimates; if he did not he might expect that his frail body would not be big enough to cast a shadow when the House concluded its labors,. The country wanted no more expenditures on Catarqui Railways and Tay Canals; no more expenditure to enable the High Commissioner to feast and wine lords in London. It was time to cut off such expenditures as these, and if the minister desired to escape long tedious sittings night after night he had better remove these objectionable items.

Mr. McMullen suggested that economy might be exercised in the direction of the administration of Indian affairs, the public lands and the mounted police. He reminded the House of the utter failure of the promise of the National Policy and pointed out the fatuity of the effort of the Government to establish profitable trade relations with the distant colonies of Great Britain. He spoke of the enormous expenditure of public money upon the Prohibition Commission, without one line of evidence having been presented to Parliament. This led up to reconsideration of the position of the leader of the House on the temperance question. Mr. Foster had ridden the prohibition horse pretty hard at one time, but since his admission to the Government stabled the animal. He had not taken any conspicuous place in the temperance movement of late; on the contrary, he had favored the adoption of the French treaty, which encouraged the consumption of light wines.

Mr. Davin had criticised the utterances of Hon. Mr. Sifton as to the intentions of the Government of Manitoba, but his statements were not nearly so imprudent as the threat made by the Minister of Public Works in Vercheres, that if the Government did not comply with his demand in regard to the Manitoba school question. Mr. McMullen characterized the Ministers as political infants, men of yesterday, men who had not the extended experience in commercial, financial and professional life necessary to equip them for the discharge of their responsible duties devolving upon a government. If there ever was a period in the history of the country when a master hand was required to guide its affairs, it was the present time. Canada should have as Minister of Justice a man of knowledge and experience to whom the bar of the country would look up. There were hundreds of men in the country capable of assuming the responsibilities of this position, and who would be better fitted for it than the present incumbent, who was virtually a beardless boy.

"We have had a reign of dishonesty for the last 15 years," said Mr. McMullen, "and we earnestly hope that we have seen the end of it, but we are not sure." The dubious tone in which Mr. McMullen concluded raised a laugh, in which Mr. Ouimet joined. Mr. McMullen remarked the enjoyment of the Minister, and informed him that it was possible, when the Public Accounts Committee got through, his pleasantness would take a different turn.

Following Mr. McMullen, but not traversing his argument, came the leader of the Third Party, D'Alton McCarthy. He strongly condemned the Government for delay in calling the session, which he considered most unjustifiable. No good reason had been advanced for this extraordinary delay. Was the business of the country simply to be run in the interests of a party? (Opposition cheers.) The House would be wanting in dignity to itself if it did not assert its right to be called together at a convenient season of the year. Mr. McCarthy then plunged into a discussion of the Manitoba school question. He was not surprised at the misrepresentations in Haldimand. On one side the electors were told that the Remedial Order was simply a handout of a judgment of Her Majesty. That was hardly a fair way to put it. But he was surprised to find serious misapprehension on the subject existing in the House. Mr. Bennett, in his speech the other day, congratulated him upon the ability he had displayed, and said that all the Government had done was to send to Manitoba the judgment of the Privy Council, and the same story was used in Haldimand in the interests of the Secretary of State. Mr. Laurier had spoken the other day of the Government's action as an invitation to Manitoba to remedy the evil created by their legislature, while Mr. Foster had designated it as "a decision of the law." Lastly, he would quote the Minister of Justice, whose views were certainly more frank than those of the other speakers. Sir C. H. Tupper had said that the language was in no sense dictatorial, it was merely the language of the law. Which interpretation, he asked, was correct? There could be no misunderstanding with reference to the judgment of the Privy Council. The opinion of that body was an opinion which had previously been from the Supreme Court of Canada. He proceeded to explain the nature of the references to the Supreme Court, and quoted from the debate in the House, when Mr. Blake first introduced his resolution, in favor of submitting to the Supreme Court questions of law or fact, for the guidance of the executive. In that debate Sir John Macdonald pointed out that the Government would not be relieved of responsibility by a decision of the court on points of law, and might reject that opinion. An answer to questions submitted to the Supreme Court and subsequently submitted to the Privy Council in England could in no sense be regarded as an order. This great Canadian Parliament, in his opinion, was not subject to any court of law. The Privy Council in England merely determined that the Supreme Court of Canada should have answered differently the questions submitted to it. He was free to say, after the Privy Council's decision that the Governor-in-Council was justified in hearing the appeal of the Roman Catholic minority. But he contended the Governor-in-Council had just as much right to reject the petition of the Roman Catholic minority as to allow it. For what they did they were responsible, not judicially responsible, but responsible as the executive of this country to the Parliament of this country and to the people.

The Remedial Order had evidently been carefully drawn upon the lines of a judgment on the decision of the Imperial Privy Council.

It required that the Separate school system of 1870 should be restored and that the Roman Catholics should not be obliged to contribute to other schools. He held this order was plain in its intent and by no means courteous. The act of 1890 had undoubtedly deprived the Roman Catholics of Manitoba of their rights and the order directed them restoration. Manitoba has no discretion. Manitoba has been ordered to do so and so it is not left to the discretion of the Provincial Legislature. It is simply commanded to restore the school system of 1870, and although it is to be done presumably by being read a first, second and third time, the Legislature must confine its act to the limits of that Order. Anything short of that would not be obeying the order, anything beyond it would be ultra vires.

There was all the difference in the world in simply passing the question over to the Legislature as the opinion of the Dominion Executive and ordering that body to take action. The Government had apparently made up its mind before the appeal was heard what course it would pursue.

He proceeded to describe the Separate school system of Manitoba as it existed previous to 1890, and said it was by no means as efficient as the Ontario system. The result in Manitoba was almost appalling, as it would lead to large sections of the province growing up in almost absolute ignorance.

Referring to the criticisms on Attorney-General Sifton for taking part in the Haldimand election, he wanted to know how Mr. Ouimet justified his action in going down to St. Hyacinthe and anticipating the issue of the Remedial Order. Mr Ouimet had said in effect that if the Roman Catholic minority did not get justice he would resign from the Government.

Mr. Dupont: That is not true. I was there and heard what Mr. Ouimet said.

Mr. Ouimet: I am glad to hear Mr. Dupont say that.

Mr. McCarthy: Well, what did you say?

Mr. Ouimet: You know perfectly well. You read my observations in the course of your argument.

Mr. McCarthy, continuing, said that Attorney-General Sifton had as much right as any man in the country to take part in the Haldimand contest. He spoke for himself alone, not as a member of the Manitoba Government. Mr. Sifton was opposed to any change in the school law, and if Manitoba decided to obey the Remedial Order, then Mr. Sifton would step out of the Government.

Hon. Mr. Costigan followed at 5 o'clock. He said Parliament had time and again given proof of its ability to deal with delicate questions in a proper manner. He denied the right or propriety of Mr. McCarthy to make the appeal he has done on the question of Separate schools. The question was, had any right under the constitution been taken away from any minority? The Privy Council said yes, on behalf of the Catholics. He said it was a great injustice for Mr. McCarthy and others to raise the cry that this was an attempt of the Catholics of Canada to coerce the Protestants into granting Separate schools for Manitoba. He agreed with those who entertained the hope that Manitoba would, through its legislature, deal effectively with this matter. The Remedial Order did not ask for the last pound of flesh, and until this parliament had refused to accept a reasonable compromise it did not lie in Mr. McCarthy's mouth to interpret the order as he had done. It was untrue to charge the Catholics with originating this school question, which began in ante-Confederation days, when the Protestants asked for full control of their schools, and it was given just before Confederation. Then followed the fair proposition, Why not give to the Catholic minority of Ontario the same rights as were given to the Protestant minority in Quebec? These rights were secured before Confederation and were protected under the Union Act, so that the settlement was as permanent as legislation could make it.

The minister read extracts from the speeches of prominent Roman Catholic ministers and others to show they heartily wished to bring about this amicable solution of what had caused much trouble. He went on to argue that each of the large provinces had the same rights as Manitoba; that is, the rights they possess under the constitution, and that it was folly to talk of giving Manitoba unlimited jurisdiction over school matters. No province had it. They were all limited by the constitution. He earnestly protested against any attempt in this House, or out of it, to make it appear this was an attempt to force Separate schools on Manitoba, and expressed confidence in the good sense of the mass of the people at large to do justice to the Catholic minority of Manitoba. He warmly condemned the agitators who, like Mr. McCarthy, had lost the confidence of the electors of Haldimand, as he had long before lost the confidence of his old chief, Sir John Macdonald, were trying to achieve popularity and notoriety at the expense of law, order and good feeling.

The Address was then passed without a division.

Hon. Mr. Foster gave notice that he would move the House into Supply on Thursday, and in reply to Sir Richard Cartwright said the estimates would be ready by that time.

After a number of reports were laid on the table, the House adjourned at 5.50

Senator Boulton on the Schools.

The debate on the address was resumed in the Senate in the afternoon by Senator Boulton. The Manitoba school question he had no fault to find with, the course pursued by the Government up to the present, nor with the policy outlined by the Premier in his speech. The Remedial Order, he said, merely gave effect to the judgment of the courts that the Governor-General-in-Council had power to hear the appeal of the minority and transmitted the same to the Local Government of Manitoba. In this he thought the action of the Government was quite constitutional. The position in which Manitoba stood in reference to the question of Separate schools was wholly different from that of Ontario or Quebec. In those two provinces Separate schools existed prior to Confederation, and were secured to the minority by the constitution. The rights assured to the minority in Manitoba were simply treaty rights between the Dominion Government and early settlers of the province, and cannot be held to be binding on the province as it now exists. The question before the Dominion Government is not whether there should be Separate schools in Manitoba, but how far the Federal authorities have the right to interfere with provincial education, upon the question of education. He would not say what ground he would take upon the question of Separate schools, because that was beside the question at issue and a matter of purely local concern. He thought a satisfactory settlement of the school question could be found in the power of compensation which existed in the Dominion Government. There were 101 Separate schools in the province. After the passage of the acts of 1890, 36 of these schools entered the National school system. The population in the districts in which these schools were had no grievance.

Mr. Scott: They had no alternative.

Senator Boulton: Yes they had, but all these schools were in what is known as the added part of the province, outside the old Selkirk settlement, and the people are quite satisfied with the National school system. Twenty-two out of 101 Separate schools were disbanded after the passage of the act of 1890, and the remaining 35 schools are maintaining themselves outside the National system. He contended that these 35 school sections alone had cause of grievance and proposed that the Dominion Government should make a grant of money out of the revenue derived from the sale of public lands in Manitoba and the Northwest to recoup those school sections which were deprived of the local government grant under the provincial act. The amount required would not be more than $10,[illegible] a year, and would give the minority all the rights they lost by provincial legislation.

Senator Clemow: What about school lands?

Senator Boulton: The school lands belong to the province, and any interference with the revenue derived from them would be an infraction of provincial rights. He dwelt at great length upon the trade question and claimed that the removal of tariff duties would relieve the present trade depression. He was in favor of the admission of Newfoundland into Confederation.

Senator Power moved the adjournment of the debate, which was carried.

CHINAMEN IN COFFINS

Novel Methods of Smuggling Celestials Across the Line

Montreal, April 24.—A novel, yet dangerous mode of smuggling Chinamen has just been brought to light by the shrewd work of United States customs officials from Boston. About a year ago the same officials exposed an organized gang of smugglers that "ran" Chinamen into the United States on forged passports from this city. It was estimated at the time fully 200 Celestials, with the aid of smugglers, succeeded in escaping for some time the vigilant eyes of Uncle Sam's officials and getting safely ensconced in Boston and New York.

Not to be outwitted, the leaders of the gang put their heads together, and last month devised another means of getting the Celestials across the lines. This time the wily Chinaman was consigned to a rude pine coffin, with concealed air holes and with the aid of a forged death certificate was safely shipped from St. John, N.B., to Vanceboro, Maine, where the supposed corpse would be claimed by one of the smugglers. After staying in hiding for several days, the "corpse," attired as a female, would be spirited away under cover of night, and before morning dawned the "corpse" was safely lodged in either Boston, Springfield or New York. Fifteen were run across thus. When this new means of entrance into the United States became generally known among the resident Chinamen in Vancouver they took steps to instruct their confreres from the Flowery Kingdom as soon as they arrived on the Pacific Coast of the new manner of gaining access to the land of the free. Arrived in Montreal, the Celestials were taken in hand by the smugglers, who shipped them this time to Quebec, and from there over the Intercolonial Railway to St. John, N.B., where other members of the gang "ran" them into the States as dead Chinese. Arrests are expected.

Fortunes They Missed.

"Any number of people complain that fortune never comes their way," said Prof. Edwin J. Houston the other day, "and when it does come they fail to recognize their opportunity." For instance, George Westinghouse went about, begging people to buy a half interest in his patents for $500, and he could find no takers. Now the royalties on the Westinghouse brake net him half a million dollars a year. The same thing is true of the Bell telephone patents, a half interest in them being at one time offered to several capitalists for $12,000. There are men who indulge in reckless speculation just because they have missed similar chances to make good investments."

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

For female complaints it has no equal.'

THE COPYRIGHT AND CANADIAN LITERATURE

Every question has its two sides not excepting the Canadian Copyright Act whose sides are presented respectively by the publishers and the authors. It appears to us that the publishers and printers have had a pretty voluble hearing and now as seems fitting the authors have concluded to make themselves heard.

Without going into details, the Canadian publishers are asking that Canada have copyright regulations of her own as distinct from those of England. At present an English author may sell to an American publisher the patent right not only of the States but of Canada, this the Canadian publishers call selling the Canadian market and to circumvent this trade difficulty they ask that the Canadian Copyright Act of 1889 be proclaimed. But the Act does more than that, it provides that if a British or American author fail to secure copyright, that is virtually a patent, of any book in Canada, the Canadian publishers may print the work by paying the author a royalty of 12½ per cent.

Prof Goldwin Smith in a brief letter dealing with the question in last week's Week, asks, regarding the probable consequences to Candian literature.

"Would it not have the same bad effect on Canadian literature which American denial of copyright to English authors had upon the literature of the United States? The American publisher naturally preferred reprinting English works without payment, to paying for native productions. The consequence of this was the depression of American literature, which continued till, by the adoption of reciprocal copyright, the American writer was placed, commercially, on a fair level with his English rival. I am inclined to attribute the anti-British acrimony, unhappily characteristic of American literature, partly to the ill-feeling engendered by unfair competition. Should we not, under the proposed Copyright Act, have similar results in Canada? Would not the hopes, whatever they may be, of Canadian literature be killed by the exposure of the Canadian writer to competition with unpaid authors?"

There is no provision made in the Canadian Act for collecting the 12½ per cent royalty and Prof. Smith believes that it would be a dead letter. We don't object to Canada controlling her own copyright regulations as she controlls her own patent rights, on the contrary we are heartily in favor of it, but cannot the Act of 1889 be so amended as to do "commercial justice' to Canadian authors and arrest the threatend discrimination against Canadian literature?

What! can it be, that the representatives of the Canadian people in Parliament assembled laughed, yes actually laughed out loud, roared the dispatch has it, at a blue ribboned message from Her Most Gracious Majesty through the medium of her representative in North America, His Excellency the Governor-General, in acknowledgement of a message of congratulation from the Canadian Parliament to Her Majesty expressing as much as could be caught of that great throb of sympathy that shook the Canadian people upon the occasion of the birth of a son and heir to the Duke and Duchess of York And they laughed aloud! Ah! the shame, the brutality of it; and it is not recorded that even the Past Grand Master left the chamber.

COLOSSAL FORTUNES.

Those in America Compared With Those of England Show Some Contrasts.

By a calculation made a short time ago by an American statistician, it appears that seventy citizens of the United States possess among them an aggregate wealth of £450,600,000. That gives an average of about £7,500,000 for each person. To come to particulars: There was one estate—we refrain here from mentioning names—returned as being worth no less than £30,000,000. There were five individuals valued at £20,000,000; one valued at £14,000,000; two valued at £12,000,000; six valued at £10,000,000; six valued at £8,000,000; four valued at £7,000,000, and fifteen valued at £4,000,000. The brain reels before such figures. They express measures of wealth which the ordinary mortal is powerless to grasp. Besides these seventy colossal fortunes, there are fifty other persons in the Northern States alone valued at over £2,000,000 each thirty of them being valued in all at £90,000,000. There were some time ago published lists of sixty-three millionaries in Pennsylvania, possessing in the aggregate £60,000,000, and of sixty persons in thre villages near New York whose wealth aggregated £1,000,000. In Boston fifty families pay taxes on annual incomes of about £200,000 each. We have nothing to compare with such individual cases of wealth in Great Britain. Baron Rothschild and Lord Overstone each left about £3,500,000; the late Lord Dudley left £4,000,000; the late Duke of Buccleugh, estimated to be the richest Scotchman, left estates valued at £6,000,000. One living English duke is valued at £10,000,000 and another at £8,000,000, but not many names could be added to these to place against the above list of American fortunes. In 1884 there were only 104 persons in the United Kingdom whose incomes from business profits were returned as over £50,000 a year. In 1886 there were only seventeen estates which paid probate duty on about £250,000 each. A comparison of these English figures with those of American makes an interesting study in contrasts in international progress.

A ROUGH SHAVE.

The Natives of Jamaica Use Broken Bottles for Razors.

The natives of Jamaica have no need to buy soap, for the woods abound with plants whose leaves and buds supply very well the place of that indispensable article. Among these is the soap tree, so called, though it is more a bush than a tree. Its bulb, when rubbed on wet clothes, makes a beautiful lather, which smells much like common brown soap. The Jamaica negroes, some of them who are great dandies in their way, make a soap out of a cocoanut oil and home-made lye; and a fine soap it is, smooth and fragrant. This cocoanut oil soap is used for shaving. When a man wishes to shave he starts out with cocoanut shell cup and his donkey tail brush and bottle. It is never any trouble to find an empty bottle in Jamaica, even in the mountains. At least twenty generations of thirsty people have lived there, and thrown away the empty bottles. The man carries no mirror, because he has none to carry. Not one negro cabin in a dozen has a cheap looking-glass. But nature supplies the mirror as well as the soap. The man goes to a convenient pool in the mountain stream, where the water is still, and there is his mirror. He breaks his bottle on a stone and picks out a good sharp piece. Then he lathers his face profusely and begins to scrape away with his piece of glass, which works almost as well as a sharp razor.

The men rarely cut themselves in this operation. "At first," says a writer, "I trembled for them, but afterwards I tried the method for myself, and soon became almost an expert at it."

Costly Cigars.

"I see going the rounds of the press an item about the Prince of Wales' cigars," said the old tobacconist, who for a full generation has dispensed nicotine to the patrons of an uptown hotel. "According to this story they are made of the finest four-year stock by the most expert cigarmaker in Cuba, and after being wrapped in gold leaf and oil paper, stamped with the Prince's crest and packed in mahogany boxes; they cost H. R. H. just $1 50 apiece. That's a pretty good cigar story, but American lovers of the weed can discount it. There is a prominent importing firm of New York now having made a lot of the very finest Havana cigars, which will cost, when the duty is paid on them, just $4 35 apiece. They are intended as presents in packages of ten to the firm's principal patrons, who will then be able to boast of smoking the costliest cigars ever made. The highest-priced cigars I ever sold in Washington were $1 apiece, and they cost me $800 a thousand. Most of them were sold singly, but the last box of fifty was taken by a man who intended them as a present to a friend in the Treasury Department who had done him some especial service.

"That was during the war, when some cigars sold six for $5 that you could almost duplicate for 5 cents. What effect the present trouble in Cuba will have on the price of imported cigars remains to be seen, but many smokers would like to see the island annexed to the United States simply for the tobacco. Talking about steady smokers, I have a customer who for fourteen years has bought the same brand of cigars from me, and in that time he has paid me over $4,000."—Washington Post.

"Doctorein" or "Physicienne."

In Glasgow a discussion has arisen, provoked by some sticklers for exactness of expression, over the proper way in which to designate women who have secured a medical degree. Doctor and physician, it is claimed by these learned men of Glasgow, are both masculine, and they are begging those in authority "not to add another anomaly to our already most irregular language." Some of the suggestions for relief are "doctorein," "physicienne," "doctorine," "doctorina," and, in the case of married medical women, "doctors."

Murdered at Sea.

New York, April 24.—When the steamer Orinoco arrived at Bermuda on April 18, the chief engineer, William Sottau, was arrested for causing the death of a fireman. The arrest was made on the complaint of the British Consul. William Seeger, fireman, was taken suddenly ill with cramps on April 10. The Orinoco was then ten hours from Bermuda. While the fireman was lying, too ill to move, Sottau ordered him to go back to work. When Seeger protested the engineer grabbed him by the throat, and after choking him nearly to death kicked him several times in the abdomen A few hours later Seeger was dead. Then, although the steamship was only four hours from Bermuda, the body was bried at sea.

THE LETTER CARRIER.

A Truthful Tribute to the Worth of a Public Servant.

That one half of the world does not know how the other half lives, is a familiar adage. It applies to men's vocations as well as to their other relations to the general economy. Among the callings of life there is none of more general interest to everyone than that of the letter carrier, who is the daily servitor of the many and the familiar servant of all classes and of every nation. His goings and comings are recorded by nearly everyone upon the district that he serves, and he is probably the most interesting visitor the merchant and conservative man of business has during the course of a day.

Considering the responsibilities of the position he holds, there are few public servants who receive more meager pay or whose duties are more onerous. His duties are of the kind that must be performed. They cannot be shirked, as the interests involved are too vital, and the mail he delivers of too great a value to be delayed. Promptitude industry, exactness must be his motto, and in this regard he is a modern illustration of the "little busy bee" which pointed school day morals.—Baltimore World.

Drunkenness in England.

In England during one year for which returns have been furnished, there were 142,725 convictions for drunkenness, of which 11,178 were for offences committed between noon and midnight on Sundays. This does not show that there was excessive indulgence on Sabbath days more than on others. In Wales the proportion of Sunday convictions was still less, numbering only 772, out of a total of 10,347. Compared with this return for the whole of Wales, there is a significance in the fact that in the border county of Monmouth, to which the Sunday closing act does not apply, there were 110 convictions for drunkenness on Sunday, against 868 on other days.

LIFE IN SOUTH AFRICA.

HUNTING ON THE VELDT IS AN IDEAL SPORTING TRIP.

Of Course It Has Its Drawbacks, but Pleasures Far Outnumber Them, and With Settled Weather for Seven Months in the Year the Hunter Has a Royal Time of It Among Strange Game.

Wagon life in the South African interior has, of course, its drawbacks, yet in a climate where for about seven months absolutely settled weather may be relied upon, its pleasures outnumber them fifty to one. To mount one's pony on a clear, bright morning; to ride forth into the veldt with a friend and a brace of pointers, with the blessed feeling that you have not a care in the world beyond the march of your wagon to the next water; to be absolutely certain of some pretty shooting in a wild country innocent of farms and fences; to return to camp toward evening with perhaps ten or twelve braces of birds and a small buck—these things, to the average healthy male, seem as near perfection as may be found in this vale of tears.

It is 8 o'clock on a bright April morning in South Bechuanaland. The air is full of light, brisk and wonderfully exhilarating. Four gunners have just breakfasted under the lee of their wagon. Now, having mounted their ponies—the average South African horse is seldom more than fourteen hands—they ride quietly down the hither side of the shallow valley, "laagte," it is called in these parts, wherein they were outspanned, and climbed the farther rise.

It is a picturesque scene. The slopes are clothed with a long growth of waving grass, now greenish-yellow after the rains, amid which great boulders of dark-red rock crop up. Here and there small patches of blue and green bush start out fom the grassy veldt. Beyond, crowning the valley, begins a thickish woodland of short trees—bastard yellow-wood, the Boers call them—which extends for some miles in front, till the great open plains are again reached. As the gunners ride up the further slope, their wagon is already in motion behind them, starting upon its day's trek—seventeen miles to the next water. Through the clear, nimble air comes the crack of the driver's great whip and his shrill cries, hurled at the oxen, and the unwieldly home on wheels crushes slowly through the yielding sand. But now the gunners have spread out in line, and the pointers are already busy. Near some boulders one of the dogs feathers a little, then stands rigid as a figure of bronze. The two nearest gunners dismount. They already carry their guns and bandoliers, and ride, as men do in the veldt, in their flannel shirts with their sleeves well rolled up the arms. There is little to incumber their movements. Breeches, gaiters and stout boots, a shirt and a shady hat, are all that a man needs in Africa.

The reins are thrown over the poines' necks and hang in front of them and the stags will stand quietly for hours. Now the gunners are close upon the pointer, still standing with rigid tail and outstretched neck. These francolin lie close in the long grass. "Where the deuce—!" on a sudden up spring three brown birds within five feet of the sportsmen. Twenty yards of law, the guns are up, two light reports from smokeless cartridges and a brace of the birds hit the earth. Almost instantly a third report follows and the rear gunner has secured his right and left—not a difficult matter with these francolin. But the pointer is not yet content. Another brace of birds is found and brought to bag within thirty yards.

The partridges are now gathered. they prove to be the small Coqui francolin—"N'swimbi" the natives call them—perhaps the most beautiful game birds in the world. As one of them lies in the gunner's palm for a few moments the bright nank-in-yellow and orange of the head, the clear, hawk-like markings of the breast and the beautiful shape and feathering mark this partridge of Africa as a gem among its fellows. The birds are bestowed in a saddle-bag and the gunners mount and ride into the forest on the right-hand side of the wagon road. Meanwhile their comrades have entered the woodland more to the left hand and their guns can be heard already going.

For two hours the sportsmen quietly walk their horses through the forest, moving due west. Once their pointer gets into a small troop of guinea fowl delving for bulbs, and, after a smart chase, drives three of them into a tree, whence, as they fly off, the gunners secure them easily enough.

At length, after picking up a few butterflies in the forest clearings, for they carry a net, our gunners emerge upon broad, rolling, sun-drenched plains, covered with long, pale yellow grass. Through these they ride steadily hour after hour, picking up every now and again a head or two of game. Now it is a brace of big red-wing partridge (Orange river francolin); now one of those annoying, yet handsome, game birds, the black and white bustard—swarth koorhaan, the Boers call him—whose very noisy and chiding ways are familiar everywhere in open veldt in South Africa. Now, after keenest search, a leash of tiny bush quail are flushed and secured, one after the other having literally to be kicked up. A hare and a solitary "dikkop"—thick-knee plover—are added to the growing bag.—London Saturday Review.

A Ring Cut Out of a Single Diamond.

Antwerp Exhibition, where it was the admiration of the diamond cutters and merchants, being the first successful attempt to cut a ring out of a single stone. There are a great many difficulties in this method of cutting diamonds, as the stones have a certain cleavage and particular veins, all of which have to be carefully studied in order to prevent the splitting of the stone just as success seems within reach. After several unsuccessful attempts and three years' labor, the feat was accomplished by the patience and skill of M. Antione, one of the best-known lapidaries of Antwerp. The ring is about six-eights of an inch in diameter. In the Marlborough cabinet there is a ring cut out of one entire and perfect sapphire.

These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

BRITISH WARSHIPS ARRIVE

To Enforce the Demands Against Nicaragua.

THE U.S. WAS NOT CONSULTED

The Nicaragua Government Begs For a Little Delay—Latin American League to Be Formed to Resist Encroachments by European Powers.

New York, April 24.—The Herald's special from Managua, Nicaragua, says: Corinto advices state that the English fleet entered that port yesterday. It consisted of the Royal Arthur, the White Swan and the Satellite. The Government has taken no steps nor arrived at any plan of action in case of blockade or bombardment. President Zelaya has cabled Lord Kimberley, British Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, asking him to defer hostile demonstrations until the proposition of compromise sent by Nicaragua through the Salvadorean Minister in London can be considered.

Plenty of Men to Enforce the Demand.

Washington, April 23.—Notwithstanding the presence of three English war vessels in the harbor of Corinto, it is regarded as unlikely that any overt action will be taken by the commanding officer, because of Nicaragua's failure to comply with Great Britain's ultimatum. The State Department was advised several weeks ago that, while the English Government was determined that the indemnity to Pro-Consul Hatch should be paid, their efforts to collect it would not go to the extent of bombarding any of Nicaragua's coast cities. A proposition has been advanced that the customs duties at Corinto be collected by Great Britain until they equal the amount of the indemnity claimed, $75,000. This course, however, might lead to complications.

As far as can be learned the British Government did not take United States officials into its confidence as to its intention to send its entire available Pacific squadron to Corinto at this juncture. Both the State and Navy Departments declare that they have received no official confirmation of the movements of the British vessels. The admiral commanding the squadron is an experienced officer and, as he has a very large landing force on his vessels, he should be able to promptly enforce any demands his Government might authorize him to make.

Anti-European Latin-American Alliance.

Caracas, Venezuela, April 23. — Steps have already been taken to bring about an alliance of all the Latin-American countries against European aggression. A number of Governments, it is said, have approved the plan, and a general Congress may be called in July to consider the matter.

THE C.L.A. DISTRICTS.

An Even Dozen Already Organized and Secretaries Appointed.

Toronto, April 24.—The C. L. A. District Committee, composed of President Dr. Roberts, First Vice-Vice-President W. C. Kennedy and Secretary-Treasurer H. McConaghy, held a preliminary meeting yesterday for the purpose of appointing district secretaries and setting out the various districts for the season. Very many of the best clubs have announced their intention of entering for senior honors, thus giving many junior clubs greater chances to attain to the intermediate championship. Two or three new districts were added. The following is a list of the districts with the district secretaries as drafted:

Western—E. Smith, Chatham.
Stratford—R. E. Jackson, Seaforth.
Southern—L. Norman, Ingersoll.
Niagara—H. O'Loughlin, St. Catharines.
Central—J. J. Manning, Brampton.
Eastern—Walter Phelan, Peterboro.
Midland—A. Campbell, Markham.
Northeastern — James Henderson, Orillia.
Northwestern—J. J. Craig, Fergus.
Northern—J. Cousby, Jr., Owen Sound.
Huron—J. Cameron, Wiarton.
York—Dom. T. Doyle, Newmarket.

Hastings, Wingham and Listowel will be organized in addition to the above.

THE STAMP COUNTERFEITERS.

Proceedings in the Extradition Case at Hamilton

Hamilton, April 24.—The extradition proceedings against Tinsey McMillen, alias Mrs. M. T. Mack, the alleged head of the United States stamp counterfeiting gang, were continued before Judge Muir this morning.

Charles H. Felton of Chicago positively identified Mrs. Mack as Tinsey McMillen. He swore that she lived in the same house with him in Chicago. After the arrest of Jones, alias Morrison, he and Capt. Porter of the Secret Service searched her room and found etchings, copper plates, etc. They looked for counterfeit stamps, but found only one.

Chief Hazen of the United States Secret Service identified the stamps as being counterfeit. Capt. Porter also gave evidence as to the business connection between Jones and Mrs. Mack.

Wilde's Treasures at Auction.

London, April 24.—Oscar Wilde's valuable collection of prints, Moorish pottery, bric-a-brac, etc., will be sold at auction to-morrow. The articles to be sold include Carlyle's writing table.

Wilde's solicitors denied that their client would plead guilty even to one offence. They declare that his case will be fought to the end.

French Victory in Madagascar.

Paris April 24.—Despatches from Madagascar say that on April 3 the Hova camp at Miadana was captured by the French. The native loss was 100 killed and many more wounded. No Frenchmen were killed and only three were wounded.

Toronto Markets.

Toronto, April 24.—Flour—The market is firm, with fair demand. Straight rollers are quoted at $3.25 to $3.35, Toronto freights.

Bran—Trade quiet, with bran offering at $14, west. Shorts $17, Toronto freights.

Wheat—The demand is good and the market firmer. White is held at 74c west, with 73c bid. Red is scarce and nominal at 73c to 75c, and mixed wheat is quoted at 75c on the Midland. No. 1 Manitoba hard is quoted at 86c to 87c, Sarnia, grinding in transit.

Barley—Trade quiet. No. 1 is quoted at 48c and No. 2 at 46c to 47c. Feed sold at 44c to 45c.

Oats—The market is quiet, with prices steady. Sales of white were made at 32 to 32 1-2c west.

Buckwheat—Trade is quiet, with quotations outside at 41c to 42c.

RESULT OF THE JAP-CHIN WAR.

European Trade Will Be Unable to Stand the Competition.

Paris April 24.—The Journal Des Debats publishes a report of an interview with Some Arasuke, Japanese Minister to France, upon the results of the Chino-Japanese war. The Minister declared that European trade would be unable to withstand the competition of Japan. This, however, he said, was purely a pecuniary question and could be modified in accordance with the adoption by European countries of a bi-metallic standard or the retention of the existing standard. Japan, he said, does not project any conquests. Her one ambition is to advance in the path of progress and develop the trade and industries of the country she has recently acquired. The fears of Spain that Japan will encroach upon the Philippine Islands, the Minister said, are groundless. Japan is perfectly satisfied with the possession of Formosa.

SHOT AND LEFT FOR DEAD

Attempted Murder on the North Shore.

A BULLET PUT THROUGH HIS HEAD

A Sudbury Trapper Deliberately Shot His Companion and Left Him to Die in the Bush—Found Alive 24 Hours Later, He Identifies His Assailant

Sudbury, Ont., April 23.—Joseph Andrews was shot by Jules Sauve at Cartier, 35 miles west of here on the C.P.R., Saturday afternoon. Sauve and Andrews had been out on a hunting and trapping expedition, and were returning from their season's operations, when, within four miles from Cartier, Sauve put his gun to his shoulder, and, taking aim, fired, the ball penetrating Andrews' forehead and coming out through the back part of the skull.

After the deed was done Sauve left the poor fellow to his fate, and he was found the next day by James McIntosh, who happened to be passing out to the camp. He had laid out fully 24 hours in this condition, and was unable to make himself heard.

Police Magistrate Quibell and Constable Gagne of Sudbury arrived on the scene as quickly as possible. In the meantime Sauve had been apprehended.

Andrews made his ante-mortem statement to the Magistrate this morning, the prisoner being present, and being identified by the victm as the man who had fired the fatal shot.

Crown Attorney Kehoe of Sault Ste. Marie has been wired for, and on his arrival the preliminary enquete will commence. Andrews is resting easy, but he cannot survive.

IN THE COMMONS.

Details of the Peace Treaty Not Known in London

London, April 24.—In the House of Commons yesterday the Government was questioned concerning the terms of the treaty of peace between Japan and China.

Sir Edward Grey, Under-Foreign Secretary, said that the terms of the treaty had not yet been communicated to the Government, and, therefore, they were unable to make any statement in regard to it.

Mr. H. Campbell-Bannerman, Secretary of State for War, said he felt called upon to deny the truth of the existing rumors that the Duke of Cambridge was about to retire from his position as commander-in-chief of the army.

Replying to a question by Sir Thomas Esmonde, Sir Edward Grey said the imprisonment of Ex-Queen Liliuokalani of Hawaii was not a matter in which the Government could interfere.

Sir William Harcourt moved that an annuity of £4000 be paid to Ex-Speaker Peel.

Mr. Keir-Hardie moved an amendment fixing the amount at £1000, which he said was enough.

Nobody seconded Hardie's amendment and Harcourt's motion was carried.

Tribesmen Relieved Chitral.

Simla, April 23.—Gen. Sir Robert Low, commanding the British expedition against Umra Khan, telegraphs that it was not Col. Kelly who relieved the garrison at Chitral, but the Khan of Dir, at the head of 2000 tribesmen.

True Bill Against Wilde and Taylor.

London, April 24.—The grand jury returned in the Central Criminal Court, Old Bailey, a true bill against Oscar Wilde and Alfred Taylor. The prosecuting witnesses in the case are being lodged with a number of policemen in a house in Croydon-street, to prevent being mobbed. The Exchange Telegraph Company says that Wilde will probably plead guilty of one offence. The Sun says it is thought that Wilde's counsel will apply for an adjournment for a month and ask that Wilde be admitted to bail in the meantime.

SPREAD THEIR NET FOR FRAUD.

But the Police Stepped in and Made the Big Catch.

Montreal, April 24.—Chief Carpenter of the Canadian Secret Service arrested here this afternoon three men on a charge of conspiracy to defraud. They were Thomas Ross, William Henri and Dr. Phelps, said to be part of the Ellis-McCool gang of swindlers of Boston. Ross and Henri ran a general agency and boldly advertised that they would buy all kinds of merchandise, such as diamonds, bicycles, etc., and had a purchaser for a small business. They advertised for a young man to travel with a doctor, a specialist, none other than Dr. Phelps, and secured several deposits of $300. Detectives working on the case secured the situation for from $2 to $50 and their papers were seized by order of Judge Dugas, and it was found that they were concerned in a big cigar swindle, and particulars were given of the sale of large quantities of stolen goods.

TYLER MUST STEP DOWN.

Sufficient G.T.R. Proxies Secured to Elect Sir C. R. Wilson.

London, April 24.—The Times says: The committee of the Grand Trunk shareholders in England has received the adhesion of the owners of £13,000,000 worth, and 5000 proxies towards securing a majority of the selection of Sir Charles Rivers Wilson. They are now virtually assured that their hopes will be realized. The weight of opinion will be so heavy that the board will be induced to yield with a good grace.

Walked From the Train.

Oakville, April 24.—A peculiar accident happened on the Toronto branch of the Grand Trunk last night. George Collier, a middle-aged man, who was on his way from Sault Ste. Marie to Buffalo, N.Y., deliberately walked off the train two miles east of Oakville, and was instantly killed. He was going to Buffalo to get a pension cheque for $36 cashed. The body was left in charge of the authorities at Oakville.

Suicide at Newmarket.

Newmarket, April 24.—On Monday afternoon a young man named Harris Scott, about 21 years of age, committed suicide upon the farm of his uncle, Charles Wilton, lot 12, 3rd concession, Whitchurch, hanging himself in the barn. He had threatened to take his life on several previous occasions.

Suicide Follows Murder.

San Jose, Cal., April 24.—Alice P. Blair, a divorced woman, was stabbed and killed this morning by Albert Anderson. Anderson killed himself after dealing her the death blow.

England Will Not Interfere With Japan

London, April 24.—The Daily News says: "We understand that the Government will not join any combination of European powers to interfere with the results of the Japanese victories. While the ministers are willing and anxious to avert war, they do not regard the British interests as affected by the terms of peace."

A despatch from Yokohama says the Japanese have denied officially that the treaty of peace will place the Chinese customs under Japanese control. The treaty contains the optional condition that Japan will give up Wei-Hai-Wei upon the payment of the second instalment of the war indemnity, provided China pledges her customs to ensure the payment of the balance, but this condition possibly will not be observed.

The Standard's Berlin correspondent says: "The Russian Minister in Pekin has been instructed to negotiate a cession of Chinese territory to balance the Japanese acquisitions. China not being in a position to reject the demands hopes to confine them to the cession of part of Manchuria and an ice-free port."

The Standard also notices a rumor from an untrustworthy source that Li Hung Chang has had a relapse and is suffering from occasional fits of fever. No confirmation of this rumor can be obtained.

American Claimant to a Duchy.

Reading, Pa., April 24.—The son of a former resident of Reading and Philadelphia is claimant to the disputed throne of Lippe-Detmold in Germany. The claimant is William, the surviving son of Dr. Adolphe Lippe, who was the first homeopathic physician in Reading. Forty-five years ago Dr. Lippe went to Philadelphia, became the president of an homeopathic college and died there. William Lippe is now fighting his claim to the title of Count of Lippe-Wiesterfeldt, which, should he succeed, would place him directly in the line of succession to the throne of Lippe-Detmold. Dr Lippe's father was the Count of Wiesterfeldt.

The Paris Bus Strike.

Paris, April 24.—The strike of omnibus men continues, with little or no change in the situation. Very few vehicles are running, and each of these is accompanied by three gendarmes. The strikers are quiet and seem to be confident of winning. The strike greatly inconveniences the public, the annoyance having been greatly augmented by the strike of the employes of the North Paris Omnibus Co. last evening, on grounds similar to those taken by the first strikers, higher wages and shorter hours.

U.S. Comptroller Offered an Editorship.

Washington, April 24.—E. H. Kohlsaat, the new owner of The Chicago Times-Herald, offered Mr. Eckles, the comptroller of the currency, a large salary, said to be nearly $10,000 a year, to go to Chicago and become financial editor of that paper. In view of the importance of financial questions in business circles and politics, Mr. Eckles saw in this editorship an opportunity to wield great influence in the west, and was at first much inclined to accept Mr. Kohlsaat's offer. After consultation he, however, with other members of the administration, deemed it his duty to remain in his present office until the expiration of Mr. Cleveland's term, and wired his declination this afternoon.

Newfoundland Legislature Meets Thursday

St. John's, Nfld., April 24.—The steamer Grand Lake, which sailed from here today, took 300 emigrants to the United States. The feeling against confederation is growing. The Government delegates are reported to be apprehensive of defeat if the question should be submitted to the people. The Legislature will meet on Thursday, when the terms will be submitted. The general belief is that the question will be settled without reference to the electorate.

Permanently Cured by Taking

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

A CAB-DRIVER'S STORY.

"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time, I tried a great many medicines which were highly recommended, but none gave me relief. I was at last advised to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by a friend who told me that I must purchase six bottles, and use them according to directions. I yielded to his persuasion, bought the six bottles, and took the contents of three of these bottles without noticing any direct benefit. Before I had finished the fourth bottle, my hands were as

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Considerable Discussion Caused Last Night Over the Proposed new School

The Public School Board met last night in regular session the President S. A. Moore in the chair. Those present were Messrs I. Diamond, W. W. Chown, A. T. Petrie, Hugh Walker, Dr. Tracy, Wm. Johnson, Rev. M. W. McLean, Thos Wills, Wm Kempt, Henery Pringle, W. P. McMahon, Jas. Richards, William Clarke and John Hunter.

A communication was read from Isaac Frost. He stated that his daughter had taught school a number of days for which she had received no pay. He would like the Board to remit.

The Board went into committee of the whole on reports, Mr. Cnown in the chair.

A number of accounts were ordered paid.

Moved by Dr. Tracy seconded by I. Diamond: That the Committe on Sites, Buildings and Repairs do prepare and submit to the Board at the next regular meeting plans, specifications and estimates for a Public School building on the lot owned by the Board on the Station road said school building to be built this summer.

Dr. Tracy said in rising to support his motion re new public school at the station said that the building used now was too small, it had been patched up from year to year and the people were promised a new school. It was high time it was done. It would only cost about $500 to build a six room school there. It would relieve the Central school also by taking a number of children from it. He believed in keeping the public schools in good condition.

Mr. I. Diamond said that it was not a question of doubt but a certainty. Bleecker Ward needed a new school and it had been put off from time to time on account of the financial condition of the city. When the school is being built the Board should not for the consideration of a few dollars build a small building but make it large. He thought the fourth book should be taught in all the ward schools and he hoped some day to see the the fifth book also taught in them.

Thos. Wills said that this talk of small accommodation was again before the Board. It should be taken into consideration that 15 years ago we had a larger population than we have to-day. However it might not be a bad idea to build this school. He did not see, however, that Belleville was going to have such a great boom and that we were to be overcrowded. If the school was going to be built he believed that the rooms should be built large. He liked to see the children have lots of ventilation. The finances of of the city were not in a very satisfactory state. If the school was built the council could be asked for part of the money this year and have the other forthcoming next year. The Board could go to work and have plans submitted by next fall and the work could go on next spring.

Wm. Clark said that it was too long to wait. The little children from the station had a long way to walk and their feelings should be taken into consideration.

Hugh Walker said that the building of a new school in Bleecker Ward has been a tender question for a number of years. He was in favor of a new school being built there as it was a great necessity. He had often visited it and he was ashamed of it. He would like to see the school under way, and the Committee on Sites Buildings and Repairs submit plans at the next meeting.

Mr. Wm. Johnson said whenever he visited different cities in the Province he always took time to visit the different schools. After doing so he was more and more impressed with the fact that we were behind in school accomodation. It was a great attraction for the people to come and live in a city where they knew it had good school accomodation. He would like to see the school built in Bleecker ward. He did not think it was a good idea to ask the council for $3000 or $5000 he had a better scheme. He would like to have a high school and a ward school erected by issuing a debenture extending over 15 or 20 years. the citizens could pay for it without knowing it. Money could be got at a very low rate at present.

A. T. Petrie said that there was no doubt a school was necessary in Bleecker ward. Some of the members of the Board had said it was a disgrace to the city. If they had been here 30 or 40 years ago they would have seen worse schools.

Rev. Mr. McLean was in sympathy with the motion. We would like to see the city advanced. But a greater responsibility rested on the Board. The children and the surroundings of a child had a great deal to do with its upward or downward tendency. The school was injurious to the health of the children The tax payers of Bleecker ward had a right to ask for a school ; they were taxed for it. He would like to see the school built this summer. He would vote for the motion as it reads with the addition of the two words "if possible."

The motion carried.

It was moved by Mr. Johnson succeeded by Mr. W. W. Chown—That the committee on rights, buildings and repairs, be recommended to report not later than the end of this month of April as to the advisibility of erecting a high school building.

Mr. W. W. Chown said he would like to see a high school building erected. He believed Belleville could afford it and he thought it would attract people to our city.

Mr. Wills said that the idea of running down the present high school was an absurdity. The school was all right. The ventilation this year was better than ever before. The school would compare with any as well as the health of the children which he considered was as good as any in the Province.

Hugh Walker said that he did not think that we needed a high school building. He thought the motion of Mr. Johnson should be voted down.

Mr. I Diamond said he had visited other places in this Province. He did not know of any place where the schools were ahead of Belleville. The schools of this city would compare with Toronto. IT WAS NECESSARY, would be necessary in a short time to put in new flooring and at that time the Smead and Dowd system of ventilation could be put in, also modern seats. The whole cost would be about $8000 or $10,000.

Mr. Henry Pringle said he was in favor of a new high school being erected. It was said that this high school or collegiate institute would be antagonistic to other colleges. He could not see it in the same light. This high school was just about half as large as it should be. We were behind towns in this vicinity as to high school accomodation.

Mr. Johnson's motion was lost. The yeas and nays were called which resulted as follows: Yeas—S. A. Moore, Chairman, W W. Chown, Wm. Johnston, S. S. Moore, Rev. M. W. Maclean, Henry Pringle. Nays—Wm. Clarke, I. Diamond, John Hunter, Wm. Kemp, A. T. Petrie Jas. Richards, Hugh Walker, Thos. Wills.

The Board adjourned.

"After years of dyspeptic misery, I can at last eat a good square meal without its distressing me," gratefully exclaimed one whose appetite had been restored by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This remedy wonderfully sharpens the appetite and improves digestion.

A COMPLIMENTARY CONCERT

To Mr. Canfield—A Most Enjoyable Evening and a Large Gathering

The Complimentary Concert to Mr. Homer Canfield (given last even in the B. B. C. auditorium was certainly one of the most enjoyable entertainments on the programme of the season now ending. There was a large gathering present, though not so numerous as the occasion seemed to demand, considering Mr. Canfield's liberal assistance upon all just occasions when requested.

Mr. J. J. B. Flint presided and in a few brief remarks expressive of his and the citizens' appreciation of Mr. Canfield's services, introduced the performers. During the evening Mrs. Fax and Miss Canfield divided the honors of accompanist, earning the appreciation of both performers and audience. By reason of an accident to Mr. Leo Riggs last evening by which he seriously injured his thumb, much to the disappointment of everyone, the orchestra could not be present.

The attraction of the evening was, of course, the singing of Mrs. Caverly-Nash and everyone present was delighted, charmed with her sweet, pure voice. In it the beauty of naturalness is not lost in the grace of culture. The ease and spontainity of her singing attest the capacity of her voice, and, together with her happy, meaning smile give one the comfortable impression that she is singing purely for the pleasure of entertaining you. Besides taking part in two quartettes and a trio she sang two solos and both times was encored. The first song was "The Butterfly" which gave scope for some vocal pyrotechnics, and "Asthore" was given as an encore. The other and even prettier selection was "My All."

Mr. Geo. Fax emerged from the enforced seclusion of a long and severe illness and added very materially to the enjoyment of the evening. He was accorded an enthusiastic and hearty welcome. His solo work was along the humorous line and was really splendid. His magnificent bass voice was in excellent trim and his songs sent the audience into roars of laughter. Both appearances were encored, and once, despite the singer's recent illness, they requested a second addition, but though he responded gracefully to both encores he drew the line between selfishness and hoggishness. He sang also in two quartettes and a trio.

The other stranger who took part was Mr. H. Aylesworth of Trenton, and it is a long time since Belleville heard a baritone voice that so pleased it. The audience were delighted with him. There is an unstudied naturalness in his singing that combined with a magnificent voice no audience is proof against. His very pose expressed an at-oneness with his auditors that cleared the way for the effect of his spirited whole-souled singing. He was both times encored and will certainly be a great favorite whenever he can be got here.

Mr. Frank Eaton sang two solos, "Biondina" and the "The Red Scarf" and as usual thoroughly pleased his hearers. His voice is showing to good purpose the training of Prof. Dingle.

A violin solo by Mr. Lalonde was thoroughly appreciated as was also a cleverly rendered recitation by Miss Brignall and another, "Inkerman," by Dr. Ackerill who was encored.

Mr. Canfield's splendid tenor showed well in "Dreams" with violin obligato and for an encore he and Miss Canfield sang a duet "When the mists have cleared away" that was excellent The other members were, a quartette "May Day" by Mrs. Nash, Miss Canfield, Mr. Eaton and Mr. Fax ; a trio "The Mariners" by Mrs. Nash, Messrs Canfield and Fax ; a quartette, "Good night beloved" by Mrs. Nash, Messrs Canfield and Fax.

ST. GEORGE

AND MERRY ENGLAND — A HEARTY CELEBRATION LAST NIGHT

Patriotic Songs and Speeches—The Mayor Says we Have no Deficit and Will Have the Street Railway and $100,000 Worth of Building This Year.

Last night a large and jovial gathering, the latest of a long line of forerunners celebrated St. George's Day under the auspices of Oxford and Lydford Lodges Sons of England. With the exception of Ald. Nat Faulkiner and a few invited guests the company was English and a right royal good time they had as well becomes the Sons of Merry England and on St. George's Day.

Upwards of a hundred sat down to a very fine repast prepared by Mr. Fleming. President Hulme occupied the chair and the vice chairs were filled by Bro. Harper and Bro. Webb. Among the guests at the head table were Mayor Walmsley, Mr. Thos Ritchie, Mr. Geo. Wallbridge, Dr. Walker, Rev. Mr. Marshall, Ald. Hart and Judge Fralick.

The menu concluded the toast list was proceeded with and "The Queen," "Prince of Wales and Royal Family," "The Governor-General and Lieutenant Governor" were drunk without responses, but Chief Newton improved the occasion by a song. The toast to parliament and the legislature was responded to by Ald. Falkiner and Mr. Lewis Bonmore followed with a song.

The toast to the Grand Lodge was drunk with gusto and Grand Vice President responded with a brief address, touching the work of the Order. Last year the society had received $80 000 which had in part been expended as follows: Sick dues $25,000 ; doctors' fees, $13,000 ; beneficiary $26 000. The Sons of England had been organized because Englishmen were not receiving their share according to population of the offices and emoluments going. The cardinal principal of the Order was loyalty to the British crown and the Old Flag.

The pleasantest event of the evening then took place when Bro. Hopkins was presented by Bro. Wensley with a Past Master's jewel in recognition of his services to Oxford Lodge during the past year. Mr. Geo. Dulmidge sang one of his popular comic songs and was encored.

"Our Order" was next drunk and was responded to by Rev. A. L. Geen. Mr. Burrows sang "The Union Jack" and was encored. Dr. Walker and Mr. D. V. Sinclair replied to the toast to "Sister Societies". Mr. Sinclair struck a responsive chord when he urged the duties of Canadian citizenship as paramount with all who lived in this country. Messrs. Milne and Petty each sang a song. "The land we left and the land we live in" was responded to by Mr. J. J. B. Flint in one of his appreciated orthorical endeavors. The "Mayor and Corporation" was the next toast and was responded to by Mayor Walmsley, Ald. Green, Luscombe and Falkner. His Worship wished to correct two errors. There was no deficit this year. The city had liabilities amounting to $40,000 and uncollected taxes amouning to $43 000. $43,000. He was able to state on the best of information that the street railway would be built within the contract time by the present Company. He stated too that building operations to the extent of $100,000 would be carried on in the city this year. He concluded with a few pleasantries about the aldermen, over half of whom were Englishmen, as were five of the eight chairmen. Ald. Falkiner was as funny as usual. Chief Newton sang "The Maple Leaf."

Dr. Tracy and Ald. Luscombe responded to the toast of the Army and Navy volunteers and Wm. Ayrest sang a song. Judge Fralick, Mr. Thos. Ritchie and Mr. Geo. Wallbridge responded to "The Legal and Merchantile Interests." Mr. J. Davis sang a song. Mr. R. Ketcheson replied to the toast to the ladies and Bro. Sanfield delivered his recitation. The press was toasted and responded to by the representatives present and the gathering dismissed amid the echoes of God save the Queen.

EDITOR ONTARIO—SIR—I see in the issue of your paper of the 15th inst. that one of my medical conferes has taken exception to the evidence given by me to the jury at the recent inquest held at Rossmore. Now, sir, I strongly object to airing professional opinions or entering into professional controversies in the public press ; it appears to me to be more like an advertisement, which is not generally considered gentlemanly in the medical profession. - WALL PAPER -

THE DESIGNS of our spring wall papers are beautiful and the colorings exquisite. The effects they produce upon the wall have been studied with intelligent sympathy, and the "long-felt wants" of a few years ago have been provided for with cultivated taste. A judicious employment of any of our papers leaves little to be done in a room—a few ornaments according to the taste or wealth of the occupant are all that is necessary to contribute to its beauty and comfort. Our papers thoroughly represent the standard of the prevailing taste in interior decorations.

An Eminent Surgeon

Prescribes and Recommends Paine's Celery Compound.

HE DECLARES IT TO BE THE BEST SPRING MEDICINE.

IT BUILDS UP RUN-DOWN MEN AND WOMEN.

The Only Remedy That Makes Pure, Bright and Red Blood.

Cleaning and purifying the blood, and putting the human organism in proper working order, is a work that demands very special attention in the Spring season. Many of the ablest and most experienced physicians are of opinion that Paine's Celery Compound does the best and most thorough work in the way of blood cleansing, nerve strengthening and tissue building. No other medicine can impart to weak and run-down men and women the grand vigorous strength, robustness and general good health that Paine's Celery Compound gives.

Dr. A. W. K. Newton, the eminent physician and surgeon of Boston, says:—

"Paine's Celery Compound is not a patent medicine, and it must not be confounded with the ordinary nervines, bitters and sarsparillas. It is as much superior to them in formula and results as the diamond is superior to glass. It purifies the blood, strengthens the nerves, and is nature's food for the brain.

I had some trouble myself, from blood poisoning, received in a very delicate surgical operation. The formula of Paine's Celery Compound led me to try it, and I was much pleased with the result. I prescribe it for men and women who have no appetite, cannot sleep, and are weak and run-down. For this condition, and for disorders of the blood and nerves, it has no equal.

"When a man or woman has lost appetite, lost sleep, and feels that life is a burden, that person is in a serious condition. I prescribe Paine's Celery Compound for my patients who have these common and dangerous symptoms, with invariably satisfactory results. It is the best possible remedy to keep up one's strength and energy during the spring and summer months."

AVERSE TO PROHIBITION.

Report of the Royal Commission Presented.

A LICENSE LAW HELD TO BE BEST

Saloons Should Be Abolished and Infractions of the Law Endorsed on the License—A Special Federal License Tax Advocated—Treatment of Drunkards.

Ottawa, Ont., April 25.—The report of the Prohibition Commission presented yesterday is a voluminous document, making nearly 1500 type-written pages apart from the printed evidence. The commissioners summarize their work as follows:

The enactment of a prohibitory law for the whole Dominion would, in the opinion of the undersigned, prejudicially affect the business, industrial and commercial interests of the country. The effect of the law on the Federal, Provincial and Municipal revenues from the traffic would be to practically wipe them out. In Quebec the wiping out of so large a sum as $600,000 would prove severely embarrassing. The option conferred under the Scott Act, it can only be remarked, still remains thee law of the country; it is the nearest approach to a general prohibitive system which has been attempted. The act has been repealed in 52 per cent. of the counties and cities which originally adopted it, and no new district has put the act in force since 1886. A prohibitory law was enacted in New Brunswick in 1855, put in force in January, 1856, and repealed the same year. The prohibitory system, with permit provisions, which was in force for several years in the Northwest Territories, was abandoned for a license system in 1892. It may be asked if progress in the states of the United States which have adopted prohibitory laws has been greater than in the various Canadian provinces where the law has been what has just been described. The commissioners refer to the information already given, and in the evidence submitted, for an answer to that question. They believe that it must be answered in the negative by everyone disposed to weigh the facts dispassionately. This comparison deals with prohibition as a system.

The commissioners cannot agree with the view so earnestly put forward by some church organizations, and many witnesses say that the recognition of the traffic by licensing it is an immoral and a national sin. On the other hand, the undersigned are of opinion that the combined system of license and regulation which for centuries has been the rule of civilized nations, with such amendments as experience has proved and shall from time to time prove to be needful, in order to make it more efficient, should not be departed from. The churches, which have adopted the view that the use of liquor as a beverage is morally wrong, have taken steps to give effect to their conclusions as regards their adherents, which is wholly within their legitimate sphere of action. It is almost impossible, after reading the evidence taken by the commissioners, to conclude that much of the agitation on this question of prohibition of the liquor traffic is to be attributed to a desire to see these views adopted generally. The undersigned consider that the aim of any system of regulating or prohibiting the liquor traffic is to lessen or extinguish the evils which arise from intemperance, or from the improper use of intoxicating beverages; and after the most careful and anxious consideration of the subject they have come to the conclusion that this would not be accomplished by the enactment of a law prohibiting the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors throughout the Dominion, and that if such a law were passed it could not be efficiently enforced.

A prohibitory law partakes too much of the character of coercive legislation on a matter in regard to which a very large portion of the people consider they are qualified and entitled to judge for themselves, to be accepted as a measure they are called upon to unhesitatingly obey, and hence the impracticability of efficient enforcement.

With the powers possessed by the various provinces to legislate in respect to the traffic, the certainty is that in some of them prohibition would meet with determined opposition. With an open frontier, such as the Dominion possesses, largely bordering on states in which the sale would be carried on, the undersigned consider that it is illusory to anticipate that a general prohibitory law could be enforced with any reasonable degree of efficiency.

The question of making compensation to those engaged in the manufacture and those engaged in the wholesale and retail vending of liquors, one or both classes, should the traffic be put an end to by legislation, has been frequently referred to, and much evidence has been taken on the subject. The undersigned commissioners, regarding the evidence given, and what has been proposed in other countries, as, for instance, England, France, Germany and some of the British colonies, consider that the payment of compensation could not justly be avoided in the case of those who, by such legislation, would have their business, which they have been carrying on under the sanction of the state, abruptly put an end to, and their capital, in many cases, almost swept away, and in all considerably diminished.

A complete register of all manufacturers, dealers in, or vendors of liquor, of every description throughout the Dominion, classified in cities, towns and districts, is much to be desired. At present it is almost impossible even to obtain a correct statement of the numbers of persons licensed.

This commission, after an expenditure of much time and labor, have not been successful in getting an accurate return of the number of licenses issued in some of the provinces. In the United States no one is permitted to manufacture or deal in intoxicants without first obtaining a special permit, or taxpaper, from the Internal Revenue Department of the Federal Government, under pain of heavy penalties, ranging from $1000 up to $5000.

This special tax or license does not authorize the holder to manufacture or sell contrary to any state or municipal law, but until he has paid the Federal tax and provided himself with a proper certificate he cannot trade without rendering himself liable to the penalties imposed by the Federal law.

Everywhere in the United States there is greater care and anxiety shown to comply with the Federal than with the State or municipal laws and regulations. The special taxpapers are issued by the District Collectors of Revenue, who are charged with the collection of the fees and the enforcement of the law. The undersigned are satisfied that beneficial results would follow the adoption of a similar system in the Dominion. A complete record could be kept of those licensed in every part of the country. The relation, if any, of the number of licensed places to the number and character of crimes and offences committed in each district could be readily traced. The officers of the Dominion Government, charged with the collection of the special tax, would be able to render efficient aid to the provincial and municipal officers in preventing the illicit sale of intoxicants.

The treatment of habitual drunkards is a subject, the commissioners consider, requiring the most anxious and careful attention. No merely financial considerations should, in their opinion, prevent the best remedial measures being adopted to reclaim the victims of intemperance. That the methods at present in vogue are not only inefficient, but as a general rule demoralizing, is the almost unanimous opinion of those who have to administer the law and of all who have to do with the police courts and jails of the country in so far as this commission has been able to elicit their views.

The investigations of the commissioners have satisfied them that convictions for second or subsequent offences, as such, against the license laws by the holders of licenses, amount in many places to only a small proportion of the cases which occur and hence what the law contemplated, viz., heavier penalties for repeated offences are not inflicted as they should be. This, in part, arises from the difficulty of proving previous convictions. To remedy this the license certificates should be of a moderately permanent character, and such as could be produced in court, in any case of complaint, the annual renewals being represented by a separate certificate or receipt; that in every case of complaint the defendant should be called upon to produce his license, and every conviction should be endorsed thereon. No transferable license should be permitted whilst any case is pending against the holder.

The licensing of saloons, the only business of which is the sale by retail of intoxicants, the commissioners consider, should be put an end to. There is no justification for their existence founded upon necessity, and it is certain that most of the evils which arise out of the immoderate use of intoxicants have their origin in or are encouraged by the existence of these saloons.

The commissioners are of opinion that no one should be granted a license for any saloon or restaurant in which meals are not regularly supplied to all who may require them, and that the law should not be evaded by such practices as are now resorted to; that the authority to sell should be restricted in these places to selling only to those who partake of and pay for meals. They are also of opinion that no one should be given a license for an inn or tavern which has not the necessary accommodation in the shape of rooms and beds and facilities for supplying meals to a reasonable number of persons at one and the same time.

The licensing of the compounding or mixing of various kinds of liquors so as to produce new brands, the undersigned believe, could with advantage be discontinued. There is undoubtedly much adulteration of liquor carried on, and the commissioners would recommend that inspection be made more general and more frequent, especially amongst the retail establishments.

Where the right to oppose the granting of licenses exists, the undersigned consider the residents should have the right—under proper conditions as to notice to the licensees—and be afforded every reasonable facility to oppose for cause the granting of renewals.

The commissioners are of the opinion that the number of shop licenses should be very materially reduced, and that the sale of intoxicants should in every case be wholly separated from the sale of groceries or other domestic supplies.

The undersigned believe that it would be of great advantage to have such amendments of the license laws enacted as would provide that in case of a second conviction of a breach of any of the provisions thereof, if the licensee be a tenant, the lease shall become void if the lessor so desires, and that in case of a third or subsequent conviction the license itself shall be forfeited, and the same premises shall not be licensed for a term of years.

The undersigned believe that the imposition of high license fees, a more strict supervision of the places licensed, a thorough inspection of liquors, and an efficient enforcement of the law, would materially improve the character of the establishments where the liquor is sold, and put an end to many of the evils, which now result from the traffic.

A law which punishes the citizen who vends liquors contrary to its provisions, yet permits the citizen who purchases what is sold illegally to escape punishment, cannot be considered other than an unequal and one-sided law. The undersigned are of opinion that both parties to what is an illegal transaction should be made equally guilty in the eye of the law.

In conclusion, the commissioners express their thanks to Mr. John Courtney, Mr. John Lowe, Mr. E. Miall, Mr. W. G. Parmelee, Frederick White, the librarian of parliament, Mr. Griffin, and in an especial degree to Mr. George Johnston, the Dominion statistician, from whom they have received most valuable assistance in pursuing their investigations.

The Rev. Dr. McLeod, dissenting from the conclusions of other members of the commission, presents a separate report. The whole is respectfully submitted, (signed) J. H. Hickson, chairman; Herbert S. McDonald, E. F. Clarke, G. A. Gigault.

I dissent from the suggestion that liquor dealers should be required to obtain certificates from the Federal Government.

I also dissent from the paragraph referring to the work of the Salvation Army; I am not satisfied that the temperance movement has been benefited by the work of that organization. (Signed) G. A. Gigault.

GRAVEYARD INSURANCE.

An Alleged Case in the County of Grey.

POLICIES OF $9000 INVOLVED

Insurance Companies Will Contest the Claims on the Ground That the Insurance Was Obtained by Fraud, the Insured Being Then at Death's Door.

Toronto, April 25.—Detective John Murray has just returned from the County of Bruce, where he has been engaged for the past ten days in investigating a case of alleged graveyard insurance, in which two city companies, the Excelsior Life Insurance Company, and the Mutual Reserve Fund Life Association are interested.

In January, 1894, William Humphrey, formerly of Addington, where his wife and daughter still reside, went to live with his uncle, Dr. John Evans, at Elmwood. Humphrey, it is alleged, had been suffering from diabetes, heart-failure and inflammatory rheumatism for some years.

On April 9, following, a policy for $5000 was taken by Humphrey in the Excelsior Company, Evans, who paid Dr. Evans, being the beneficiary. The medical certificate testifying to the fact that Humphrey was a good risk was signed by Dr. Scott, Southampton. A short time subsequently a second policy for $300 was taken out in the Mutual Reserve Company, the wife of Dr. Evans being the beneficiary. Dr. Evans signed the medical certificate as to the character of the risk. About the same Humphrey joined the Chosen Friends, and a policy of $1500 was placed on his life, William Evans, a brother of Dr. Evans being the beneficiary. This made $9000 in all on Humphrey's life.

On Feb. 27 last Humphrey died, and was buried on March 1. Claims were at once filed with the insurance companies for the amount of the policies. The companies became suspicious that it was a case of graveyard insurance, and communicated with the Attorney-General's Department with the result that Chief Murray was sent up to investigate the facts. After a few days inquiry in the neighborhood, he learned sufficient to warrant him in the conclusion that the insurance had been placed by Dr. Evans upon his uncle's life, as a speculation, knowing that Humphrey was afflicted with maladies which were incurable.

On Saturday last Detective Murray had the body, which was buried in a cemetery in Bentinck, in the County of Grey, exhumed. A post-mortem examination was conducted by Drs. John Caven and John Ferguson of this city, J. H. McCullough of Owen Sound; Stewart, Gimby and Bonner of Chesley and Taylor of Hanover. The result was to establish beyond doubt that Humphrey had been a sufferer for years from many ailments, including dropsy, inflammatory rheumatism, diabetes, and heart trouble.

As a result of Detective Murray's investigations, the companies interested have refused to pay the policies, and interesting developments, which may ultimately terminate in the arrest of one or more of the parties, are likely to follow. The Attorney-General's department has resolved, in view of the many insurance frauds which have developed in the country during the past year, to put a stop to this system of swindling, and the present case will be followed out to the bitter end.

The officer, in the course of his enquiries, found quite a number of witnesses, not the least important of whom is Nelson Ball, the former assistant in Dr. Evan's drug store, who will testify to the fact that Humphrey was known to be on the verge of the grave when the several policies were placed on his life.

FRENCH SHORE QUESTION.

Le Temps Agrees That It Must Be Settled Before Confederation.

Paris, April 24.—The Temps commends the speech made by Hon. Wilfrid Laurier, the Opposition leader in the Canadian Parliament last Friday, regarding the French shore of Newfoundland and the necessity of Great Britain's settling the questions at issue with France. It quotes Finance Minister Foster's statement that an understanding between Newfoundland and England on a basis acceptable to France was likely and adds: "We hope Mr. Foster's expectations will be realized, but it will be necessary to French diplomacy to examine closely the details of the understanding. In any event it must be understood that the questions must be solved before Newfoundland enters Canada."

OUR SCHOOL BOARD

We doubt if in any other School Board in this Province there can be found enough crystalized foggyism, a strong enough aggregation of mental mummies, to countenance the statement that because the city's educational facilities sufficed twenty years ago, none other are needed now.

A man with a family who is looking for a place of residence will look with greater heed to a city's educational advantages than to any other qualification, and yet our intelligent School Board will not even consider the question as to whether or not the city requires a new High School. In the first place there is scarcely a town of half the size of Belleville that has not got a Collegiate Institute and Belleville in having only a High School is just that much behind the times. It is foolishness almost to discuss the adequacy of the present building to its present requirements. To come to this conclusion anyone who has ever seen a modern school need go no further than to get a look at it from the outside and then be told that in that building, 800 children hive day after day for ten months in the year.

We are not asking for a new High School, we are not asking that the city have a Collegiate Institute as it should, but we do say that the citizens owe to themselves and their children the duty in taking active steps to secure an intelligent and progressive Board of Education, not made up of spend-thrifts and wasters of the public monies, but made up of men who are at least capable of an intelligent appreciation of present educational tendencies and of the importance of educational methods and facilities.

The first step towards this end is to secure the election of the trustees by ballot and on the same day as the municipal elections take place.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The "Intell" will be saying next that there's no deficit this year.

Mr. Foster has not this session referred to his favorite theme of old time, Sir Richard Cartwright's deficits.

The Intell should ruminate upon the fact that Mr. Foster's deficit this year is greater than the aggregate of Sir Richards deficits.

When we consider that the majority of our School Board are quite satisfied with the present High School and its facilities and that it has not ten square feet even of a play ground we can imagine how shocked these worthy antiquarians would be at reading the following paragraph taken from an editorial article that appeared lately in Harper's Weekly dealing with college athletics under the head "Common Sense in Athletics. "All healthy man of sound mind and body believe in physical exercise. Most men who are not weak in muscle or nerves realize the great importance of the moral and mental, as well as the bodily development which results in participation. No man who understands the game of foot ball doubts that, if properly played, it is a great educational force and that the man who is fit for the team is a cool-headed, clear thinking and courageous person who under the right conditions will play his part well in life after he is beyond the halls of his cherishing mother.

The Hamilton tailors wants to curtail the business of drummers who take orders for clothing to be made by tailoring houses in some other city. The Times and Spectator are discussing the proposition and they lubricate their argument with a little tariff policy oil. The Times refers to the hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of clothing made in Hamilton and sold throughout the Dominion and the Spec. replies:

The hundreds of thousands of dollars worth of clothing made in Hamilton and sold in all parts of Canada, is sold by regular merchants, who have regular places of business, and each one of them pays tax s to the municipality in which he does business. There is a very great difference between these and the drummers who come here and take orders without paying one cent in the way of taxes

Of course it never struck the Spec. that these drummers represented anything more than a street corner or a back lane, or at most a good sized packing case.

AN OCULIST'S RUSE.

His Clever Mode of Exposing a Fraudulent Claim.

Here is an interesting account of a very clever bit of detective work by an oculist, says Leonard's Illustrated Medical Journal. It appears in a large factory, in which were employed several hundred persons, one of the workmen, in wielding his hammer, carelessly allowed it to slip from his hand. It flew half way across the room and struck a fellow workingham in the left eye. The man averred that his sight was blinded by the blow, although a careful examination failed to reveal any inquiry, there being not a scratch visible. He brought a suit in the courts for compensation for the loss of half of his eyesight, and refused all offers of compromise.

Under the law, according to the Sheffield (England) Telegraph, the owner of the late factory was responsible for an injury resulting from an accident of this kind, and although he believed that the man was shamming and that the whole case was an attempt at swindling, he had about made up his mind that he would be compelled to pay the claim. The day of the trial arrived, and in open court an eminent oculist, retained for the defense, examined the alleged injured member and gave it as his opinion that it was as good as the right eye. Upon the plaintiff's loud protest of his inability to see with the left eye, the oculist proved him a perjurer and satisfied the court and jury of the falsity of his claim.

And how do you suppose he did it—? Why, simply by knowing that the colors green and red combined made black. He procured a black card on which a few words were written with green ink. Then the plaintiff was ordered to put on a pair of spectacles with two different glasses, the one for the right eye being red and the one for the left eye consisting of ordinary glass. Then the card was handed him and he was ordered to read the writing on it. This he did without hesitation, and the cheat was at once exposed. The sound right eye, fitted with red glass, was unable to distinguish the green writing on the black surface of the card while the left eye, which he pretended was sightless, was the one with which the reading had to be done.

A MYSTERY.

The Curiosity That Has Puzzled Generations of Georgia Crackers.

Another strange feature of the neighborhood, for ten or fifteen miles' distance, extending northeastward, is the regular recurrence of crescent-shaped embankments, their convex sides invariably lying towards the northeast, and the inside of the semi-circle partly enclosing three mounds, a larger one nearest the embankment, and the smaller ones at short distances, standing in a direct line from northeast to southwest. These strange formations recur about every three-fourths of a mile, the embankments being from one-half to three-quarters of a mile in length. What was their purpose may forever remain a mystery. Perhaps they were the approaches to some great temple of worship erected in the main town on the river; and the fact that it was a sanctuary and regarded as holy ground by the builders may account for the superstitious awe with which the Indians avoided the nameless town.

Some five miles above the old town is a natural curiosity that has puzzled generations of Georgia "crackers." At that point the Ocklacoochee river is about 2000 yards in width, flowing over a bed of quicksand. At the end of a long reach of swamp and at the edge of a steep bluff, a part of the river is about fifty yards wide leaves the main current, and, flowing directly eastward, at right angles to the course of the stream, plunges into a cavern in the face of a hill at least 100 feet high. Attempts have been made at various times to explore this cave. One venturesome explorer penetrated a distance of 300 yards, passing through a serious of spacious chambers connected by narrow galleries along which the water dashed. The course of this underground stream is marked by a succession of "sinks" for a mile or more. A few miles below, on the opposite side of the river, a limestone spring bursts forth. Its waters ordinarily are as clear as crystal, but during an unusual freshet they are discolored as though connected with some surface source. As this spring is on a direct line with the underground stream, the popular belief is that the river divides at the cave, part of its waters flowing below the main channel and emerging again at the spring.—Rome, Ga., cor. New York Evening Post.

Too Much of Everything.

It is Prof. Nordau who says this old world is brain weary. It is tired out, and, like the individual human being, it has hysteria, and is suffering all the anguish of nerve exhaustion, with its attendant depression of spirits. The tension of civilization is breaking down the heart and nervous system. Men fall by the way, and almost before they have crossed the threshold of middle life exhibit a decay that should only come at the appointed three score and ten. Shock follows shock in this modern life, and there is no escaping them. It is as though a child had set some complicated machinery in motion and was incapable of stopping it. Prof. Nordau does not say it, but the secret of this fatigue of civilized humanity lies in having to much of everything; too much of pleasure, too much of maddening work, too much of emotion, which the moderns now cultivate as if it were another form of genius—and a gift from Heaven. And there is also too much wealth, too much poverty. If these crimes of civilization could be abolished man wouldn't be so fatigued!—New York Commercial Advertiser.

An Art Center.

She sniffed the atmosphere scornfully, did this fair Chicago maiden.

"Huh," she ejaculated, "huh."

"What is it?" inquired the man.

"They say Paris is the greatest art center in the world," she responded with infinite disdain and doubt.

"And isn't it?"

"Well, not hardly, I guess. The authorities there have just condemned four brands of American lard as impure."

RIDING FOR HEALTH.

Dr. Hammond Gives Some Good Rules for Wheelmen to Follow.

Bicycling has become a national pastime, and in view of the immense influence for good or harm which it may exert according to its use or abuse, Dr. Graeme M. Hammond's recently published paper on the influence of the bicycle in health and disease is of real service and value to the public. Dr. Hammond set out to learn whether the bicycle did harm or good, first in the case of healthy persons, and secondly in the case of those diseased. He found it was good for both under certain conditions. Each individual must formulate rules for his own guidance, and if he cannot, he should consult his medical adviser, who, by studying his physique, heart measurement and lung capacity, can judge with accuracy the amount of exercise which is most conducive to healthy physical development. Dr. Hammond investigated the cases of fourteen amateurs who had ridden the bicycle from 8,000 to 27,000 miles each in from five to thirteen years. Their ages ranged from twenty-four to forty-five. In every case he found the heart healthy and the muscular system well developed. It is often claimed by those who do not know that bicycle exercise develops the muscles of the leg at the expense of the rest of the body. This is not so. On the contrary, the muscles of the back, chest, arms and abdomen are employed a great deal, not to the same extent as the muscles of the legs, but sufficiently to establish bicycle riding as an exercise inducing general development of the muscular system. Next as to the peculiar malformation of the spine which the use of the bicycle is said to induce. To get at the truth of this vexed question, Dr. Hammond examined carefully fourteen professional riders who had ridden further and faster than almost anyone else—all men celebrated in the racing world. There was excessive development of the muscles of the thighs and abdomen, but no deformity of the spinal column. Excessive work on the wheel, is, for the average man, extremely injurious. Riding great distances at rapid speed is an abuse of the wheel. In the excitement of "century runs" riders are apt to exceed their strength, and even for shorter distances they may ride at such speed as to return home thoroughly exhausted. Persons suffering from cardiac and pulmonary affections should not ride a wheel unless advised to do so by a physician. Where exercise is advisable in heart affections, there is no better way of obtaining it than by the wheel. The bicycle, used moderately, is an admirable cure for "nerves," and its value in gout and diabetes has been demonstrated.

COLOSSAL FORTUNES.

Those in America Compared With Those of England Show Some Contrasts.

By a calculation made a short time ago by an American statistician, it appears that seventy citizens of the United States possess among them an aggregate wealth of £450,600,000. That gives an average of about £7,500,000 for each person. To come to particulars: There was one estate—we refrain here from mentioning names—returned as being worth no less than £30,000,000. There were five individuals valued at £20,000,000; one valued at £14,000,000; two valued at £12,000,000; six valued at £10,000,000; six valued at £8,000,000; four valued at £7,000,000, and fifteen valued at £4,000,000. The brain reels before such figures. They express measures of wealth which the ordinary mortal is powerless to grasp. Besides these seventy colossal fortunes, there are fifty other persons in the Northern States alone valued at over £2,000,000 each thirty of them being valued in all at £90,000,000. There were some time ago published lists of sixty-three millionaries in Pennsylvania, possessing in the aggregate £60,000,000, and of sixty persons in thre villages near New York whose wealth aggregated £1,000,000. In Boston fifty families pay taxes on annual incomes of about £200,000 each. We have nothing to compare with such individual cases of wealth in Great Britain. Baron Rothschild and Lord Overstone each left about £3,500,000; the late Lord Dudley left £4,000,000; the late Duke of Buccleugh, estimated to be the richest Scotchman, left estates valued at £6,000,000. One living English duke is valued at £10,000,000 and another at £8,000,000, but not many names could be added to these to place against the above list of American fortunes. In 1884 there were only 104 persons in the United Kingdom whose incomes from business profits were returned as over £50,000 a year. In 1886 there were only seventeen estates which paid, probate duty on about £250,000 each. A comparison of these English figures with those of American makes an interesting study in contrasts in international progress.

A ROUGH SHAVE.

The Natives of Jamaica Use Broken Bottles for Razors.

The natives of Jamaica have no need to buy soap, for the woods abound with plants whose leaves and buds supply very well the place of that indispensable article. Among these is the soap tree, so called, though it is more a bush than a tree. Its bulb, when rubbed on wet clothes, makes a beautiful lather, which smells much like common brown soap. The Jamaica negroes, some of them who are great dandies in their way, make a soap out of a cocoanut oil and home-made lye; and a fine soap it is, smooth and fragrant. This cocoanut oil soap is used for shaving. When a man wishes to shave he starts out with cocoanut shell cup and his donkey tail brush and bottle. It is never any trouble to find an empty bottle in Jamaica, even in the mountains. At least twenty generations of thirsty people have lived there, and thrown away the empty bottles. The man carries no mirror, because he has none to carry. Not one negro cabin in a dozen has a cheap looking-glass. But nature supplies the mirror as well as the soap. The man goes to a convenient pool in the mountain stream, where the water is still, and there is his mirror. He breaks his bottle on a stone and picks out a good sharp piece. Then he lathers his face profusely and begins to scrape away with his piece of glass, which works almost as well as a sharp razor.

The men rarely cut themselves in this operation. "At first," says a writer, "I trembled for them, but afterwards I tried the method for myself, and soon became almost an expert at it."

Costly Cigars.

"I see going the rounds of the press an item about the Prince of Wales' cigars," said the old tobacconist, who for a full generation has dispensed nicotine to the patrons of an uptown hotel. "According to this story they are made of the finest four-year stock by the most expert cigarmaker in Cuba, and after being wrapped in gold leaf and oil paper, stamped with the Prince's crest and packed in mahogany boxes; they cost H. R. H. just $1 50 apiece. That's a pretty good cigar story, but American lovers of the weed can discount it. There is a prominent importing firm of New York now having made a lot of the very finest Havana cigars, which will cost, when the duty is paid on them, just $4 35 apiece. They are intended as presents in packages of ten to the firm's principal patrons, who will then be able to boast of smoking the costliest cigars ever made. The highest-priced cigars I ever sold in Washington were $1 apiece, and they cost me $800 a thousand. Most of them were sold singly, but the last box of fifty was taken by a man who intended them as a present to a friend in the Treasury Department who had done him some especial service.

"That was during the war, when some cigars sold six for $5 that you could almost duplicate for 5 cents. What effect the present trouble in Cuba will have on the price of imported cigars remains to be seen, but many smokers would like to see the island annexed to the United States simply for the tobacco. Talking about steady smokers, I have a customer who for fourteen years has bought the same brand of cigars from me, and in that time he has paid me over $4,000."—Washington Post.

"Doctorein" or "Physicienne."

In Glasgow a discussion has arisen, provoked by some sticklers for exactness of expression, over the proper way in which to designate women who have secured a medical degree. Doctor and physician, it is claimed by these learned men of Glasgow, are both masculine, and they are begging those in authority "not to add another anomaly to our already most irregular language." Some of the suggestions for relief are "doctorein," "physicienne," "doctorine," "doctorina," and, in the case of married medical women, "doctors."

Treed by Snakes.

A snake story, which is the first and best of the season, comes from Clarke County. A farmer was digging fence post holes last week, and while at work ran across a nest of twenty young snakes. Five were rattlers, ten were moccasins, two were king snakes and three were chicken snakes. They all attacked him, and he was forced to climb a tree to save himself.—Atlanta Constitution.

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or Irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

ACME OF POLITICAL INFAMY

Mr. Charlton on the Dominion Franchise Act.

REVISIONS HAVE COST $900,000

Mr. Charlton Moves to Repeal the Measure and Substitute the Provincial Lists—Col O'Brien Sizes Up Costigan—Contractors and Campaign Contributions.

Ottawa, April 25.—Two bills of more than ordinary importance, in view of the approaching Federal elections, were introduced in the House yesterday.

Mr. Charlton brought in a measure that went by the board last session because of pressure of other business, to abolish the iniquitous Franchise Act and substitute in its place the provincial voters' lists.

Mr. Edgar moved the first reading of a bill to amend the act to prevent frauds on the Government, the purpose of which is to extend the operation of the clause prohibiting contractors for public works contributing to election funds, to directors, shareholders and officers of railway corporations receiving Government aid.

Col. O'Brien, after introducing two bills that stood on the paper in the name of Mr. McCarthy, who was absent, took the opportunity to retaliate upon Hon. John Costigan for his vicious attack upon the Third party leader. The Colonel said that the Minister of Marine and Fisheries was a placeman, who fattened upon keeping alive creed distinctions and who held office in the Government without the qualification of a third-class clerk.

Mr. Charlton, in introducing his bill, outlined the history of the present Franchise Act, from its introduction on March 19, 1885, recounting the memorable incidents of its discussion and the fights that were made against it before it was finally adopted, on July 20 of that year. He said that it might have been supposed that, after an experience of 18 years with the provincial franchise laws, the Government would scarcely have ventured to make a change without some evidence that the plan of using the provincial lists had not met with the popular favor, or was objectionable in some respects. The Government ought to have been aware that the introduction of the new system would be likely to produce bad results.

He held that the exercise of the powers embodied in the Franchise Act on the part of the Dominion Government was a violation of the constitutional principle that gave to the provinces control over civil rights. It was a right that should be controlled by the people who owned it, and not a right to be exercised by the Government that sought to control the people. The cost of the Dominion Franchise Act is so enormous that the Government had not the courage to put it annually into operation. Since it was passed in 1885 there had only been three revisions, those in 1886, 1889 and 1891, and these had cost the country $900,000. Why, after providing for wholesale fraud and outrage by their creatures, should the Government have provided for unlimited stuffing of the lists if they so desired in the Government Printing Bureau? It was a political job, Mr. Charlton declared, the triumph of political infamy with its sister, the gerrymander.

When Mr. Foster and Mr. Laurier had spoken briefly the bill was read a first time.

Mr. Edgar, in explaining his bill, said that in 1891 Sir John Thompson had introduced the Act which this bill proposed to amend to prevent frauds upon the Government, and while the Act was being considered by the House the Hon. Leader of the Opposition had suggested to Sir John Thompson a clause making stringent provisions against contractors for public works contributing to election funds either directly or indirectly, and that principle had been introduced to the House in the form of resolutions several times by members on this side of the House, but had always been voted down.

Sir John Thompson, after taking time to consider it, had, and it was to his credit, accepted it and introduced it into the bill. In that respect he had been in advance of his party. That measure, which Mr. Edgar said he proposed by his bill to make more useful to the public, should, he thought, be made known throughout the country. It provides severe penalties of fine and imprisonment and forfeiture of contracts for any contractor for a Dominion public work contributing to any election fund. It might be said, added Mr. Edgar, significantly, that it would be difficult to enforce this act, but he did not see that it would be very difficult. For if there were grounds for supposing that any contractor had been contributing to elections, he would suppose that it would not be left to the slow procedure of the election courts to act, but that the Government would take the means of a parliamentary enquiry to punish the infraction of the law. His bill proposed to extend the act so as to include directors, officers and contractors for railway corporations who are in receipt of subsidies, bonuses or advances from the Government, and he thought the amendment would meet with the support of the House. (Applause.)

The bill was given its first reading.

The first of the bills introduced by Col. O'Brien for Mr. McCarthy is to amend the Dominion Elections Act, so as to make railway companies who carry voters to the polls free of charge guilty of corrupt practices, and to incorporate in the Federal law the provision of the Ontario Act for summary process in case of impersonation.

The other was the ill-fated measure, which has been before the House half a dozen times, to give the Northwest Council control over education and the power to abolish the use of French as an official language.

Mr. George Johnston's Tory campaign publication called the Statistical Year Book was the subject of a brief discussion across the floor. Mr. Casey introduced it with the complaint that the supply was so extremely limited that members of the House could only get one copy of the book.

Dr. Montague accepted the complaint as a great compliment to the publication. The Opposition members could not get too much of it. He promised that a more generous supply would be provided in future, and he expressed the hope that Mr. Casey and others would distribute them amongst their constituents.

Mr. McMullen remarked that the Government strained at the gnat and swallowed the camel. It displayed great economy in publishing The Year Book, but it had been lavishly extravagant in other directions.

Sir Richard Cartwright took a hand in at this point and said that The Year Book was as worthless a record as he had ever seen outside of a campaign sheet issued by the Government. He had not considered it worth looking at for a couple of years. The last time he had looked at it he found it entirely incorrect and misleading. He was sorry for the credit of the country that such a publication was issued from the Government press.

Mr. Laurier asked the leader of the House whether he proposed to give the usual Ministerial explanation in regard to the formation of the Cabinet and the changes that had occurred.

Mr. Foster: I will be happy to give it at any time. I supposed that the honorable gentleman was so chuck full of information that he would not require it, but any time that is convenient for the honorable gentleman to-morrow.

Mr. Davies: And the late trouble in the Cabinet in respect to the Minister of Justice might be included.

Mr. Foster: Everything.

Mr. McMullen: The honorable gentleman admits that what has been published in the press is correct when he says that my honorable friend is chock full of information.

Mr. Foster: Oh, you're too logical!

Hon. D. C. Fraser and Hon. C. F. McIsaac arrived at the Capital to-day fresh from their victory in Antigonish and they were accorded a hearty welcome by the Liberal members. Mr. McIsaac will not take his seat until the Speaker receives the certificate of his election. Mr. Fraser was given an ovation by the Opposition members as he entered the House, in recognition of the service he rendered the country and his party in Antigonish.

The debate on the address was continued in the Senate this afternoon by Senator Power, who began by congratulating Sir Mackenzie Bowell upon his elevation to the Premiership, and upon the honors conferred upon him by the Queen. No one, he said, deserved the honors more that the Premier, who was as consistent as a Conservative could be. If Sir Mackenzie was only as fair and economical in his conduct of the affairs of the country as he had shown himself in the Senate, he thought the country would be as well governed as possible under a Tory administration. He also congratulated Senator Ferguson upon his elevation to the Cabinet. After referring eloquently to Sir John Thompson's death, he characterized the French treaty as one wholly opposed to the principles of protection. It appeared to him that the foreign policy of the administration was opposed to its fiscal policy. Taking up the Manitoba school question, he supported the course pursued by the administration, and said that in passing the Remedial Order the Government was merely doing its duty as a sheriff in serving a writ. The judgment of the Imperial Privy Council left no alternative. The Government had done its duty in this matter, but its many other sins had resulted in its meeting defeat in Antigonish. He denied the assertion of the Premier, that if a Conservative Government had been in power in Manitoba the acts of 1890 would not have been passed, and referred to the last local elections to prove his contention. He hoped the Manitoba Government would settle this vexed question itself, and assured the Government that if the province proved refractory and unwilling to accept a compromise, giving the minority their rights, and so making Federal interference necessary, no more opposition would be placed in the way of the Government's further action by the Liberal party in Parliament than was offered in the Jesuit estates matter.

He advised caution in taking Newfoundland into Confederation. It was possible to pay too high a price for the island. England was only too glad to get rid of the island, and sooner or later it would become a part of Canada anyway.

Senator McDonald of British Columbia dwelt upon the trade question, showing that there was no analogy between the position of Canada and that of England upon the question of free trade. He commended the action of the Government on the school question.

Senator Kaulbach approved of the action of the Government on the school question, and strongly urged the admission of Newfoundland into Confederation. He had the floor when the Senate adjourned.

The High Commissioner has informed the Government that the Imperial authorities have introduced a bill for the purpose of removing any doubts as to the power of the Canadian Senate to appoint a deputy speaker. The bill passed by the Senate last session was reserved for the opinion of the law officers of the Crown, who have since decided that the measure was intra vires of the Canadian Parliament. They stated, however, that as doubts had been expressed by some Canadian Senators, it might be well to have a bill passed by the Imperial Parliament to remove all question of legality if Canada so desired. The Dominion Government thereupon asked for the passage of an Imperial measure, which is now going through the British Parliament.

Notes.

Mr. Henderson, M.P., and Senator McKindsey had an interview with Mr. Ouimet to-day with reference to repairs to and extension of the east peer at Oakville, and also for dredging the harbor. The resident engineer will be instructed to at once report to the department with regard to the condition of the harbor with a view to having requisite dredging completed for opening of navigation.

William Smith, South Ontario, gives notice of a resolution in favor of appointment of one or more competent British veterinary surgeons to examine and report upon the health of Canadian cattle herds with a view to demonstrating their freedom from disease.

Mr. Casey gives notice of a bill to provide greater security for railway passengers and employes, also to provide increased facilities for drainage across lines of railway.

Mr. McIsaac, the member-elect for Antigonish, arrived to-day, but could not take his seat, as the returns have not yet reached the Speaker. Mr. Geoffrion, member-elect for Vercheres, is also here.

The Ultimatum to Nicaragua Expires To-Day

Washington, D.C., April 24.—Secretary Gresham had a long interview with Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British Ambassador, this morning, and also saw Minister Guzman of Nicaragua, who communicated to him the intelligence he had from his Government.

The three days given to Nicaragua in which to comply with the terms of Great Britain's ultimatum will expire to-morrow. Failure to pay the indemnity will be followed by the seizure of the custom house at Corinto in the collection of the duty by British subjects.

Britain Means Business.

London, April 24.—At the Foreign Office it is officially stated the three war ships in the harbor of Corinto, Nicaragua, are there for the purpose of enforcing compliance with the demands of Great Britain, set forth in the British ultimatum.

The Admiral's Declaration.

Managua, Nicaragua, April 24.—The British Admiral has notified President Zelaya that three days will be given to Nicaragua in which to comply with the terms of Great Britain's ultimatum. This period will expire to-morrow. Failure to pay the indemnity will be followed by the seizure of the Custom House at Corinto and the collection of the duty by British subjects, presumably officers of the fleet detailed for that purpose. The note of the British admiral contains a declaration that force will be used to collect the money if opposition is made.

Great excitement exists. The Government, it is reported, will refuse to pay the indemnity, and will abandon Corinto as a port of entry. The belief is general here that if Great Britain takes possession of Corinto she will continue to occupy it as she has occupied territory in Egypt and other countries where has obtained a foothold.

COAXING CANADA.

How Nice It Would Be If This Country Joined the U.S.!

Albany, N.Y., April 25.—In the Assembly to-day Mr. O'Grady offered the following resolution: "Whereas, we believe that the political union of the two great English-speaking communities which now control North America will deliver the continent from danger of war and securely dedicate to peaceful industries and progress, lessen the per capita cost of government and defence, ensure the rapid developments of its boundless natural resources, enlarge its domestic and foreign commerce, unite all interests in creating a systematic development of its means of internal communication with the seaboard by rail and water east and west, protect and preserve its wealth, resources, privileges and opportunities as the undisputed heritage of all, immensely add to its influence, prestige and power, promote, extend and perpetuate government by the people and remove forever the causes most likely to seriously disturb cordial relations and kindly intercourse with the Motherland;

"Therefore, be it resolved, if the Senate concur, that we invite the Canadian people to cast in their lot with their own continent, and assure them that they shall have all the continent can give them. We will respect their freedom of action, and welcome them when they desire, into an equal and honorable union."

The introducer stated that the resolution was backed by some of the most prominent men in the country. Among them were Charles A. Dana, the late Gen. Slocum, J. A. O'Donague and Gen. Horace Porter. In view of the prominence given the Monroe doctrine recently the resolution was very appropriate. The resolution was adopted.

WILDE'S TRIAL ON FRIDAY.

The Application for a Postponement Is Denied.

London, April 24.—Counsel for Oscar Wilde made application in the old Bailey Court for a postponement of his client's trial. Taylor's counsel, however, was desirous of proceeding, and the prosecuting lawyer argued in opposition to postponement, saying Wilde had had ample opportunity to prepare for trial. The court refused to grant a postponement and fixed Friday as the day for trial.

The sale of Oscar Wilde's effects by auction upon the order of the sheriff is regarded as indicating that his pecuniary means are exhausted.

Permanently Cured by Taking

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

A CAB-DRIVER'S STORY.

"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time, I tried a great many medicines which were highly recommended, but none gave me relief. I was at last advised to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by a friend who told me that I must purchase six bottles, and use them according to directions. I yielded to his persuasion, bought the six bottles, and took the contents of three of these bottles without noticing any direct benefit. Before I had finished the fourth bottle, my hands were as

The Webling Sisters which appear at the Opera House to-night will no doubt have one of the largest houses of the season. The program is a good one and embraces piano solos, vocal solos, recitations and dances. The Highland Sword Dance and the Dance of the Roses are all worth the price of admission. The tableaux Britannia is said to be very pretty. There are only a few good seats left so come early and avoid the rush.

THE PROVOST SELECTED

The Rev Edward Ashurst Welch to be Provost of Trinity College

A letter from the Bishop of Durham to Hon G. W Allen, Ottawa communicates the intelligence of the appointment as Provost of Trinity College, Toronto of the Rev. Edward Welsh, M. A., Vicar of the church of the Venerable Bede, Gateshead.

The following brief summary of Mr. Welch's career is copied from the Bishop's letter :—The Rev. Edward Ashurst Welch, M. A., was a scholar of King's College, Cambridge, and Bell University scholar in 1880. He obtained first-class honors in the classical tripos in 1882, and theological honors in 1884 He studied afterwards at the Leeds Clergy School, and was ordained to the curacy of St. Paul's, Haggerston (under the Rev S. T. Stone). From 1886 to 1890 he was resident chaplain to Dr. Lightfoot. Bishop of Durham, and during this time he took part in superintending the work of the students resident with the Bishop On the death of the Bishop he was appointed by the Crown to the benefice which he now holds."

"After years of dyspeptic misery, I can at last eat a good square meal without its distressing me," gratefully exclaimed one whose appetite had been restored by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This remedy wonderfully sharpens the appetite and improves digestion.

Jane at the Queen's

M. J. Boyles Players, which appear at the Queen's Opera House all next week with a grand family matinee on Saturday afternoon, came to the city highly recommended by the press and public wherever they appeared. On Monday night they will produce that great comedy "Jane," a play that has never been produced at popular prices in Canada before. They have the sole right of producing all their plays at popular prices and it is this fact which accounts for the success. The play is interspersed with numerous specialities, including songs and dances by the Belleville favorite Miss May Bell. On Tuesday evening they will produce the "Private Secretary." The plan is now open at Riggs.

The practice on Tuesday by the Philharmonic for their concert on the 30th, was the best they have had lately and promises well for the entertainment in the City Hall. Every chorus was perfect and though the music is more simple than that of their former concerts, the fine shading shows good work, and the rendering of "Hail bright abode" as well as that given to the glees, part song, etc., shows they do not slight any music they consider worth offering to the public, even though it be most simple. Tickets only 35cts at Geen's drug store.

Yeomans & Co. are prepared to guarantee satisfaction in the fitting of glasses.

COMMUNICATION.

While the columns of the ONTARIO are at all times open for correspondence on all matters of public interest, it must in all cases be understood that we are in no way responsible for, nor necessarily endorse the views so expressed

The Gerow Inquest

To the Editor of The ONTARIO.

SIR,—If Mr. Babbit will point out any criticism of or reflection upon the jury, in the article of which he complains, I will endeavor as far as possible to make the amende honorable. The jury brought in a verdict in strict accordance with the evidence submitted. The charges concern the medical witnesses alone. They are unable to refute them successfully and are not assisted by his friendly interference. He will perhaps permit me to suggest that the next time he has occasion to destroy an animal, he summon his medical friends and endeavor to produce instant death by inflicting, with their assistance, a similar wound. The blood will spurt with decided force and the prolonged death agonies of the animal will be painful to witness. The result in the human subject is similar unless other causes of death intervene.

Medical witnesses at coroners' inquests, paid for their services from public funds, become for the time being, like other public officials, legitimate subjects for proper and respectful criticism when occasion demands. The public press furnishes a proper and convenient medium for this purpose in which they are entitled to the privilege of defence without being accused of ulterior motives.

Believing the professional opinions so carefully suppressed sadly need an airing, an explanation of this remarkable medical evidence will be asked for through one of the medical journals.

I thank you Mr. Editor for the space you have alloted me.

W. YOUKER.

DAME ADJUTOR LACHANCE
Charlesbourg, Que.

THE LATE THOS LINGHAM

Man's Span of Years Lived in Industry and Integrity

The late Thos. Lingham whose death was announced yesterday was one of the oldest residents in this district and a man then whom none was more respected and esteemed.

He was born seventy-three years ago in Kent County, England where his father was an extensive farmer. In 1832 the family, father and mother and four sons emigrated to Canada and after spending six months at Shannonville removed to Belleville, then as now the centre of this district's activity. The oldest brother, William, at the time the family left England was serving a seven year apprenticeship to a miller and according to the ironbound customs of those days must needs serve out his apprenticeship, but he too came to Canada and joined his family as soon as his time was out.

Soon after coming to Belleville Thomas was apprenticed to a cabinet and chair maker named Bigford. This move had of other significance than the determining of his vocation for he lived with his employer, who thought as much of him as if he had been his own boy, and under the kindly influence of that christian home he was grounded in both politics and religion and became the only Reformer of his family and likewise a Methodist. Upon attaining manhood he manifested his self-reliance by starting in business for himself. His shop was about where Mr. McKeown's boot store now stands. Not long after, he removed to Canifton and started a chair factory there.

A few years later he gave up the furniture trade and with his brothers William and Jobe started in the lumber business, at the same time opening a general store at Queensboro which was conducted in connection with the lumber business. Seventeen years ago Mr. Lingham sold out his lumbering interests and timber limits and retiring completely from business came to the city and has since then resided in the house on North Front street where he died.

Mr. Lingham was married thirty-two years ago last October to Miss McTaggart of Hungerford. Of their children five, two sons and three daughters are still living, Charles, who is a teacher in the Belleville Business College, Fred, who is residing in Boston; Alice, the wife of Mr. J. W. Vermilyea; Nettie, the wife of Mr. R. J. Graham, High School principal at Gananoque and Bessie who is residing at home.

Of Mr. Lingham's father's family only one son, Nelson and two daughters, Mrs. Jos. Bilton and Miss Lingham of London (Ont.) now remain.

Few men will be remembered with greater respect and esteem by the community at large than Mr. Thos. Lingham. He was of a retiring disposition and during his long life never sought public honors or position, but he was an earnest, and in an unobtrusive way, an active supporter of the Liberal party and the principles of reform. Since his youth he has been a consistent and active member of the Methodist church, and since his retirement from business and during his last residence in this city he has been one of the most valued members of West Belleville Church.

The funeral will take place from the late residence of the deceased, North Front street, to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock and services will be held at 2.30

ALBERT COLLEGE

As a natural result of the increased attendance at Albert this year we have a larger number than usual still remaining after the close of the Conference Preliminary work. In fact those who have left are scarcely missed in the halls and classrooms.

As a whole the recent examination was exceptionally successful, showing that faithful work had been done in the few months the students were here.

Rev. E. N. Baker's prize of ten dollars in gold, given for Pulpit Oratory and open to all students in Conference work of any year was won by Mr D. G. Harrison. The judges were :- Rev. E. N. Baker, Mr. Ritchie and Mr. Ponton—all of the city. Owing to the large number of competitors, there being no less than fourteen, they found their duties were by no means easy.

From the number preparing for the various departmental examinations this promises to be one of the most successful years for our College, and already there are indications that the prospective increased accomodation will all be brought into requisition next year.

LITERARY NOTES.

Godey's Magazine for May

The May number of Godey's Magazine appears in an even more attractive cover than the Easter one. This Magazine is certainly one of the best of the month, and cannot fail to be appreciated by its readers It contains as leading features Milton's May poem, illustrated by Newman; a continuation of the "Fair Women Series;" "Artists in Their Studios," by Cooper; "Circe," by Miller; and "The Angora Cat" This last article, which is beautifully illustrated, cannot fail to attract considerable attention, on account of the fact that the Augora cat is one of the fads of the day. There are also sketches, short stories, poems, book reviews, and Godey's Fashions, giving excellent descriptions of the correct fashions of the day. This number, with its eighty illustrations, is as unique and interesting as anything we have seen.—The Godey Company, 32-34 Lafayette Place, New York.

A Spring Time Magazine

Women's colleges receive Dr. Parkhurst's attention in the May's Ladies Home Journal, and the vigor with which he treats the subject is unmistakable. His words open up new phases of college training for women which will unquestionable command not only wide attention but wide discussion. The fact that Florence Nightingale reaches the ripe age of seventy five this month is made the basis of an interesting sketch of "The Angel of the Crimea," as she is is to-day, showing a new portrait of her and a view of her London home. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps is tenderly reminiscent of her father, the the late Austin Phelps in the series of "The Man Who Most Influenced Me." Edward Bok answers, with much force and directness, a page of "Problems of Young Men." There is a strong flavor of interesting biography to this number of the Journal—sketches, with portraits, of the home lives and personalties of "The Wives of three authors," Mrs. George W. Cable, Mrs. Conan Doyle and Mrs. Thos. Hardy, being given on one page, while Frank S. Guild gives a sketch of the popular artist, Alice Barber Stephens, and Ethel Mackenzie McKenna writes of Marie Corelli. John Kendrick Bangs is irresistibly funny in his report of the sixth meeting of "The Paradise Club." The full score of the "Concert Mazurka," by the well-known composer, Bruno Oscar Klein, the piano composition which won in the Journal's musical series is given. This beautiful magazie is sold at ten cents per number and at one dollar per year, by The Curtis Publishing Company, Philadelphia.

COMMERCIAL.

BELLEVILLE, April 25.—The interesting feature of markets these days is the advance in wheat. No grain to speak of is coming into the market here at present and there is but little in the farmers' hands. What grain there is is held by speculators for the most part. A Toronto despatch says: The rapid advance in the west has made holders of wheat very firm and it is now difficult to buy Ontario wheat outside at less than 73c; millers are bidding 72c; a lot of 8000 bushels of white wheat that was offered early in the season at 51c sold in Toronto the past few days at 75c.

Accident to an Albert College Girl

(Hastings Star.)

An accident occurred at the G. T. R. station on Tuesday afternoon, that might have been fatal. A Miss Watson, from near Norwood, was driven by her father, with a young team of horses, to the station to take the east bound train for Belleville, where she is attending Albert College. While her father was putting her trunk on the platform, she, getting out of the rig, was kicked by one of the horses on the side of her face, knocking her insensible. Dr. Coughlan was called, and when sufficiently revived to be moved, she was taken to Mr. Dainard's after which she returned home. Fortunately the colt had no shoes on or it might have been fatal.

GENTLEMEN,—In the spring of 1891 I got a bottle of B. B. B. for my mother, who had been troubled with Sick Headache. I got it from Mr. H. Paxton Baird, of Woodstock, N. B., who gave me two other medicines to take home and let my mother take her choice. Fortunately she chose the B B. B., and I returned the other bottles. She used it for three months and has had no headache since. We are sure it was B. B. B. cured her as she took no other medicine.

JEW PEDDLER IMMIGRANTS

How the Government's Immigration Policy Works.

MR. MARTIN SCARIFIES TOM DALY.

Mr. Foster Promises, Barring Accidents, To Deliver the Budget Speech Next Friday—Tay Canal Receipts and Expenses—Branding Cheese With Date of Make

Ottawa, April 26.—The question of the failure of the Government's immigration policy was introduced to Parliament yesterday afternoon by Mr. Martin of Winnipeg, upon a motion for the papers with regard to the bringing into the Northwest of the party of Jew peddlers from Chicago. Last session, said Mr. Martin, he had brought the subject to the attention of the House, and had declared that the immigrants brought by the officers of the department from Chicago into the Canadian Northwest were not a desirable class of immigrants, but were Jew peddlers, who, after their arrival in this country, had refused to farm, but had returned to their peddling calling, and that some had found their way into Calgary jail. The Minister had told him his information was incorrect, and had accused him of maligning a body of most respectable and desirable settlers. According to the Minister's statement the immigrants belonged to the most desirable class of settlers, but the facts as shown by a letter since written to The Winnipeg Free Press by Mr. Fortier, who was head of the immigration branch of the Interior Department, and showed Mr. Martin, said that his information had been correct, and that the Minister had been incorrect in the statement made to the House. Mr. Fortier, in his desire to defend the Minister and the department, had revealed the following state of things:

The Government had received information through the Canadian Pacific Railway that there were some Germans, Hungarians and Poles in Chicago who might be induced to go to the Northwest if an immigration agent were sent among them. An agent of the department was accordingly assigned to investigate the prospects, and the result was that delegates from the prospective settlers were taken up through the Canadian territories. The department appointed Mr. P. F. Daly to conduct them, and Mr. Fortier in his letter took pains to say that at the time of the appointment the department did not know of P. F. Daly's relationship to the Minister.

Now, remarked Mr. Martin, I do not think Mr. Fortier need have taken the trouble to tell us that he did not know P. F. Daly was a brother of the Minister, although if Mr. Fortier had seen him he must have suspected the relationship by the strong resemblance between them. But aside from that, I do not see that the representative of one part of the country is not entitled to the same privilege as the Ministers for other parts of the Dominion in the matter of having his relatives, whether brothers, uncles or cousins, appointed to office under the Government. There was, I therefore think, no necessity for Mr. Fortier's excuses. (Laughter and applause.)

After the delegates returned the first party of these immigrants was organized and taken into Canada. They were described as farmers or artisans of the most desirable class, and it was said each head of a family had on an average $500 of money, but when they had been taken out to the lands upon which they were to settle, they refused to remain on them, and were soon back in Calgary, where some of them were put into jail charged with serious offences.

This was the "elaborate fiasco" which Mr. Martin revealed to the House, and which was practically admitted by Mr. Fortier, the excuse offered being that the Government had been deceived by its officers and agents throughout. Using this as an illustration, and a very vivid one it certainly is, Mr. Martin scored the administration of the Minister most unmercifully. It was a fair sample, he thought, of Mr. Daly's "vigorous immigration policy," and his policy considered on the whole had been a complete failure. The money voted for immigration had been spent and immigration had fallen off. The money was almost entirely wasted. Then Mr. Martin spoke of the great want of settlers of the right kind in the Northwest and the great interest which the people up there, as well as the people of the whole Dominion have, in having such incapacity and inactivity as now exist in the immigration administration of the Government brought to an end.

Mr. Daly defended his vdministration, while admitting the facts narrated by Mr. Martin.

Mr. Martin reminded the Minister that last year he had stood up in his place and given a flat contradiction to everything he (Mr. Martin) had said in regard to the matter. Why did he not make the admission? There was a question that Mr. Martin asked, the admission that he had made to-day that the department was mistaken, throw himself upon the House and ask to be forgiven. Mr. Daly had persisted in introducing local politics, with which the House had nothing to do. It was time that the Manitoba Government had discontinued the expenditure of money for immigration purposes, because it had come to the conclusion that as long as the policy of the Dominion Government towards the Northwest was continued it was hopeless to try and induce immigrants to go into the country. The people there were discontented because of the tariff and because of the monopoly which imposed upon them high freight rates. Under these circumstances the Government had decided to discontinue the effort at present to secure immigrants for the West. Mr. Martin replied effectively to the other points raised by Mr. Daly.

Mr. Davin came to the defence of the Minister. He said that the explanations given by Mr. Daly last year and this were precisely the same, except that the latter had been given after there had been time to obtain fuller information. The United States had the same problem to contend with in regard to the apparent loss of immigrants that confronted Canada. They were unable to account for 11,000,000 people, who could not have come to Canada, and where had they gone? It might turn out that after all the theory of the natural increase had no real scientific basis.

Sir Richard Cartwright and Mr. Charlton disposed of Mr. Davin's point, and took the opportunity of reminding the House that, while the Government has claimed to have brought in 886,000 immigrants, only 150,000 materialized when the census was taken.

Mr. Foster promised that the estimates would be down not later than Monday, and that he would deliver the budget speech, barring accidents, not later than Friday of next week.

Mr. Bergin introduced a bill to amend the Dominion Franchise Act, which was read a first time. It provides that polling sub-divisions in counties may include more than 300 voters.

Dr. Montague, replying to Mr. Edgar, said that the total amount paid to revising officers to April 20, on account of the recent revision, was $148,287. The further amount required would be about $12,000. The cost of printing the lists was $35,106.

Mr. Haggart, answering Mr. Charlton, said the total revenue derived from the Tay Canal last year was $126, while the cost of maintenance and management was $2485. (Derisive Opposition cheers.)

Dr. Montague stated to Mr. Casey that the Voters' List for Centre Toronto had been printed in part by The Catholic Register and part by Timms, Moore & Co.; in West Toronto, in part, by The Orange Sentinel, and part by Timms, Moore & Co.; in East Toronto by The Mail Job Department; in West York by William Briggs; in East York by J. S. Williams, and in North York, by Timms, Moore & Co. The price paid was uniformly the same, viz., three cents per name, and 50 cents for headings.

Mr. Haggart, replying to Mr. Laurier, said that the total amount of railway subsidies voted last year was $4,661,060, of which re-votes amounted to $1,700,581.

Mr. Curran, replying to Mr. Laurier, said that process against Messrs. Larkin and Connolly to recover the amount of the judgment in the suit against them was issued quite recently, as the money only came due a few days ago. The process was issued before Mr. Laurier put his notice on the order paper.

The House went into committee on Major McLennan's resolution for leave to introduce a bill to amend the Dairy Products Act. The Major explained that the bill provided for the branding of packages of butter and cheese with the name of the place of production, whether in Canada or the States, and also with the date of manufacture. It was also proposed that cheese itself should be branded with the date and place of manufacture. The letters must be not less than three-eighths of an inch long and half an inch wide. He held that it was important that this should be done, as cheese was held back and sold as of fall make when it had been made in the summer and was possibly deteriorated.

Messrs. McMillan and Cartwright concurred in the proposal to protect such an important industry.

Mr. Taylor added some important information relative to the cheese industry. He favored inspection, and wanted a clause to be inserted in the bill providing a penalty for infraction of the law.

Dr. Montague said the Government regarded this as a very important subject. The House was indebted to Messrs. McLennan and Taylor for the valuable information which they had given. When the time arrived for considering the bill on its merits he would explain the Government's intentions. If it was proposed to deal with butter and cheese for export, that would be a Dominion matter, but if it were only intended to make the act apply to the dairy products sold in local markets that might be regarded as a question for the local legislatures. The Government were fully alive to the importance of this great industry.

Mr. Davin asked that the dairy industry in the Territories be encouraged, and Mr. McMullen thought that it was about time the Territories should strike out for themselves. The resolution was adopted and a bill founded thereon introduced.

It is currently reported around the House to-night that the dissolution of the Manitoba Legislature may be expected on May 8. The Legislature is adjourned until the 9th proximation, but a gentleman proximo, but a gentleman who is well posted on provincial affairs, says that he would not be surprised if Mr. Greenway took the ground that he must consult the people before dealing with the Remedial Order, which is now under consideration. There are some politicians who express the belief that by advising dissolution at this time Mr. Greenway will not be acting constitutionally, and that possibly Lieut.-Governor Schultz might refuse to allow an appeal under the circumstances.

Mr. W. J. Gage of Toronto is in the city, and to-morrow, accompanied by a number of members of Parliament, will wait upon the Governor to ask for a grant from the Dominion Treasury towards aiding in the erection of a hospital for consumptives. Mr. Gage takes a great interest in this subject, and as already announced in the press has donated $25,000 for the purpose of putting up the necessary buildings. Mr. Gage desires to see established in Canada a national home for the cure of consumption. He cites the action that is being taken in other countries, with the object stated, and is hopeful of being able to secure national assistance from the Dominion Parliament.

In the Senate, in reply to Senator McInnes, the Premier said that James Fitzsimmons had been dismissed from the deputy wardenship of British Columbia Penitentiary by order in council of October, '94, and reinstated by the same authority in March, '95.

The debate on the address was resumed by Senator Kaulbach, followed by Mr. Bernier, the latter expressing for himself and the minority in Manitoba satisfaction with the course pursued by the Federal Government. He hoped the unanimity of opinion upon the subject would bring Manitoba to a proper sense of its duty and responsibility in dealing with the Remedial Order. He protested against the statement that the Roman Catholic schools in Manitoba were inferior to the Protestant schools, and adduced evidence to show their efficiency.

Senator Armand, who spoke for a few minutes in French, congratulated Premier Bowell on his courage in reference to the school question.

Hon. Senator Ferguson of P.E.I. moved the adjournment of the debate.

The first of the receptions given by Madame Laurier was held at the Russell House this evening, and was largely attended by Conservatives as well as Liberals.

A despatch from Newfoundland, relative to union proposals, created quite a stir here to-day, but the ministers were very reticent on the subject and no information is vouchsafed.

ROBBED OF $35 000.

Burglar Alarms Proved Useless and the Safe Was Cracked

Mifflintown, Pa., April 26.—Early this morning the store of Noah Hertzler at Port Royal, this county, was robbed of stock, bonds and cash amounting to about $35,000. The safe was blown open. All approaches to the store were protected by burglar alarms, but the robbers gained an entrance to the cellar and cut their way through the floor.

According to the latest reports, there are in the world 140,334 miles of submarine telegraph cable. Of this total the various governments own 14,480 miles of cable and 25,550 miles of wire. The balance is owned by private companies.

TOBACCO GONE UP IN SMOKE

McDonald's Montreal Tobacco Factory Scorched.

FIVE GIRLS FATALLY INJURED.

The List of Injured Numbers Eleven—A Panic Seized the Operatives and Means of Escape Were Neglected $250,000 Loss Without Insurance.

Montreal, April 25.—ROSANA BEAUCHAMP, fatally.
ADE FONTIN, fatally.
ALPHOSINE THIBAUDEAU, spine broken, fatally.
ETIENNE GUILLMETTE.
MAY GELINAS.
MARY POIRIER, all badly burned.
DELPHIS CHAPUT, both legs fractured, probably fatal.
NAPOLEON BLONDIN, arm and leg broken.
FIREMAN GAGNON, leg fractured.
SEREPHINE SENET, jumped from top story; fatally injured.

Above is the list of those injured in the fire which broke out at 6.20 pm. in the immense tobacco factory of W. C. McDonald, at the corner of Ontario and Moreau-streets, and nearly the whole structure was destroyed.

About 30 girls employed in the place were more or less badly burned and several are dead. There were only two narrow staircases and two elevators in the factory; there were no fire escapes, and the windows were all covered with stout wire graingts. The poor girls were unable to escape, many having to break glass to get air, and many were rescued by citizens, who procured ladders and wrenched off the gratings, while many had to jump for their lives.

There were many heart-rending scenes. As demanded by excise regulations, the windows are covered by wire screens, and there were no fire escapes, and in the centre of the building is a supposed fire-proof tower with exits to it from all the flats, and two staircases leading to the employes' entrance. The employes, however, became panic stricken, and were rendered more frantic by the smoke, which soon filled the whole building.

Remembering that there was a shed alongside in the rear, they rushed there, and men succeeded in wenching off the heavy grating so that they could drop between it and the window sill. All who did so were badly injured. In at least three cases women were held there by their skirts by men while the firemen rescued them.

Never since the Longue Point fire were such terrible scenes as those witnessed, with the distrcted girls at the grated windows, waiting in terrible agitation for the firemen to come to their rescue.

At full blast 1000 hands are employed, but there were only 800 in the building.

The building is worth about $200,000, and the stock at least $350,000. Mr. McDonald told the press to go to a warmer climate when asked for his insurance, but it is understood that he insured himself. Many were badly crushed and injured by the crowding into the elevators, for the stairs, despite the efforts of the firemen to restrain them and preserve order.

HAWAII AND THE U.S

The Republic is Not Under American Protection, Says Sir Edward Grey.

London, April 26.—Sir Thomas Esmonde asked in the House of Commons if Hawaii were under the protection of the United States and if that Government could not be approached with a view of obtaining proper treatment for Ex-Queen Liliuokalani.

Mr. Donald MacGregor said: "As I happen to know the lady I join in this appeal in her behalf. She is imprisoned against the will of a large majority of her subjects."

Sir Edward Grey, Under Foreign Secretary, said that Hawaii was not under the protection of the United States, and therefore no such application could be made by England to the Washington Government as had been suggested.

Mr. MacGregor asked if an appeal ad misericordiam could not be made to the United States.

Sir Edward Grey said that Hawaii, not being under United States protection, which fact was recognized by England, no such appeal could be made to the American Government. A number of British subjects had been arrested there, however, for the part they took, or were alleged to have taken, in the recent insurrection there. These men had complained to British authority of the hardships they were compelled to undergo in prison. Besides the men sentenced to imprisonment, many British subjects had been tried by courts martial and subsequently induced to leave the country, under pressure, as they asserted. The protests of these men, he said, were being carefully considered by the Foreign Office, but it had not yet been decided whether the facts would justify the Government in taking action.

Henry Gardner, President of the Board of Agriculture, referred to a report which had recently been submitted by the Renfrew Agricultural Association, alleging that 70 per cent. of the sheep imported from America were diseased. Specimen animals, he said, were now being examined by an inspector of the Board of Trade.

LAUGHED AT ANNEXATION

New York Senators Amused at O'Grady's Bid For Canada

Albany, N.Y., April 25.—In the Senate Mr. O'Grady's concurrent resolution favoring Canadian annexation was received with laughter. Senator O'Connor did not think it becoming for New York State to invite Canada to sever its connection with England. Senator Pound said the resolution was backed up by thousands of prominent names, and asked its immediate consideration. Senator O'Connor protested. He did not want to stir up discord in a neighboring country. He did not think that the names of Mr. Depew, Mayor Strong, Mr. Platt and others which go with the resolution should carry the Senate off its feet.

Senator Raines offered to amend by requesting Congress to invite the union. It was adopted and the resolution was then laid over.

THE VERDICT A DISGRACE.

A Quebec Judge Roundly Scores a Jury on Their Finding.

Quebec., April 26.—In the Criminal Court the jury rendered a verdict of not guilty in favor of W. A. C. Baldwin, commission merchant, charged with having obtained money under false pretences. Judge Bosse, in addressing the jury, expressed himself as dissatisfied with the verdict, saying that some of the jurymen had failed to do their duty and that the verdict was a disgrace to the jury system.

Countess Russell Loses.

London, April 25.—The jury in the case of Countess Russell against her husband, Earl Russell, for restoration of her conjugal rights, this morning returned a verdict in favor of the husband.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

Mimico, Aug. 20, 1894

Wm. Dean, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

Walter Burgess.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles ! Piles ! Itching Piles.

Symptoms.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia.

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infeld side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelee's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

Germany reports 289 instances of suicide among school children during the last six years.

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S. Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal.'

For Over Fifty Years

An Old and Well-tried Remedy.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for Diarrhœa. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by Druggists in every part of the World. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

She (bitterly)—Before you married me I was an angel. I'll never be that again I suppose. He (sarcastically)—Well, I live in hopes.

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

Beyond Dispute.

There is no better, safer or more pleasant cough remedy made than Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cures Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, and all throat and lung troubles.

There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time effectual and pleasant, as Milburn's Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry hypophosphites, which is the largest and best combination of anti-consumptive remedies. ANGLOPHOBIA.

The prejudiced mind is as unreasoning and as unreasonable as fate. Only upon this assumption can we account for a leading editoral in Monday's New York Sun graced with the title 'England and Japan.' The intent of it all is in this: "Were English and Japanese fleets of about equal strength to meet in battle the chances would be as favorable to the Japanese as the English, the spirit of it in this: "The martial spirit of Japan antedates that of Britain; and hereafter, whether on land or sea, the arch robber of the universe will find all she cares to meet if she comes into hostile contact with the forces of Dai Nippon."

The article for the most part is from the digger of Rear Admiral Belknap and here are some of his prettiest hits;

"The growing strength of the British navy is a menace to the rest of the world, but the sun flag of Japan may yet humble the proud flag of Britain."

"Compare the readiness and achievement of the Japanese navy with the poor showing the British navy made in the Baltic and Black seas during the Crimean War. The Japanese fleet went about its work without confusion or bluster, both in perfect confidence."

"No British Minister will hereafter enact the meddling and menacing part of a Parkes at Tokio."

"Japan's army is to-day the equal of the British army in organization and equipment; superior to it in homogenity mobility and discipline. In hand to hand fighting the British race has never surpassed the men of Japan. As a rule, England's antagonists have been the effeminate races of India, the non-soldierly Chinese, the spear-armed tribes of Africa, and the hapless savages of the Isles of the sea. Aided by the colonists she drove the French from this continent, but, in turn, the colonists, the scorned fruit of her own loins, thrust her from this soil with a valor and a determination that she could not withstand."

"There is not one incident of personal prowess or of individual valor in the annals of England that may not be matched by a similar deed of courage or heroism in the annals of Japan." "Her statesmen avow it to be their purpose to make Japan the England of the pacific. She knows full well what has befallen India, Burmah, and Egypt through English machinations. The island craft, the aggresive wisdom that has made England so dominant, so potential in the affairs of the globe for the past three hundred years, is fast finding its vigorous counterpart in the progressive steps and well considered aims of Japan. With prescient vision and dauntless intent and an earnestness of soul that possesses no other nation in this age, she presses forward to enlarge her national horizon and to become the dominant power on the Asiatic shores of the great Pacific."

And all this, the Sun says, "must be instructive to the rulers of England and to her military and naval authorities, and to the American people and to the whole world." Thanks.

Were this the voice of the American people we would say that it ill became a daughter of a century's growth to spurn the breast that nursed her, to revile that mother to whose trials and battlings of a thousand years the daughter is indebted for all she has and is.

Are not Britain's annals of valor and victory on field and sea for a thousand years equally the heritage of every Anglo-Saxon, or has blood thinned to water, and does a common speech, common sentiments and a common history count for naught? And is not every member of the race equally a partaker of that greater triumph of institutions, of principles, and of thought that has leavened the world and in the Greater Britain of the world's purposes and tendencies in the crowning glory of ten centuries of contest.

When the Sun humors a diseased imagination by talking of England as "the arch robber of the universe," it might find a cooling influence in ruminating on the Mexican War, The Hawaiian incident the fact that its Government has flunked from abiding by the judgment of the Bearing Sea Tribunal and paying its just debt to the Canadian sealers. Not forgetting the journal's own piratical suggestion of "coercing" Canada into Union.

No one will be seriously hurt or greatly instructed by the Sun's instances of England's shortcomings and blunders in home management. England's rulers have never yet made a mistake or been guilty of negligence that Britain's soldiers and sailors could not rectify, save perhaps that one that created the States of America, and they were Britons who rectified that.

Anglo Saxons are progressing in a common sympathy and unity of purpose, and this prejudiced jingoism is but a negative evidence of it. Canada has millions of hearts that beat kindly towards the States but not one drop of blood to be trampled on.

ENGLAND IS INEXORABLE.

If Nicaragua Has Not Paid That Indemnity Corinto Customs are Now Under Seizure

London, April 26.—Rear Admiral Henry F. Stephenson, commanding the warships in the harbor of Corinto, Nicaragua, has telegraphed to the Admiralty that other war vessels are on their way to join his fleet at Corinto, and that he is prepared to land 400 blue-jackets at daybreak Thursday if the British demands are not complied with by midnight. The warships are lying close to the shore in order to protect the landing party, which, the Admiral says, he will cover with 29 guns.

Will Allow Occupation of Corinto.

Washington, April 26.—Official advices from Managua indicate that the Nicaraguan Government would probably not pay the indemnity before the three days' grace given by the British Rear Admiral, Stephenson, expires, but will allow the British forces to occupy Corinto at daybreak of the following morning. This course will probably be taken for this, among other reasons, that it will afford time for good offices, which Ambassador Bayard is understood to have been directed to exert in London to secure an extension of ten or fourteen days time, and, if possible, a stipulation for the payment of the indemnity in London instead of at Corinto at the cannon's mouth.

The Monroe Doctrine Not Effective.

The Nicaraguan Minister, Dr. Guzman, spent several hours at the State Department to-day, hoping to obtain from Mr. Gresham some further information as to the attitude of this country. It is positively stated that Sir Julian Pauncefote's call upon Secretary Gresham yesterday had no reference to the Nicaraguan affair, nor was that matter even incidentally discussed by them. The British Ambassador at Washington has no connection with the Nicaraguan incident. The British Minister in Central America has been at Managua for some weeks. He will remain there until the pending troubles have been adjusted. Whatever communication Lord Kimberley desires to make to Nicaragua will be made through the medium of the British representative there, Mr. Gosling.

Nothing can be obtained officially from the State Department in regard to the present attitude of the United States in the affair. It is understood, however, that the United States has taken the ground that the dispute between Great Britain and Nicaragua is one involving questions of national honor and dignity, in which the United States has no right to interpose. It is therefore inferred that should Nicaragua hold out and British marines take possession of the Corinto Custom House to-morrow morning no objection will be urged on the part of the United States. No United States war vessel has been ordered to Corinto. It is conceded even by friends of Nicaragua that no harm can come to Corinto or to the republic from a temporary occupation of Corinto by the British. It is believed that after a few days have elapsed, and if the United States should fail to secure an extension of time, or change in the ,mode of payment as asked at Nicaragua's request, Nicaragua will then gracefully yield to the inevitable and come forward with the indemnity.

Nothing Known of Bayard's Intercession.

London, April 25.—The St. James Gazette says: "Nothing is known at the United States Embassy regarding any request made by the Washington Government to Lord Kimberley for delay on the part of Great Britain in taking action against Nicaragua. It is understood Great Britain and the United States are agreed upon the course to be pursued in enforcing compliance with the British demand."

ANGLICAN COURT OF APPEAL.

The First Case That Has Been Brought To Attention in Thirty Years.

Kingston, Ont., April 26.—A session of the Court of Appeal of the Metropolitan of the Anglican Church in Eastern Canada for the purpose of hearing the appeal of the Rev. George Wye and churchwardens of Christ Church, Amherstburg, from a decision of the Diocesan Court of Huron and a sentence pronounced by the bishop of that diocese, was opened to-day, and is not expected to close until Saturday.

It is the first session of the Court of Appeal since its establishment in 1862. The Archbishop of Ontario, as Metropolitan, is the president of the court, and the other members are the bishops of Montreal, Toronto, Algoma, Niagara, Quebec, Nova Scotia and Fredericton. The Bishop of Huron, being the bishop whose sentence is appealed against, will not sit as a member of the court. The court is advised by Strachan Bethune, Q.C., Montreal; the Hon. George Irvine, Q.C., Quebec, and Richard T. Walkem, Q.C., Kingston. These gentlemen will decide all questions of evidence and procedure and such other matters as are referred to them. Mr. V. Rogers, Q.C., Kingston, is the registrar of the court. The appellants and respondent are represented by counsel.

Forged a Note For $200,000.

San Francisco, April 26.—A forged note for $200,000, signed by the late millionaire J. C. Flood, and endorsed by W. W. Corcoran, of Washington Art Gallery fame, has come to light here. The signatures are pronounced perfect, and the note is believed to have been forged by a man in New York, who signs his name Stroud Starbird. He is believed to be the same man who made J. G. Fair's note for $300,000, endorsed by Leland Stanford.

YOUNG WOMEN LAWYERS.

A Large Class Recently Turned Out in New York City.

Nearly fifty young women have just received chancellor's diplomas for their proficiency in the study of the law. They were members of the women's law class of University of the city of New York, which is under the direction of the Women's Legal Educational Society.

Not all, perhaps, not many, of these young women intend to enter into the practice of the law. Their purpose is chiefly educational, it being rightly considered that hardly any other department of study can give such good results in the development of the mind as a study of the principles of law. Law as a science is quite another thing than the law as a profession for the earning of a living. In the latter, a familiarity with cases, with the decisions of the courts, is sometimes the chief equipment, with a knowledge of the foundation principles of law means an orderliness and expansiveness of mind which can be achieved by hardly any other study.

One other purpose that is served by the study of law by women, is the intelligent direction of the efforts of organizations of women to influence legislation. There is hardly a state in which the laws have not been changed in the matter of the property and other rights of women, through the efforts of woman suffrage and other organizations. The early laws of this country were framed on the Biblical idea of the subordination and incompetence of women. The man, as the sole arbiter and master of the woman's destiny, was everywhere endowed with authority which had no defence in justice, but only in the teachings of the Bible and the church. With an army of intelligent women thoroughly instructed in the principles of justice and with a definite understanding of the inequality of men and women before the law, successful war can be made on the remaining barbarities imbedded in old statutes.

It is of grave importance, too, that women in the possession of enormous fortunes should themselves have an understanding of the laws in relation to property. Among the persons graduated by the university is Miss Gould, the owner of vast millions. It is inevitable that the possession of great interests should lead to litigation and a knowledge of the laws is almost indispensable if the owner is to escape unnecessary annoyances and defeat efforts to dupe and defraud. There is hardly a doubt that if the late Mrs. Paran Stevens had been well grounded in the law, she would have escaped much of the litigation which irritated her and absorbed so much of her energy.

A knowledge of the law does as much to prevent as to advance litigation.—New York Commercial-Advertiser.

Lady Pauncefote.

Lady Pauncefote, the wife of the British ambassador, is a thorough cosmopolitan, having been born in India, which, however, she left when an infant. Her childhood was spent in England and her girlhood chiefly on the continent, where she studied in Dresden and other educational centers, thus acquiring fluency in speaking several languages. After her marriage to Sir Julian she accompanied him to Hong Kong, where he became attorney general and, later on, chief justice. After ten years' residence in the far east, Sir Julian returned to England with his wife and young daughters. At this time he was knighted and appointed chief justice of the Leeward Islands. After a few pleasant years in the tropics they returned to London, where they spent the next twelve years. During this period, as the wife of the assistant secretary of state in the colonial office, Lady Pauncefote entered largely into society in London. It is this varied social experience in all quarters of the globe that gives her much of the peculiar charm of manner and ability as a hostess for which she is noted,

They not only cleanse the stomach and bowels from all bilious matter, but they open the excretory vessels, causing them to pour copious effusions from the blood into the bowels, after which the corrupt mass is thrown out by the natural passage of the body. They are used as a general family medicine with the best results.

AN OCULIST'S RUSE.

His Clever Mode of Exposing a Fraudulent Claim.

Here is an interesting account of a very clever bit of detective work by an oculist, says Leonard's Illustrated Medical Journal. It appears in a large factory, in which were employed several hundred persons, one of the workmen, in wielding his hammer, carelessly allowed it to slip from his hand. It flew half way across the room and struck a fellow workingham in the left eye. The man averred that his sight was blinded by the blow, although a careful examination failed to reveal any inquiry, there being not a scratch visible. He brought a suit in the courts for compensation for the loss of half of his eyesight, and refused all offers of compromise.

Under the law, according to the Sheffield (England) Telegraph, the owner of the late factory was responsible for an injury resulting from an accident of this kind, and although he believed that the man was shamming and that the whole case was an attempt at swindling, he had about made up his mind that he would be compelled to pay the claim. The day of the trial arrived, and in open court an eminent oculist, retained for the defense, examined the alleged injured member and gave it as his opinion that it was as good as the right eye. Upon the plaintiff's loud protest of his inability to see with the left eye, the oculist proved him a perjurer and satisfied the court and jury of the falsity of his claim.

And how do you suppose he did it? Why, simply by knowing that the colors green and red combined made black. He procured a black card on which a few words were written with green ink. Then the plaintiff was ordered to put on a pair of spectacles with two different glasses, the one for the right eye being red and the one for the left eye consisting of ordinary glass. Then the card was handed him and he was ordered to read the writing on it. This he did without hesitation, and the cheat was at once exposed. The sound right eye, fitted with red glass, was unable to distinguish the green writing on the black surface of the card while the left eye, which he pretended was sightless, was the one with which the reading had to be done.

A MYSTERY.

The Curiosity That Has Puzzled Generations of Georgia Crackers.

Another strange feature of the neighborhood, for ten or fifteen miles' distance, extending northeastward, is the regular recurrence of crescent-shaped embankments, their convex sides invariably lying towards the northeast, and the inside of the semi-circle partly enclosing three mounds, a larger one nearest the embankment, and the smaller ones at short distances, standing in a direct line from northeast to southwest. These strange formations recur about every three-fourths of a mile, the embankments being from one-half to three-quarters of a mile in length. What was their purpose may forever remain a mystery. Perhaps they were the approaches to some great temple of worship erected in the main town on the river; and the fact that it was a sanctuary and regarded as holy ground by the builders may account for the superstitious awe with which the Indians avoided the nameless town.

Some five miles above the old town is a natural curiosity that has puzzled generations of Georgia "crackers." At that point the Ocklacoochee river is about 2000 yards in width, flowing over a bed of quicksand. At the end of a long reach of swamp and at the edge of a steep bluff, a part of the river is about fifty yards wide leaves the main current, and, flowing directly eastward, at right angles to the course of the stream, plunges into a cavern in the face of a hill at least 100 feet high. Attempts have been made at various times to explore this cave. One venturesome explorer penetrated a distance of 300 yards, passing through a serious of spacious chambers connected by narrow galleries along which the water dashed. The course of this underground stream is marked by a succession of "sinks" for a mile or more. A few miles below, on the opposite side of the river, a limestone spring bursts forth. Its waters ordinarily are as clear as crystal, but during an unusual freshet they are discolored as though connected with some surface source. As this spring is on a direct line with the underground stream, the popular belief is that the river divides at the cave, part of its waters flowing below the main channel and emerging again at the spring.—Rome, Ga., cor. New York Evening Post.

Too Much of Everything.

It is Prof. Nordau who says this old world is brain weary. It is tired out, and, like the individual human being, it has hysteria, and is suffering all the anguish of nerve exhaustion, with its attendant depression of spirits. The tension of civilization is breaking down the heart and nervous system. Men fall by the way, and almost before they have crossed the threshold of middle life exhibit a decay that should only come at the appointed three score and ten. Shock follows shock in this modern life, and there is no escaping them. It is as though a child had set some complicated machinery in motion and was incapable of stopping it. Prof. Nordau does not say it, but the secret of this fatigue of civilized humanity lies in having to much of everything; too much of pleasure, too much of maddening work, too much of emotion, which the moderns now cultivate as if it were another form of genius—and a gift from Heaven. And there is also too much wealth, too much poverty. If these crimes of civilization could be abolished man wouldn't be so fatigued!—New York Commercial Advertiser.

An Art Center.

She sniffed the atmosphere scornfully, did this fair Chicago maiden.

"Huh," she ejaculated, "huh."

"What is it?" inquired the man.

"They say Paris is the greatest art center in the world," she responded with infinite disdain and doubt.

"And isn't it?"

"Well, not hardly, I guess. The authorities there have just condemned four brands of American lard as impure."

Treed by Snakes.

A snake story, which is the first and best of the season, comes from Clarke County. A farmer was digging fence post holes last week, and while at work ran across a nest of twenty young snakes. Five were rattlers, ten were moccasins, two were king snakes and three were chicken snakes. They all attacked him, and he was forced to climb a tree to save himself.—Atlanta Constitution.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

Itching Piles is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

Gives Instant Relief.

Pin Worms is an ailment entirely different as to cause than Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

OUR ENORMOUS DRINK BILL

Commissioner McLeod Reports in Favor of Prohibition.

A THOROUGH TEMPERANCE STAND

He Recommends the Immediate Passage of a Prohibitory Law, Believing That the Majority of the People of Canada Favor It.

Ottawa, April 26.—The minority report presented by the Rev. Dr. McLeod of Fredericton, one of the Prohibition commissioners, is a bulky document of 488 pages. Dr. McLeod says his report is partly supplemental and partly corrective of the majority report. He enters into a discussion of the effects of the liquor traffic on all interests affected by it in Canada. He deals with the question of pauperism, disease, insanity and mortality, insanity and idiocy. Then he takes up the question of the responsibility of the traffic, the cost of liquors consumed, cost of prisons, loss of labor, shortened lives and misdirected effort.

Canada's annual drink bill he figures out as follows: Amount paid for liquors by consumers, $39,879,854; value of grain destroyed, $1,889,765. Cost of pauperism, disease, insanity and crime charged to the liquor traffic, $3,149,097. Loss of productive labor, $76,288,800. Loss through mortality caused by the traffic, $14,304,000. Misdirected labor, $7,748,000. Total, $143,258,716.

Revenues, Dominion Government, $7,101,557; provincial governments, $942,652; municipalities, $429,107; total, $8,473,316, leaving a total annual loss of $134,785,400.

The remainder of the report is taken up in discussing at length the laws relating to the liquor traffic and describing the different methods and workings of prohibitory laws.

Dr. McLeod sums up his conclusions as follows: In view of the facts recited, and after careful consideration of all the evidence taken by the commission and of all other information and knowledge obtained, the undersigned submits the following as his conclusions:

1. That the House of Commons of Canada made a right and wise declaration in relation to the subject when it declared in 1870, "That total prohibition is the right and only effective remedy for the evils of intemperance";

That the House of Commons was right in declaring at the same time, "That this House is prepared to enact such legislation as soon as public opinion will sustain them in doing so, and that the House of Commons was well advised in reiterating from time to time, as already set out, this declaration.

2. That all information which your commission has been able to obtain has made it clear to the undersigned that the effect of the liquor traffic has been and is seriously detrimental to all the moral, social and national interests of the nation; that the measures employed to "lessen, regulate or prohibit" the traffic have been of value, and effective only in proportion as they have approximated in their operation to the absolute prohibition of the traffic in intoxicating beverages, and that the revenue requirements of the country should not be considered a reason for the continuance of an admitted evil, and, moreover, could be met without the continuance of that evil.

3. That the endorsement which the electorate of different sections of the Dominion have given at the ballot-box to the principle of prohibition, whenever submitted, as well as many petitions, memorials and declarations of church courts, temperance organizations and municipal councils and other representative bodies makes it sufficiently clear that a majority of the people of Canada are in favor of a total prohibition of the liquor traffic.

4. That it would therefore be right and wise for the Dominion Parliament, without further delay, to carry out the promise given and give effect to the principles stated in its several resolutions by the enactment and thorough enforcement of a law prohibiting the manufacture, importation and sale of intoxicating liquors, except for medical, sacramental and scientific purposes in and into the Dominion.

TRIED TO SHOOT THE NUN.

A Crazy Woman Armed With a Revolver Attacks a Sister of Charity and Attempts to Kill Her.

Toronto, April 26. — At noon yesterday Sister Baptiste of the House of Providence entered the office of The Evening Star in Yonge-street to transact some business. She was followed shortly afterwards by a gaunt featured woman wearing a long cape under which one of her hands was concealed. This woman walked up behind Sister Baptiste, and drawing a heavy bull-dog revolver from beneath her cloak dealt the sister several blows with the butt end of the weapon. She then proceeded to cock the revolver, when Mr. J. E. Krafts, an advertising agent, who was close by, sprang forward and seized her. In the scuffle the revolver fell to the floor.

A policeman was sent for and the woman was taken to jail. She gave her name as Miss Ellen Brown, 20 Caer-Howell-street. It was evident that the woman was crazy. In a rambling way she said that 100 years ago her family in France had been robbed of $250,000,000 by the Roman Catholic Church, but she only heard of it recently. She also said she was an American, and in her country a woman could shoot a nun down and nothing would be said. All she wanted was a fair trial in an open court. This was the nineteenth century and not the dark ages, and all unprejudiced people would believe her story. When she was searched by the matron about one hundred extra cartridges were found in a bag she was carrying, and the six chambers in the revolver were also loaded. The woman had $24.88 in cash in her pocket.

Mrs. Wiley of 21 Caer-Howell-street says that Miss Brown had been boarding with her for a year. She was very quiet, seemed to have few acquaintances and received no letters. She always kept to herself, and it had been often remarked that she was mentally deranged. The only time she ever talked much was when she spoke of Catholics and Nuns. She always led Mrs. Wiley to understand that she came from Montreal and had once been in the Convent. She also told Mrs. Wiley that if anyone by the name of Reid was asked for at the house, that was her name, but for reasons she could not explain she had to change it. She always paid her board regularly until lately. Miss Brown was employed in the fur trade, but had been out of work all winter. Mrs. Wiley thinks she has been well brought up and not used to making her own living.

BRITAIN EUCHRES EUROPE

Made a Bargain With Japan That Displeases Russia.

New York, April 25.—A special to The Herald from London says: The real significance of the joint protest made Tuesday by Russia, Germany and France against the ratification of the Chino-Japanese treaty of peace is a protest against a secret British-Japanese understanding arrived at before peace was finally arranged.

In a word, England has made a hard and fast combination with Japan, and the other great powers have joined in the late protest to prevent the possible consummation of the alliance. England and Japan have been in perfect accord since the peace negotiations began.

England, after the continental powers rejected her overtures at the commencement of the war, set to work safe-guarding British interests, in view of the ultimate success of the Japanese.

It is stated on good authority that Lord Kimberley has been consulted in every step during the peace negotiations, and that England will support Japan by every diplomatic influence in the ratification of the treaty as arranged at Shimonoseki.

Japan's concessions to England it is impossible to learn, but a definite understanding has been arrived at, and England will support Japan if the latter ignores the protests of the continental powers.

A Gigantic Bluff.

London, April 25.—The Times, in an editorial on the protest of Russia, Germany and France, against the acquirement by Japan of any of the Chinese mainland territory, says the report will arouse much interest in England. Perhaps the feeling predominating will be that of surprise, with a mixture of amusement. The Times doubts the genuineness of the protest, but says if it is genuine Russia is entitled to be congratulated upon having achieved a triumph of diplomacy. The fact that France and Germany are so slightly interested in the question, however, makes it appear like a game of bluff, though Japan will possibly feel through this her wisest course would probably to yield in order to avoid a mistake which might have grave consequences.

British and U. S. Interests One.

Sir Henry H. Howorth, M.P., has written a letter to The Times, in which he declares that it is in the interest of England to formulate a common policy with the United States in regard to the far east.

The Pall Mall Gazette approves the ideas expressed by Sir Henry Howorth, and says: "America has received many marks of respect from China and Japan, and joint diplomatic action with the United States would prevent stronger action on the part of others. Our stake upon every side of the Pacific, in China, Canada and Australia, forbids us to remain passive.

NEWFOUNDLAND AND UNION.

The Legislature Adjourns to Await Canada's Proposals, the Delegates Making No Report.

St. John's, Nfld., April 26.—Parliament opened to-day. The Confederation delegates will not report, because they have no terms from Canada to submit. The Canadian Government did not propose any terms which could possibly be entertained by the Government and the Legislature, but the terms proposed by the Newfoundland delegates are still under the consideration of the Canadian Cabinet.

While the matter is still open the Newfoundland delegates will not prejudice negotiations by any reports. The House will adjourn this evening for two weeks, when, anticipating that the Canadian Cabinet will have reached a conclusion, the delegates will report.

The seal fishery has turned out to be the largest in years, and the cod fish markets are also reported better. The Belle Isle Iron Mine will open in a few days, giving employment to a large number. There is now little if any destitution in St. John's, and soup kitchens are practically closed.

Another despatch says: The Whiteway party met last night to receive the report of the delegates who were sent to Ottawa to consult the officials there, in regard to confederation. The delegates made a report of their mission, but the terms proposed by Canada were not made public.

A statement was made to the effect that Canada had submitted proposals, which they rejected. The delegates then submitted counter proposals, which Canada is still considering. A large majority of the Whiteway party is opposed to confederation and it is not improbable that the delegates will abandon the question of confederation altogether.

The Legislature adjourned for a fortnight and will then hear Canada's answer.

The adjournment of the Legislature is surprising to all classes, and it is believed that the Government has become alarmed at the extent of the opposition which is developing in the country against Federation and is trying to arrange an alternative course.

The Telegraph, a Whitewayite organ, announces a policy of retrenchment and strict economy in the hope of preserving Newfoundland's independence. The Whitewayites hope that if forced to abandon the plan of Confederation, to appeal to the United States pork packers and millers, who ship pork and flour to Newfoundland, believing they will float a loan, giving good security, so as to keep the market in their own hands. The Americans who are engaged in the fishery industry on the Newfoundland coast are also expected to help with the same object in view.

The chances of Confederation have decreased greatly in the minds of the party followers, although Premier Whiteway strenuously insists upon it, holding that nothing will be left otherwise than bankruptcy. If the colony is unable to meet the interests on the loans due on June 30 next it must default, and the constitution will be abrogated, as England is ruling Newfoundland as a Crown colony.

Why An Archbishop Should Make a Will.

St. Louis, April 26.—The visit of Archbishop Ryan of Philadelphia to this city is to induce old Archbishop Kenrick to make a will. According to Catholic rules of government, all church buildings, lands and property are held in fee simple by the Archbishop, and very serious consequences might arise from his dying intestate. The Archbishop is now in his 90th year, and is not at all times rational. He has a large number of relatives in Ireland and this country, who, in the event of his sudden death, might come into possession of all the property. Millions of dollars are involved.

A Sentence of 45 Years.

The Baltic Ship Canal.

Germany does well to make the formal opening of the great Baltic ship canal next June a ceremonial affair of the first magnitude. When ships of the largest burden can pass by a protected short cut of sixty miles' length from the North Sea to the Baltic, the ugliest as well as the oldest problem of North European navigation will have been solved. Incidentally, it will destroy what little remains of Denmark's commercial importance.

Copenhagen has endeavored to forestall disaster by making itself into a free port and spending large sums of money upon dock and harbor improvements, but we fear all in vain. It is incredible that any shipping will hereafter be sent into Danish waters, to round the tiresome Jutland peninsula, and brave the dangers of the treacherous passage of the sound, which can take advantage of the shorter and entirely safe route across Holstein. Where the commercial supremacy of the Baltic will resettle itself when once it quits Copenhagen is not clear. Hamburg is very confident about its own succession to those rich honors. Ancient Lubeck is projecting an Elbe-Trave canal, by means of which she hopes to divert the increased traffic and wealth to herself. The Courland port of Libeau has spent £250,000 in enlarging its facilities for the competition, and even St. Petersburg, which with its new deep-water dock in the Neva, becomes a seaport this year for the first time, has visions of maritime greatness based on this novel rearrangement of trade currents. While these rival claims are as yet in the air, the advantages to British shipping are tangible and immediate. Not least among these advantages may be counted the increased incentives to peace which the financial importance of keeping this great canal open will give to the German Empire.—London Saturday Review.

This Will Help to Make Things Look as Good as New.

Almost everyone has about the house some articles of brass that are discolored and ugly looking, but are for divers reasons retained and would be prized were it not for their unattractive appearance and the extremely unpleasant odors that attaches to anything brought in contact with them. It has been asserted by an eminent chemist that a durable and handsome color may be put upon brass by a very simple process. Dissolve one drachm each of sal ammoniac and verdigris in a quart of water. Let this stand over night, covered from the dust, then add three pints of water and strain through a fine cloth. Clean the brass thoroughly from any greasy substance that may attach to it. This is best done in a sal soda bath, after which the piece must be rinsed in clear hot water, then dried and heated over a charcoal fire until the moistened finger will give the hissing sound so familiarly to those who use laundry iron. Immediately coat the surface of the brass with the prepared liquid, laid on with a brush or a soft rag free from lint. As soon as the coating is dry apply another. It is sometimes necessary to put on ten or fifteen coats and twenty are more desirable. This gives a beautiful brownish color not unlike good bronze. If the coats are thoroughly dried between applications, the finish is exceedingly durable. It certainly has the merit of being inexpensive and entirely does away with the disagreeable odor. Although the application of so many coats seem tedious, yet they are put on with great rapidity when one begins and the finished article is so handsome that it well repays the trouble.

Better So.

"No," said the "emancipated" young woman. "Harold and I will not marry. The engagement is broken off."

"What was the trouble?"

"He does not agree with me in politics, and I am compelled to believe that his ideas about housekeeping are hopelessly crude and chaotic."—Washington Star.

Cold That Kills and Cold That Cures.

In England severe cold generally kills a good many people; in certain parts of North America cold still more severe puts new life into them. It requires no argumentation to show that there must be a definite reason for this. The chief reason is that English cold is mostly damp. while in North America it is mostly dry. There is the greatest difference in the world between dry air and damp air. The former is usually air pure and simple, possessing a full quantity of oxygen, and often charged highly with ozone. The latter consists of air mixed with the vapor of water. When the former air, fully oxygenated, is breathed, it stimulates more powerfully than champagne. The latter, less oxygenated, and charged with the vapor of water, not only does not stimulate, it depresses.—Public Opinion

"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time, I tried a great many medicines which were highly recommended, but none gave me relief. I yielded to his persuasion, bought the six bottles, and took the contents of three of these bottles without noticing any direct benefit. Before I had finished the fourth bottle, my hands were as

Tired of Politics

The Toronto News says: Harry Corby, M. P., and family will leave for Europe on May 21st and will spend a year abroad. This will probably mean that he will be out of the country when the next general election takes place. Corby is tired of politics and is anxious to be out of Parliament.

They Traded Horses.

A case of horse stealing occupied the attention of Magistrate Flint this morning. It appears that a man named Coulter of Hungerford, traded horses with a man named Hudgins of the same township. He became dissatisfied with the trade and went to the stable of the latter and exchanged the horses again. The magistrate laid the case over until Friday next.

"After years of dyspeptic misery, I can at last eat a good square meal without its distressing me," gratefully exclaimed one whose appetite had been restored by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This remedy wonderfully sharpens the appetite and improves digestion.

When so many people are taking and deriving benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla, who don't you try it yourself? It is highly recommended.

THE WEBLING SISTERS

A Splendid I. O. O. F. Anniversary Concert to Which the Odd Fellows did not Come

Surely as it was with them of old time when they kept the good wine until the last, so the best numbers of this season's programme of entertainments have been reserved for the close. The entertainment that the three talented Webling Sisters, assisted by Miss F. M. Kendricks as pianist presented last night to a mere handful of people would have done ample credit to a crowded house. An entertainment, more varied, of better quality, or more cleverly presented has never graced the Belleville stage. The three talented sisters bring with them from the old land a pronounced English accent such as the American cultivates but is pleasant in being natural.

The programme opened with a delightful piano solo by Miss Kenricks, and she continued during the evening to make pleasant the opportunities afforded of viewing the scenic painting of the curtain. "Helen and Modus" a selection from Sheridan Knowles, "Hunchback" was presented by Miss Lucy and Miss Rosalind with a verity and grace that won over their auditors from the start. The recital of "The sleigh" by Miss Peggy. though a well studied piece, was thought by many to be slightly marred by an overabundant bodily energy. "The dance of the summer flowers" by Miss Rosalind and Miss Lucy was a poem of grace and motion and a most pleasing exhibition of terpsichorian high art.

All three sister took part in the presentation of act II, scene I of the Taming of the Shrew and it was done with a dash and naturalness that was charming. A song "May I have the pleasure" by Miss Lucy took the audience by storm and they demanded an encore. "An April Jest," a delightful little commedy with a last century setting, especially written for the sisters by Arthur T. Weston was most entertaining. It introduced an old time minuts that everyone enjoyed and each part was taken with decided ability and unquestionable good taste. The program closed with a patriotic sketch "Britainia" that appealed to both the patriotic and artistic sentiments Miss Peggy was "Britannia," Miss Rosalind "Ireland," Miss Lucy "Scotland." The sketch included some good elocutionary work by Britannia and national dances by "Scotland" and "Ireland."

All together it was a most delightful entertainment and it was strange that Odd Fellows did not turn out to an I. O. O. F. Anniversary.

The Very Latest.

Monday Nights Attraction.

Read what the Lindsay Post, of Tuesday, has to say of Boyle's players. The Company appears at the Opera House all next week. "Boyle's company of players opened a three nights' engagement at the Academy, last evening presenting the comedy 'Jane' in three acts. A fair house greeted their appearance, and the good work of individual members of the company was liberally applauded as the play progressed. The specialties between the acts were well received, an encore being demanded in each case. Fred Forest, baritone, sang "When Summer Comes Again," responding to an encore with "The Girl I Left Behind me." Messrs. Butler and Perry, champion clog dancers, were recalled as was also May Bell, who sang 'Company B,' and 'I don't want to play in your yard.' A characteristic feature of the play was the abundance of music, vocal and instrumental." Prices 15, 25 and 35 cents.

He Wants to Row.

Erastus D. Roger of Schuyler, Saratoga County, N. Y., has issued the following card: "I hereby challenge J. G. Gaudaur of Orillia, Ont., to row a three-mile single scull boat race for the championship of America and $1000 a side. The place to be mutually agreed upon, or the offering the greatest purse."

This will be an interesting bit of news to the Regatta committee and one that will give them a chance to hustle.

DEAR SIRS.—Until lately I suffered continually from headache caused by constipation, which rendered my life a burden to myself and others. After trying doctors and remedies without number and with no good results, I was advised to try B. B. B. I now rejoice that I did so, for two bottles have completely cured me. I now eat well and my digestion is perfect. I believe there is no remedy equal to B. B. B., and I recommend it to all sufferes.

Various Irish Bulls.

A London paper recently offered a prize for the best specimen of an Irish "bull." The one which secured the prize was the statement of a politician protesting against the income tax: "They'll keep cutting the wool off the sheep that lays the golden eggs until they pump it dry." This seems to us only a shade better than the tirade of Congressman Tim Cambell against the New York police force pantata: "If these men were landed on an uninhabited island they wouldn't be there an hour before they would have their hands in the pockets of the naked savages." Almost on a par with these are statement of two sweet girl graduates, one of whom explains that "Along the untrodden paths of the future we can see the hidden footprints of an unseen hand," and the other that "We pursue the shadow, the bubble bursts and leaves the ashes in our hands."

Serious Accident

On Saturday evening last while Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Johnson were driving home from Madoc their horses took fright at a small fire in Mr. John Stewart's garden, and making a sudden jump, the buggy was overturned, pitching the occupants out. Mrs. Johnson was unfortunate enough to have an arm broken and be otherwise injured about the head and face. Mr. Johnson was uninjured, and no damage was done to either horses or rig.—North Hastings Review.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S HOME WORK

As a Rule They Have Only What is Necessary—An Interview with Principal Gardiner

The home work that school children have to do is a subject upon which a good many parents are always ready to express very vigorous opinions, and of course it is their right, barring the cuss words that escape some of the gentlemen unawares, but few parents have any personal knowledge upon which to decide as to the merits of home work and many regard the heavy and wearisome tasks simply as a nuisance. An ONTARIO representative had a chat with Principal Gardiner the other day about the matter and he in reply to a query as to whether there were many complaints said:

"An individual parent here and there may complain of a certain individual case, because there is always some fault to find with teaching, but I get a great many more complaints that the children do not get enough work to do at home than to the contrary. Of course there are individual teachers who give too much work, and there are individual days in the week when the work is heavier than on other days."

"How long does it take a scholar of average intelligence to do the work required of him at home."

"It would be impossible to answer that. Take the higher classes, and of course their work is heavier and they probably spend more time on it. The Collegiate Institutes are the places to start if any reform is to be made in this direction, they set the pace, and with them the work is about 99 per cent.

"Do you think there is any reason for this movement?"

"I think there is some little reason for it, and if I were convinced that the great bulk of the people wanted no home lessons I suppose I would quit it at once. I believe that this is the fairest town that a teacher could ever work in, but that does not preclude some persons from finding fault."

"Could not individual complaints against home lessons be easily disposed of?"

"Yes if any person came to me and said that a certain child had too much work to do at home it could easily and satisfactorily arranged. I think that would be the best way and much better than writing through the press."

"What is the character of the home work?"

"There is a phase of the case that is not considered by the parents. They do not discriminate in the work which the scholars get to do. The greater part of the home lessons is review work, and very seldom is any new work given. If they were given perfectly new work to do, work which they had no knowledge of there would be more cause for complaint.

From Principal Gardiner's remarks it will be seen that while he considers that there is cause for perhaps a few complaints, which might be easily settled if they were made to the teachers, there is no cause for a general condemnation of the whole system of home study. If a certain child is not physically able to attend to the work assigned, a word from the parent or guardian to the principal or teacher would remedy the matter. The work could be modified, or if necessary cancelled altogether. In the higher classes, however, where the amount of work is only in keeping with the physical and intellectual capacity of the pupil, there is no reason why the homework and study should be absolutely abolished.

THAT MISAPPROPRIATION

No explanation has come yet to Monday night's mis-appropriation of $100 of the city funds given as a bonus to the Sun. An ex-chairman of the Finance Committee remarked to an ONTARIO representative this morning that this promise of the Sun's to reproduce its column and a half about Belleville in 200 other Canadian papers was the verriest nonsense he had ever heard of. It was simply a bonus to the Sun.

Other citizens are beginning to see it in that light too and they are wondering what possessed the Finance Minister that he allowed it to go through unchallenged.

The Sun promises that the column and a half shall appear in 200 other papers and be read by a million and a half to two millions of people. That is, to take the million and a half estimate, the 200 papers will have an average of 7,500 readers, and reckoning five readers to each subscriber would make an average circulation for the 200 papers of 1500. There are not 200 papers of 1500 circulation in Canada, and unless you include all the large city dailies 200 papers cannot be got that will average 1500 subscribers. Of course times are hard and advertising is cheap but the papers have not yet reached the point when it is necessary to give away a column and a half to oblige the fatuous and infantile Sun.

Had business men been making the deal on the city's side they would have asked for a list of the papers the articles are to appear in. The Industrial Committee have proved themselves foolish and purile or senile in their methods of doing the city's business but it is doubtful even yet if any of them would contract for advertising space for themselves without knowing what paper the "ads" would appear in.

It might be asked, too, why this motion like others entailing expenditure was not referred to the Finance Committee?

The late G. D. He died in the triumphs of faith, and has gone before to that better land. His bereaved widow and family have the sympathy of the community in their affliction.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.

But to-day a Highlander explains his Satanic Majesty's knowledge of Gaelic by reminding us that Satan was at one time an arch-angel in heaven and of course learned the Gaelic at that time."

An Actor's Mistake

(From Harper's Young People.)

An amusing story was told some years ago of E. A. Sothern, a famous wit and actor. Upon a certain evening he was invited to two entertainments, one for children, and the other a reception for grown people. Fond of children, Sothern decided to go to the party given for the little ones, and thinking it would be a great joke to go into the parlor on all fours and roaring like a bear, he did so, much to the amusement of the guests and his own subsequent unhappiness, for once in the middle of the room he looked up and saw that he had made a mistake in the house, and had played bear for the grown people and not for the children.

HOW A BRIDE WAS WON.

Sharp Business Practice of Young Mr. Labouchere, a Clerk.

In 1882 Mr. Labouchere, a relative of the present M.P. of that name, was clerk in the banking house of Hope of Amsterdam.

One day he was sent by his parents to Mr. Baring, the celebrated London banker, to negotiate a loan.

He displayed in the affair so much ability as to entirely win the esteem and confidence of the English banker.

"Faith," said Labouchere one day to Baring, "your daughter is a charming creature. I wish I could persuade you to give me her hand."

"Young man, you are joking; for seriously you must allow that Miss Baring could never become the wife of a simple clerk."

"But," said Labouchere, "if I were in partnership with Mr. Hope?"

"Oh, that would be quite a different thing; that would entirely make up for all other deficiencies.'

Returned to Amsterdam, Labouchere said to his patron:

"You must take me into partnership."

"My young friend, how can you think of such a thing? It is impossible. You are without fortune, and——"

"But if I became the son-in-law of Mr. Baring?"

"In that case the affair would be soon settled, and so you have my word."

Fortified with these two promises Labouchere returned to England, and two months after married Miss Baring, because Mr. Hope had promised to take him into partnership, and he became allied to the house of Hope on the strength of that promise of marriage.

About Blushing Women.

Some time ago a man took it upon himself to assert that the modern woman has forgotten how to blush. The imputation was launched at femininity in general with so much bitterness and asperity that one might gather therefrom that blushing is a virtue, and that not to blush is criminal. Whatever the connection between this sudden heightening of color and innocence in the case of women, however, the blush is considered a sign of grace by men. Cynics have always maintained that women can cry at anything, and at a moment's notice, and it is indeed pretty well known that many actresses can squeeze out real tears nightly at the proper moment; but blushing is more difficult to acquire as an art.

Blushes are evidently considered as important by the generality of men. For instance, to call a man "an unblushing scoundrel" is a distinct slur on his character, and to tell another that you blush for him used at one time to be a pretty common form of insult. Even now the phrase "we blush to relate," is to be found in our daily newspapers. The poet Young lays it down in his "Night Thoughts," that "the man who blushes is not quite a brute." Darwin's observations determined the fact that blushing is confined to the human species.—Philadelphia Press.

Yellow as a guinea.—The complexion in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick head ache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURES which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels there after to become regular. High professional sanction has been accorded to it; and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00, Sample Bottle 10 cents. THE ODDFELLOW'S AT HOME

A Large Crowd in Attendance and a Pleasant Evening Spent

The "at home" given last night by No. 81 Lodge of the I. O. O. F. in their hall on Front st. was a great success. The spacious hall was filled to the doors, and a great many were oblidged to stand. A good programme was carried out and refreshments were served at the close. Afterwards those who wished tripped the light fantastic and a great many took part in this popular amusement. The music was furnished by Chalaupka's orchestra.

S. G. Chamberlain occupied the chair which position he filled with grace and tact. The programme opened with a selection from the I. O. O. F. band which was much appreciated. The B. A. M. Quartette composed of Messrs. L. Benmore, F. Beatty, S. Lennox, W. E. Thomas, S. Burrows, C. H. Vermilyea, Geo. Fax and F. Lewis sang a number of selections which pleased the audience immensley. Mr. S. Burrows followed with the song, Our Jack's Come Home To-day and sang it as no one but Burrows of Belleville can. Miss Sager followed with the recitation Not Guilty which received loud applause. Mr. S. Lennox sang his funny song Kilililoo which brought down the house. Miss Jessie Robertson recited The Ride of Jessie McNeill in her usual charming manner. F. Lewis sang "Girl Wanted" and the mechanical effects were also introduced. The song created a sensation that almost ended in a panic. Miss Iva and Earnest Dickens, two little tots sang and recited in a pleasing manner. Mr. George Fax sang "Swim out O'Grady" which left the audience in paroxysms of laughter. And although he was strongly appealed to for an encore he with becomming modesty did not respond. Miss Lazier followed with a recitation in her usual clever style. Little Miss Fritz sang a vocal solo which was followed with a recitation from Mr. W. C. Mikel which was very funny and kept the audience in continual bursts of laughter. Mr. S. Burrows and Mr. S. Lennox each contributed another solo which with God Save the Queen brought the musical part of the program to a close. Refreshments were then served and were followed by dancing which was kept up until an early hour this morning.

A MEETING OF THE BATTALION

The Men Will Discuss a Proposed Visit to Peterboro

The officers of the Peterboro Batt. who were in the city the other day and were so hospitably entertained by the officers of the 15th endeavored to negotiate for a visit of Belleville's soldier boys to Peterboro on the Queen's birthday. The expenses of the trip, both while at Peterboro and for transportation must be borne by the visiting battalion and on Monday evening a meeting of the battalion will be held in the armoury to give the men an opportunity to discuss the matter and decide whether or not they will accept the 57th's pressing invitation.

The fact that a man is a member of the Batt. means of course that he has a personal interest in the welfare and progress of the corps. Certainly nothing at the present juncture would tend more effectually to sustain the efforts of Col. Henderson and his staff of officers to complete as satisfactory organization as possible than a muster for a visit to Peterboro.

If the 15th visit Peterboro on the 24th it will mean that the 57th will return the visit on the same terms in July.

So it is with the visits of Prof. Dorenwend to Belleville. On his last visit he was so busy that many ladies and gentlemen were unable to be attended to. Prof. Dorenwend is undoubtedly one of the leaders of his profession on this continent—his skill in arranging the coverings for the head of either lady or gentleman is well known. His goods are acknowledged to be perfect and in everyway true to nature. They are the best protection to the head besides giving a refined and youthful expression to the face. Call and examine these marvels of his art and have them fitted in order to judge the effect. Consult him about your hair, he will (free of charge) give you advice as to the preservation of it. He will be at Hotel Quinte Saturday 11th May.

At the Queens Next Week

The Peterboro Examiner of, yesterday contains the following interesting notice:—"The dramatic company known as Boyles Players opened a three night's stand at the Opera House last evening with a large audience in attendance. "Mabel Heath," a five act comedy-drama, was well presented and scored a decided success. The singing of May Bell and Perry Forrest were received with applause, as was the clog dancing of Messrs. Butler and Gill. The company is a well balanced one and will doubtless draw well as soon as their merit becomes known to the public."

COMMUNICATION.

While the columns of the ONTARIO are at all times open for correspondence on all matters of public interest, it must in all cases be understood that we are in no way responsible for, nor necessarily endorse the views so expressed

Albert College and the Belleville High School.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE ONTARIO:

DEAR SIR,—I have for sometime thought of giving expression to my views on certain matters pertaining to the Belleville High school and to Albert college but have not done so, for fear that I might be misunderstood. The mention of Albert College in connection with the High School Building at the meeting of the School Board compels me to do so.

I considered the late Dr. Wright a ripe scholar and an able teacher and valued highly his personal friendship. The present principal Mr. Milburn is able and capable and the somewhat unsatisfactory state of affairs is none of their making. Many if not all of the members of the School Board are experienced men who have the best interest of the High School and the city at heart. Therefore "My quarrel is not with men but methods." It is quite true that a new building for the High School could not effect Albert College, but why? The reason is obvious—the County of Hastings is at present practically closed to Albert College. Comparatively few students, except those taking up special work, attend the college from the County of Hastings. The college is magnificently successful, but not because of favorable school regulations in this county but in spite of unfortunate ones. The County Council pays to each High School interested a stipulated amount for each pupil attending from the county.

This amount is realized by general taxation so that to the individual the High Schools are free.

Now, it is not probable that students in regular collegiate work will attend Albert College and pay a fee of $24 a year, when the High Schools located in all parts of the county are free. The County Council is compelled to thus provide for county pupils in attendance at the High Schools situated in the county, but the School law makes it possible for the council to collect for each such pupil a fee of $10.00 which the Hastings County Council does not do. The work done in our High Schools is largely a professional work. Some students are prepared to teach; others having some profession in view are prepared to pass matriculation, etc. Ought not the individual thus profiting to pay part of the expense and the balance necessary to keep our schools efficient be met by general taxation. The answer of the Minister of Education to the Patrons and the Opposition in the Legislation was that the High Schools were becoming more and more self-sustaining.

The Belleville High School situated in a separate municipality does not come under the above regulations but by an agreement arrived at between the County Council and the School Board, the council pays a stipulated amount for each student in attendance at the Belleville High School from the country.

Whatever reason the County Council may assign for their action, these reasons do not by any means apply to the Belleville School Board. This agreement would appear upon its surface to be a financial gain. But is it so ultimately? When the High School is thus made absolutely free it is crowded. This places the very best teacher at disadvantage and renders the highest efficiency an impossibility. Then the additional numbers soon require additional outlay for teachers. Even Inspector Seath in his last report on the city High School virtually orders the engagement of another teacher. Then further additional students secured by this at least debatable means require additional class-rooms or possibly a new building. So that it becomes a very doubtful financial gain. The sooner the agreement with the council is annulled the better. Let the School Board place a fee of say $20 per aunumn upon all non-resident students. Then those having a definite puspose in view will attend the High School and others would seek through the Business Colleges or elsewhere a shorter path to secure a livelihood. Nothing that the School Board could do, would place Albert College under a greater disadvantage so far as county pupils are concerned than it is now placed.

I have seen several references to the efficiency of the city High School and with these, speaking generally, I am fully agreed. Belleville has every reason to be proud of its schools and colleges—the High School not excepted.

It has had an honorable record and in Primary Drawing has taken probably the first place. However, the highest efficiency is scarcely possible by the methods that have been adopted. The High School cannot be said to compare favorably with similar schools in many of the towns of equal population. Let us take the Peterboro Collegiate Institute and compare methods and results: In 1894 Peterboro passed 35 primary candidates, 9 matriculants, 22 junior leaving, and 9 senior leaving, being 68% of the total number writing—a magnificent record. The results in 18 3 were equally good. I have no desire to be offensive but the record of the Belleville High School in its very best year suffers seriously by comparison. In Peterboro residents pay $1 00 per month, and non-residents $25 per year quarterly in advance—the School Board having refused to make the agreement with the county council that the Belleville School Board has made. The fees realize $2500 per year and the balance required, $6500, is realized by general taxation. Belleville realizes $4100 by taxation and nothing by actual fees. Then take the salaries paid to the staff: The Principal secures $1700, two assistants $1100 each, two $1000 each, and two $900 each. What is the result? Every teacher on the Peterboro staff is an honor graduate and an experienced specialist, and the school is able to attract senior students.

Put side by side with this the fact that an altogether inexperienced undergraduate, although the makings of a good teacher, is asked to teach both moderns and classics. There is a false economy which may become altogether too costly.

In my judgment a change of method is desirable rather than a change of building. The sooner the Belleville School Board adopts somewhat the methods of the Peterboro School Board the better for the High School and the better for Albert College.

Yours sincerely,
W. P. DYER.

PULPIT AND MORALITY.

AN ADDRESS BY REV. MR. ROBERTS TO THE MINISTERIAL ASS'N.

The Minister's Duties in Teaching Morality—Doctrinal Truths Must not be Forgotten—A Woman Preacher on Morality.

The following address on "what should the the teachings of the pulpit be in regard to morals" was delivered by Rev. Mr. Roberts before the Ministerial Association.

This question indicates that the men who occupy pulpits are regarded as teachers; and they are pre-eminently so. We are disposed very highly to appreciate the important and invaluable service rendered by those who occupy the position of public instructors, and who in the various departments of our educational system are devoting time, talents and life to the impartation of knowledge in the schools, colleges and universities of our country. But there are no teachers who, on account of their call by God—their appointed relationship to men—the far reaching influence of their ministrations as they affect the weal or woe of humanity, in time or eternity: there are none on whom so great a responsibility rests, as on those whose duty it is to preach the glorious gospel of the blessed God. Their teachings have imparted to men a knowledge of the most important verities, have exerted an influence the most potent to guide and enoble: and where they have been most appreciated and obeyed there have been displayed the highest personal virtues—the greatest domestic happiness—the widest social blessedness, with commercial integrity, material progress and stability.

How necessary then that the pulpit should realize its mission, have just conceptions of its duties, and faithfully and fearlessly perform them.

After justifying ministers who give special prominence to the great doctrinal truths of Christianity, he continues:

True religion is life; is has its characteristics, its experiences, and enjoyments. Its peace that passeth understanding; its joy in the Holy Ghost; its assurance of faith; its hope that blooms with immortality and eternal life. It has its communion with God—fellowship with Jesus and in dwelling of the Holy Ghost. The experimental part of godliness, needs pulpit presentation and the benefits arising therefrom are many and great—But while we value and appreciate Historical Doctrinal and experimental preaching we are no less impressed with the importance and necessity of what may be termed Practical or Ethical preaching—or that which pertains to morals. The most limited acquaintance with the word of God can hardly fail to impress us with the fact that its great design is so to influence our lives and control them that they shall be in accord with God's will and be a faithful embodiment of his commands. Hence in the presentation of human duty while it may be well to show that what God requires of us is right, that there is a fitness and utility in it, it is well to base our obligations to obey not so much upon our ability to recognize the fitness as upon the fact that law rests upon the will of the Great Law giver. His authority, wisdom and goodness enforces all duty—God is the author of the moral law as given on Senai. The Son of God expounded and reiterated it in his sermon on the Mount, while the Holy Ghost through the Apostles declared that Love was the spirit in which it was to be obeyed and fulfilled. And while we recognize that vital godliness is more than Morals, yet we believe that every precept of the Moral Law must be obeyed in fulfilment of the Divine will and in the accomplishment of the Divine purpose. And to secure this the pulpit must explain, enjoin and enforce practical obedience to the moral law.

I am not sure whether the framer of the question discussed did not intend by it to enquire whether it was not the province of the pulpit to deal with Morals, in the sense of condemning all departures from the Moral Law that are so often and strikingly manifested in our land at the present time—If that were the extent then I think the best and most effectual way to do it is to enforce all service and duty as God requires it at our hand and when necessary call special attention to any condition of society that conflicts with that service or antagonizes that duty.

Mr. Roberts then suggests that the minister should urge man's duty to God and condemn the foolish denial of God's existence and should "expatiate upon the blessedness of the Holy Sabbath." also "that command first with promise to honor father and mother" and the command "thou shalt not kill."

Continuing he said: On the 7th commandment the marriage relationship—the sancity of the family, and our civilization largely depend. Let this law be trampled in the dust, generally disregarded, and consequences ruinous to the church and state would ensue. This is a subject that requires wise, prudent handling, but social impurity is in our midst, shocking evidences of it are frequently revealed. And as this is an evil that develops rapidly and has in every age called forth divine condemnation and judgment on individuals, cities and nations, let the pulpit not be silent of this great wrong. Our social well-being demands it.

He concluded with a reference to the command "Thou shat not steal" with special reference to political integrity, as that tantamont, above all others in this age.

A WOMAN MINISTER TALKS ON MORAL STANDARDS.

At the recent New England Conference of Charities, Correction and Philanthrophy, held in Newport, R. I., in the discussion of a paper upon "Medical Aid to the Worthy and Unworthy," the Rev. Anna Garlin Spencer made the following remarks:

"I heartily agree with Dr. Fleischner when he says that the woman who makes a trade of her maternity, or the woman who has no moral back-bone, who under good conditions, has voluntarily as it would seem, or through excessive weakness and taint of character, given up her birthright of chastity—that woman should be subjected to the utmost deterrence possible. But when I look upon the young girls coming as strangers from their home into our cities, into our manufactories, into our common boarding-houses—under the influence of many superintendents and bosses who are not fit to speak to a decent woman; when I know the history of girl after girl who, in one way and another, has passed through my hands, and know that it has been an extraordinary demand upon an ordinary nature that has resulted in the downfall; when I see society of every class condone absolutely the rankest of social offences on the part of men; I say we are too one-sided in our judgement when we deal with one sinner and say nothing of the other.

* * * "It is a very good thing that society has established a tendency towards chastity in woman by its punishment of unchastity. But I do not think the converse is true, that it is good for society that it has let man go so free. Man's weakness is the result of ages of yielding to a temptation that was not considered to be vile. That is why he is weak; that is why he has consented to brand himself with a moral incapacity. It is because it has been such a different thing for the two sexes. It is true that motherhood carries with it a certain form of punishment for wrong-doing, but it carries with it, too, a certain element of regeneration that the man's illicit relation never has. It has in it a potent help for the women, if she meets the right influence at the right hour, that makes it no longer a curse and a shame but a lever for moral information. I know of what I speak; and I speak because I know. I would not lessen for one moment in the mind of any one the sense of condemnation for illicit relations on the part of women. But I do say that our whole social system—our double stardard of morals—the fact that in cases without number where this thing occurs, the girl is poor and friendless, the man is rich and honored and perhaps the father of a family; the fact that these two things stand over against one another makes it not such a violent outrage against the woman nature as has been pictured. She is weak, too. It does not represent to her, as she first faces it, the real temptation; it represents a little more ease in living, the chance for a pleasant ride, a little opportunity for such enjoyment as she sees richer girls have. Her immagination does not grasp the situation; it does not present itself in the bald form. I say, on behalf of both men and women, we have no right to stand in harsh judgment. Far be it from me to forget that men stand in need of pity and help. But the best help to give to men is to demand of them equal purity with women. The very best that we can give is to say, 'There is but one law of righteousness for man and for women.' And I, for one, will never sit and hear the discussion of this question which has burned my soul for years, without rising to say this one word if I am permitted: that we shall never get to the bottom of this question or any other until we look upon each human being, man and woman alike, as equal subjects in the moral kingdom."

A COUPLE OF SHARKS

Attempted to Defraud Front st Merchants To-day but it Didn't Work

This morning a couple of young fellows, strangers in the city and slightly under the influence of I X L, made the rounds of a number of stores and wanted to make purchases offering in payment checks. They visited a number of jewellery stores and wanted to buy gold and silver watches. They also visited W. B. Riggs music store and wanted to purchase a piano. The last place they visited was G. S. Tickalls store and they wanted to purchase some costly furniture. They didn't buy as the cheque which was to be given was not asked for. Their little scheme didn't work as Front st. merchants are not so easily gulled during the present hard times. The police are after the strangers.

THREE NOTED EPISCOPALIANS

Who Have Used Dr Agnew's Catarrhal Powders, and in the Interests of the Suffering Humanity Say How Much it has Done for Them.

In the essencial history of Canada the names of the Right Rev. A. Sweetman, D. D., D. C. L., Lord Bishop of Toronto, and Rev. John Langtry, M. A., D. C. L., stand out prominent, and within his own parish may be added to these the name of the Rev. W. R. Williams, Dr. Langtry's popular curate. These gentlemen believe in acting out the axiom of the Good Book, that, having learned of that which has been a source of benefit to themselves, it is their duty to tell the good news to others. These three clergymen of the Episcopal Church have each used Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder and found that for cold in the head and catarrhal troubles it is a great helper, and over their own signature they have said to the public that these things are so, that others may be likewise benefited and helped.

One short puff of the breath through the blower supplied with each bottle of Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder, diffuses this powder over the surface of the nasal passages. Painless and delightful to use, it relieves in 10 minutes, and permanently cures catarrh, hay fever, colds, headache, sore throat, tonsilitis and deafness. 60 cents Sample free for two 3c stamps. S. A WONDROUS POWER IN TEN CENTS.

A few days ago an Ontario druggist said: "The ladies are buying more Diamond Dyes just now than in past years. They come to me and buy one package as an experiment, and find the dye so easy to use that they now color most of their old clothing, and come out with new gowns, cloaks, jackets, and suits for the whole family. In my experience of 20 years as a druggist, I must say, that Diamond Dyes are the only package dyes that have lived and worked themselves up to the highest point of popularity."

Beware of imitation package dyes, they are frauds and deceptions, and when used cause a vast amount of trouble and disappointment. Ask for the Diamond, see that the name "Diamond" is on each package; refuse all others no matter how strongly you are urged to give them a trial.

WILL THERE BE BLOODSHED?

Little Nicaragua Said to Be in an Ugly Mood.

Corinto, Nicaragua, April 26.—All is quiet here this morning. No English marines have yet been landed.

There has been much signalling and passing to and fro of small boats between the ships.

Great activity was noticed on board yesterday afternoon. The men drilled at the guns for two hours. It was announced that Admiral Stephenson and his officers would visit the port.

Telegraphic orders have been received to show all possible courtesy to the British, but under no circumstances to allow an armed force to land. Over 1400 men are under arms here now. The merchants here offered $12,000 to the Government to help pay Britain's claim, but no answer has yet been received.

The local authorities are making preparations to abandon the town. Whole families are leaving for various parts of the interior.

All arms are being removed from the capitol. The cannons at Fort Cardon, at the entrance of the port, have been removed. New telegraph stations have been established at Paso Caballos, and all the instruments will be taken away from Corinto, thus cutting off communication between Corinto and the interior in the event of occupation by the English.

No popular demonstration has been made, but the prevailing feeling is bitter and is running high against all English people. Hopes are still entertained of intervention by the United States. Admiral Stephenson has informed Special Commissioner Duarte that the ultimatum expires at 12 o'clock midnight on the 26th.

Special Commissioner General Duarte, bearing the reply of the Nicaraguan Government to Admiral Stephenson, and proclamation, arrived yesterday morning from Managua. The reply will not, however, be delivered until the eleventh hour. Although its terms have not been made public, it is understood that it will be of such a nature as to bring about the occupation of Corinto by the English. A permanent session is being held of the Cabinet and leading statesmen at the capitol.

Will Not Pay Until the Last Minute.

New York, April 27.—A special from Managua to The World says: The Government has assurance that it will receive from voluntary subscriptions more than enough to pay the British claim within the time allowed by the ultimatum, but there is a strong feeling among the people against acceding too quickly to Britain's demands, and the Government was deterred by the feeling that if it should seem too ready to obey England it would cause serious international trouble.

There is great excitement here. Two thousand men are ready to march to Corinto at a moment's notice.

An intimate friend of President Cleveland, who is entitled to speak with authority and who has talked with the President about the crisis in Nicaragua, says this Government, while fully alive to the necessity of maintaining the autonomy of American states against foreign encroachments, can find no warrant for interfering to prevent Great Britain or any other country from securing reparation for an offence similar to that charged against Nicaragua. He declared that in the Mosquito affair of a year ago the United States had fully demonstrated its determination not to permit the sovereignty and integrity of Nicaragua to be assailed when American warships were stationed at Bluefields. The attitude of the United States on this question was now as firm as ever it was, but this Government could not undertake to shoulder every quarrel of the Spanish American Republics whose faculty for getting into hot water seemed in some measure attributable to their excessive reliance on this country's help as well as to their impetuous temperaments, their frequently irresponsible and autocratic rulers. If the United States was compelled to take up all such quarrels as the present one it would have no time to devote to the greater questions arising, such as the Venezuelan boundary dispute.

It was his understanding that Nicaragua's difficulty with England would be promptly settled, and all the more quickly because of our position in the matter. He declared, however, that the determination of this Government to preserve Nicaragua's independence and her undisturbed control over her territory was unchanged, and that the United States would forcibly, if necessary, resent any attempt on the part of a European Government to establish itself on this continent.

Honduras Wants to Fight

New York, April 26.—A special from New York, April 27.—A special from Tegucigalpa, Honduras, says: The movement of soldiers towards Cape Gracias Adios continues. This seems to confirm the rumors that Honduras will aid Nicaragua with troops, if needed, in resisting the English. A strong feeling has been aroused throughout Central America against Great Britain.

Confederation and Retrenchment the Main Newfoundland Topics

St. John's, Nfld., April 26.—The results of the Confederation Conference participated in by Newfoundland's delegates just returned from Ottawa, so far as made public yesterday, increase the feeling of uncertainty here. Apparently the mass of the people are opposed to union with Canada, but there is a feeling that no other course is open. The followers of Premier Whiteway seem to be straining every nerve to grapple with the situation without submitting the question to a popular decision. The Whitewayite organ, The Telegram, today published a proposed Government retrenchment scheme, providing for the abolition of a lot of offices and for the reduction of salaries. It is estimated that under the scheme an annual saving of $300,000 could be effected. The plan meets with some favor, but much criticism is evoked because it was not proposed before. The Whitewayites also announce a revision of the tariff during the coming session of the Legislature. Members of the Opposition party in the Legislature accuse them of postponing the legislative session so as to make it impossible for the people to vote on Confederation. A revolt among the Government supporters in the Assembly would have taken place but for the fact that most of the Opposition confederates would then have joined the Government and have decided the question immediately. Reasoning people and the middle classes favor Confederation, but the majority of the people show a disinclination towards its adoption.

Sir Herbert Murray, the British Commissioner, now has 800 men employed on relief works.

JAPAN WILL HOLD HER OWN

In Spite of the Big European Alliance Against Her.

HER REPLY POLITE BUT DEFIANT.

She Will Have the Steady Support of Great Britain and Perhaps of the United States, Too—The Present Situation in the East.

London, April 27.—The latest and most direct information from authoritative sources as to the precise status of the negotiations between Russia, France, Germany and Japan received here is as follows:

The Russian, French and German ministers separately interviewed the Japanese Vice-Minister for Foreign Affairs, under instructions from their respective governments, and presented memoranda stating that the governments of Russia, France and Germany, upon examining the terms of peace imposed by Japan upon China, found that the possession of the Peninsula of Liu Tong, claimed by Japan, would be a constant menace to the capital of China, and at the same time would threaten the independence of Corea and render it non-effective in fact. In this sense and for other reasons, it was stated, it would be a constant menace to the permanent peace of the far east. Consequently the governments of France, Russia and Germany, desiring to show their sincere friendship for the Government of Japan, advise it to renounce the absolute and final possession of the Peninsula of Liu Tong. The memoranda of the three governments make it plain that they are presented in the way of friendly advice to the Japanese Government, and are not intended in any way to convey any open or covert menace.

The Governments of Great Britain and Italy have made it plain that they do not intend to follow the example of Russia, France and Germany, and the great commercial interests of the United States in the far east, which the Japanese-Chinese treaty of peace would largely benefit, lead diplomats to believe that the United States, at this juncture, will not fail to make such a use of its good offices as will prevent Japan from being deprived of the fruits of her victory.

The treaty of peace has already been ratified by the Emperor of Japan, and it would be extremely difficult to make any change. The only effect of Russia's, France's and Germany's attitude must be to encourage the party in China which is opposed to any moderate and reasonable settlement and thus to prolong the war indefinitely.

It may be stated in the most positive terms that the reports thus far circulated, regarding Japan's reply to the powers, are incorrect. The reply had not been sent as late as this evening and from intimations received from the highest and most reliable sources here it may be stated that the reply, while moderate and conciliatory in tone, will not contain any recession from what Japan regards as rightfully her due.

A Washington dispatch says: The protest filed by the three governments was not against the occupation of "Manchurian territory" as asserted, but against the "absolute and final possession of the peninsula of Liu Tong" which commands the Gulf of Pechili and the approaches to Pekin and is substantially the Gibraltar of China. It is on this promontory that Port Arthur is situated. Obviously the possession of this citadel would leave the capital of China at the mercy of Japan. But every advice received has indicated that Japan has waived a claim to absolute and final possession of Port Arthur and has only insisted upon holding it as a hostage until the indemnity shall have been paid. There is no likelihood of the United States taking part in any joint movement one way or the other in regard to this matter.

Japan Has Britain's Active Support.

New York, April 27.—The Sun's London special says that not only has a close understanding existed between England and Japan for several weeks, but both countries are using strong endeavors to persuade the United States Government to become a third member of an informal alliance which will resist any attempt to interfere with the terms of the treaty of peace.

The foreign offices at St. Petersburg, Berlin and Paris discovered a few days ago that they had been completely beaten on the game of diplomacy by England and Russia, Germany and France made no secret of their regret that they did not join Great Britain when the latter suggested intervention at the outset of the war.

Japan, under the circumstances, is almost certain to resist interference, and it is now generally believed that forcible meddling would promptly bring England to the active support of the Mikado's Government. The feeling is universal in Europe that Japan is complete master of the situation, that the continental powers have been over-reached and that unless Russia curbs her national chagrin there will soon be a startling series of events to record.

Japan Willing to Fight Russia.

London, April 26.—The Standard has this despatch from Berlin: The conviction in well-informed quarters is that Japan will prefer to fight Russia rather than renounce her acquired territory. The fact that all the German warships are assembling near Corea does not look like strictly diplomatic intervention. The steel cruiser, Prince Wilhelm, will sail for the east to-morrow.

The Standard says that Japan's reply to the joint protest, although not a definite refusal, is an emphatic non possumus. It discusses France's and Germany's adhesion to Russia, and concludes that they are influenced mainly by a desire to be agreeable to the Czar. "But, whatever their motives," says the writer, "the coalition exists, and must be reckoned with. While paying all respects to the prowess, capacity and resources of the Japanese, one feels like reminding them that the three allied powers are able to bring a resistless force."

Tokyo telegrams received in Vienna assert that when the Mikado and the Chinese Emperor meet, the King of Siam also will be present, and the quadruple alliance of Japan, China, Siam and Corea will be formed.

A Pekin telegram says there is a crisis there. Some of the Generals favor war, and the ratification is uncertain. If the treaty be ratified trouble in the army is likely.

A Tokyo despatch says: The Russian and French fleets in these waters are prepared to stop Japanese communications unless Japan abandons all claims upon territory in Manchuria.

EXPLANATIONS.

In the doorway I met Capt. Worsley. The occurrence did not, at the moment, strike me as significant. I was engrossed with the prospects of the coming interview. How should I break to Flo that I had at last found my true haven, and that the nonsense between herself and me must end?

Flo was sitting on the sofa. I walked up to her with a shame-faced air.

"I've come to tell you something, Flo," said I, in a grave tone.

"Oh, bother; I'm busy," said Flo.

"But it's important. When you hear it——"

"Won't to-morrow do, Dick?"

"No," said I. I was wound up; I should probably be incapable of it to-morrow. "I have come, Flo, to beg your pardon for——"

"Oh, I didn't mind that. I knew it was only your nonsense, Dick."

"My nonsense?" said I. "Oh, I don't mean that. I mean since that Flo. you remember——"

"Look here, my dear boy," interrupted Flo, "I'm thinking about something more important—something I've got to make up my mind about, and I can't listen to you."

Upon this, being somewhat annoyed, I sat down, crossed my legs, and observed calmly:

"Well, I only came to tell you that I was in love with Philippa March."

Flo turned on me swiftly, her preoccupation entirely vanishing.

"I thought you'd listen," I observed, complacently. "Yes, and it's all right, if I can square you. Hullo, Flo, you've done your hair different to-day! I rather like it that way."

Flo was staring at me with wide-open eyes. (I don't know whether I have mentioned that her eyes are brown; they are.)

"It's all right if—— ?" she repeated, as though she had not heard aright.

"If I can square you, you know," said I. "Because you see, in my rooms the other day——"

"And you told that March girl?"

"I think I must have, from what she said," I stammered, feeling rather guilty.

"And you came here by her advice?"

"She thought it only fair to you," I said, hastily.

"To get rid of me?" ended Flo.

"Now, do be reasonable', there's a good girl," I urged, soothingly.

Flo rose to her feet and walked to the writing table.

"Excuse me a moment," said she, sitting down and taking a pen.

"Glad she takes it so coolly,'" said I to myself, and I fell to watching her as she wrote. Certainly I liked the new way of doing her hair; in fact, I preferred it to Philippa's way; there was a coquety about it; Philippa's hair was severe. A chap doesn't always want bracing up.

"Read that," said Flo, rising and sweeping down on me with a written note in her hand.

So I read it. It was short. "Yes—Florence." I turned it over in my hand.

"If," said Flo, with unlimited dignity, "you had not happened to call, I should have written to you in the course of this afternoon——"

"This note?" I asked, looking at it in a puzzled way.

"No not that note. I should have written to release you from your promise to me."

"My dear Flo!" I said, radiant. "Then that's all right. How confoundedly lucky! Why, I've been making myself beastly unhappy and feeling like a brute, when all the time there was nothing in it! Philippa will be awfully glad." And I beamed upon Flo.

"And to inform you," she continued, in the same cold voice, "of my engagement——"

"Hullo!" I cried, sitting straight up.

"To Capt. Worsley."

"That beast!"

"Although you're my cousin, Richard, you have hardly the right——"

"But I was not in the mood to listen. I was walking up and down the room. And I laughed bitterly.

"That's a girl all over!" said I. "You encourage me—hang it, you accept me—yes, you did, practically; and then, without a word to me, you go and take a sweep like——"

"Well, what did you do with Philippa March?" cried Flo, facing me in anger.

"I have come here like a man to—to——"

"Square me," suggested Flo.

"To arrive at an understanding with you. If you had claimed the fulfillment of my promise, I should have—I should have considered the matter, Florence.'

"You're very good," said Flo, her nose in the air. "But, as you see, I don't claim it."

I looked at Flo. It was all over between us. I did not wish to part bad friends.

"You seem to have no regrets, Flo," I observed, a little ruefully.

"Really, I don't see why I should," said Flo.

"Oh, I know I'm not much of a chap," I confessed, humbly; "but with a girl who let me down easy, and didn't expect too much of me, you know——"

"Is that why you went to Philippa March?" asked Flo, suddenly.

"Who made allowances for me," I pursued, not noticing the interruption; "and didn't ask perfection of me——"

"Just what Philippa March would do," observed Flo, with conviction.

I paused in my walk. Flo sat down on the sofa. I sat down on the sofa.

There was a long silence. I was the first to break it.

"Well, I'm sure I hope you'll be happy with that fellow. He seems a glum sort of a dog, though."

"But he's so good, Dick!"

"I must say he's not over-amusing, Flo."

"There are better things than that, Dick."

"I mean one wouldn't call him clever."

"N—no. Perhaps not clever, Dick."

I turned around towards Flo.

"But, of course, all that's nothing if you love him," I observed.

"And you, of course, don't notice the little faults I see in Miss March?"

"Of course not."

"Yes—of course not."

After an interval, Flo said, laying a hand on my arm, "I'm so glad we're parting——"

"It's all for the best," said I gently touching Flo's hand.

"Parting friends, I was going to say, Dick. We shouldn't have got on well together."

"I expect we should have quarreled, Flo."

"Of course, we should have had some good times——"

'Ripping!"

'Trotting about together, and staying on the river——"

"I say!"

"And running over to Paris——"

"By Jove!"

"And—and I don't think Percival—Capt. Worsley—cares much about that sort of thing."

"I know it's poison to Phil—to Miss March."

There was a silence longer than any of the previous ones.

Then I said—and I must observe that I am not in the habit of doing it before ladies—I said:

"Oh, d—n!"

"Dick!" cried Flo.

I rose. I pointed to Flo's note, which lay on a table.

"Let's have it over," said I sternly. "Put the beastly thing in an envelope."

Flo went to the writing-table.

"Address the beastly thing," I commanded.

Flo took quite a long while addressing it, for it must have been a full minute before she asked:

"Dick, is Jermyn street W. or S. W.? I—I—I don't know."

"S. W.," said I, in gloomy and tragic tones.

"Thank you, Dick. I've done it now."

"Done it! I should think you have," I groaned. "So have I."

"Will you post it?" asked Flo, and she stretched her hand out behind her with the letter between her finger and thumb. But she kept her head the other way, and appeared to be studying the blotting paper.

Well, I went and took the note, and I stole back to the hearthrug.

Flo did not move.

"What a strange lottery is life!" I mused. "Who would have thought of Worsley being your husband!"

"Or Philippa March your wife!" came from the writing-table.

"It seems incredible," I murmured.

"Almost," came from the writing-table.

There was a nice bright fire in the grate. I stood and watched the jumping flame. Flo rose from the writing-table, and, crossing, stood by me; and we both watched the jumping flame.

"Do you remember," asked Flo presently, "'how we used to tell fortunes from the fire?"

Yes; and to see faces there?"

"Yes. I remember, Dick. I don't see anything there now."

"I should like to see something," said I.

"Would you? What? asked Flo.

Now as we happened to be standing, my hand, which held the Captain's letter, was in immediate proximity to Flo's hand, which, as I chanced to observe, held her handkerchief.

"Very much indeed," said I, and I touched Flo's hand with a corner of the letter.

"Oh!" gasped Flo.

I advanced my hand (which, as I say, contained the letter) slowly towards the fire. Flo watched it with a fascinated gaze; she did not move. My hand hovered over the fire; a bright, sudden flash of flame blazed up triumphantly.

"Look, look! Now!" I cried. "What do you see there now?"

Flo turned to me with a swift smile under moist eyes.

"Why, you're——!" I cried.

"There's an eyelash in my eye," said Flo. 'And, Dick, how silly you are! I shall have to write it again."

"In the same way?"

There was yet another pause.

"I suppose," Flo then observed, 'that nobody ever writes a letter twice in quite the same words, do they, Dick?"

I said that they did not.

I went downstairs the happiest man alive. And, I pledge my word, it was not till I reached the corner of the street that the thought struck me, and I cried aloud in dismay:

"By Jove, I haven't done it!"

New York Newspaper Women.

A surprising feature of the nineteenth century has been the sudden appearance and rapid increase of newspaper women in every part of the country, but especially in New York. In 1875 they could have been counted on the fingers of the two hands. In 1895, if we include trade journals, they are to be numbered among the thousands. They began with short stories, society news, and personal gossip. The pent up Utica did not contain their powers long, and in a short time women successfully invaded every field of journalistic work. To-day they are reporters, translators, copy-readers, interviewers, proof-readers, staff writers, telegraph editors, managing editors, publishers, business managers, advertisment solicitors, book reviewers and musical critics.

Opposed at first by the conservative element of the profession, and more strongly objected to by the dissipated and indolent, who saw in them dangerous prospective rivals, they have rapidly won their way onward and upward by the hardest kind of hard work. Their present position has been secured, not by brilliancy or genius, but by fidelity, perseverance and industry.

Many of their number, like Olive Harper, Mrs. Margaret Welch, Mrs. Margaret E. Sangster, Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge, Mrs. Frank Leslie, Mrs. Maud Andrews Ohl, Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, Mrs. Eliza Archard Connor and Mrs. Eliza Nicholson, have attained celebrity through ability and intellectuality of the highest order. Hundreds enjoy deserved distinction in their own craft, and nearly all own an excellent living and possess that great boon, independence. Outside of trade and scientific journalism, in which large numbers are engaged, there are several hundred who are attached to the press, daily, weekly or monthly. Their work constitutes a large portion of the ephemeral literature demanded by New York life, and is daily enjoyed by the million of readers of the great metropolis and its suburbs. But few are known to the outside public, no matter how highly distinguished they may be in their own ranks.—Peterson's Magazine.

PRIZE FIGHTER AND M P.

GREAT FIGHT BETWEEN JOHN GULLY AND "THE GAME CHICKEN."

Gully's Grandson Now Speaker of the British House of Commons—Fought Fifty-Eight Rounds in His First Contest—A Remarkable Exhibition of British Pluck and Endurance.

John Gully was born at Wick, in Gloucestershire—where his father kept the Crown Inn—on August 12st, 1783. When the boy was very young his father removed to Bristol, where he went into the butchering business. The elder Gully died suddenly and his widow attempted with ill success to carry on the business. In order to assist his mother the lad John left the Grammar School at the age of thirteen, but no efforts of his could save the smash. He then went to Bath and established himself anew, but old liabilities following him he again became bankrupt and at the age of twenty-two he set out for London. He had not been there long when his Bristol creditors found him out, so in order to prevent their taking him back to Bristol he got himself arrested for a small debt and thrown into the King's Bench Prison. Life in a debtors' prison has been described by many an able pen and it will suffice to say here that of these prisons the least undesirable was the King's Bench—indeed some prisoners there were very comfortably placed and it may easily be supposed that the youthful bankrupt could have been obliged to put up with far worse quarters than those which he was forced to occupy.

He had been incarcerated for some time and was one day playing rackets in the recreation court when who should stroll in to visit a "pal" but Henry Pearce, the famous "Game Chicken." Pearce was a Bristol boy and a butcher by trade also, so the two had a chat over old times. Since Gully had last met him the Game Chicken had become one of the brightest stars in the pulistic firmament by his famous victory over the gigantic Stephen Carte. Gully himself had a local reputation as a clever boxer and in order to brighten him up a bit the Game Chicken suggested a bout with the gloves. To the famous one's astonishment the young prisoner was well able to look after himself, so Pearce departed promising to do what he could to get the lad set at liberty.

A Common Affliction
Permanently Cured by Taking
AYER'S Sarsaparilla
A CAB-DRIVER'S STORY.
"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time, I tried a great many medicines which were highly recommended, but none gave me relief. I was at last advised to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by a friend who told me that I must purchase six bottles, and use them according to directions. I yielded to his persuasion, bought the six bottles, and took the contents of three of these bottles without noticing any direct benefit. Before I had finished the fourth bottle, my hands were as Free from Eruptions
as ever they were. My business, which is that of a cab-driver, requires me to be out in cold and wet weather, often without gloves, and the trouble has never returned."—THOMAS A. JOHNS, Stratford, Ont.
Ayer's The Only Sarsaparilla
Admitted at the World's Fair.
Ayer's Pills Cleanse the Bowels.

That very night Pearce fell in with Fletcher Reid, a wealthy sporting gentleman of a type which has long since become extinct. Reid's sympathies for Gully were enlisted and a few days later he accompanied Pearce to the prison, where he was delighted with the science young Gully showed in another bout with the Game Chicken. Reid straightway offered to back Gully to fight Pearce and some days later Berkely Craven and Major Mellish, the Game Chicken's backers, agreed to make a match for £500 to $400.

(From an old print)

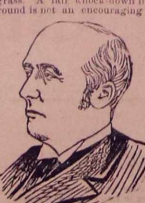
The first deposit was made on the 1st of June, 1805, and the battle was fixed for 20th July. Gully's debts were easily settled by his newly found friends and he went into training at once.

Here Dame Rumor began her ugly work. The coming contest created the liveliest excitement and the remarkable proceeding as the backing of an unknown man so heavily against the famous Game Chicken led to the cry that the match was a plot, that the Chicken would throw the fight and let his backers in for a heavy loss. Virginia Water was set for the scene of the battle, but the Surrey magistrates were on the alert and the locality was suddenly changed to Chobham and from Chobham to Blackwater. This dodging about confirming the mob in their fears, the men and their backers were hooted and howled at unmercifully. Fletcher Reid, becoming justly incensed, withdrew his man and with Gully beside him drove away amid the wildest uproar.

Damned at the outset of his career, with a "cross" against his name before he had ever entered the ring or struck a blow, Gully's chances for rehabilitating himself in the fickle public's favor seemed slim indeed, but an accident turned things in his favor. Passing an evening at the Old Tun Inn at St. James's Market, Coventry Street, he had worsted a corporal of the Guards with whom he had been sparring. The corporal made a sneering remark as to what he could do with his fists if he were not paid to lose. It was an ill-timed remark, for young Gully's blood was up in an instant. Tearing off the gloves he challenged the corporal to come on. In two minutes the soldier's six foot three was stretched on the floor at the young butcher's feet.

In the fighting fraternity the news of this brilliant feat spread with rapidity. Confidence in Gully was restored and his long deferred match with the Game Chicken became a possibility. At last it was fixed for October 8th, and the little town of Hailsham, near Lewes, was decided upon as the battlefield. Brighton was then at the height of the season, the Prince Regent was holding his court there, and the crowd that flocked to Hailsham on the day of the battle was tremendous. It was expected that the Prince himself would be present, and perhaps for this reason no attempt to interfere with the fight was made. The Duke of Clarence was there with Colonel Berkeley, Beau Brummel, the Earl of Essex, Major Hanger, Sir John Lade, Earl Grosvenor, Lord Thanet—in fact all of the Prince's most select coterie of friends. At least 15,000 people were crowded round the ropes when, at one o'clock, Gully, pushing his way through the crowd, chucked his hat into the ring and, accompanied by his second and bottle holder, Tom Jones and Dick Whale, quickly followed it. The cheers which greeted Pearce as, two minutes later, he arrived with Bill Clarke and Joe Ward, showed that he was easily the favorite.

The fight opened disastrously for the they commenced sparring when Pearce landed on Gully's ear and sent him to the grass. A fair knock-down in the first round is not an encouraging start for a novice and young Gully sought to avoid Pearce's terrible right as much as possible. Twice he landed effective blows, but went to the grass again with another terrific cut.



RIGHT HON. WILLIAM COURT GULLY, SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

"Ba-a-a!" howled the crowd, by way of intimating that Gully was a sheep, "'es fond of the grass, 'Arry, make 'im eat it!"

In response to their wishes Pearce sent in a rasper on the throat as Gully rose. The next round was even more unfortunate for the lad. Pearce tapped the claret, banged him in the ear, doubled him up with a blow in the stomach and sent him down again with a right handed on the neck. During every one of the three succeeding rounds Gully measured his length and it seemed that the Game Chicken was going to have what in these degenerate days would be called a "lead pipe cinch." But Pearce's success begot over-confidence and for taking a chance he received a heavy blow on the left eye and a slashing left-hander that cut his cheek open.

It was not until the thirteenth round, however, that Gully began to show his mettle. Notwithstanding the frightful punishment which he had received, he led off in grand style, split the Chicken's lip with his left and landed a swift right on the shoulder. In the fourteenth Gully was grassed for the ninth time, but the fighting began to get more even. The seventeenth changed the complexion of things. Gully broke Pearce's guard and landed hard on the forehead, then he got home on the ear, throat and cheek, received some heavy body blows in return, but finally put a crasher on the Game Chicken's left eye, and for the first time the favorite had to retreat to his corner for assistance.

"Six to four on Gully," was now offered and taken readily.

The next three rounds was decidedly in Gully's favor. He forced the fighting, and amid frantic cheering chased the Chicken all around the ring, inflicting frightful punishment. Twice they clinched and fell and Gully gained both times. Pearce got in one on the back of Gully's head and as the latter came up again his opponent tried his celebrated left hander under the ear. Gully neatly avoided it and in return gave a crushing blow over the right eye which laid the eyebrow open.

By this time the excitement was past description. All social distinctions were forgotten, the London roughs clambering up on the coaches and phaetons of the noblemen and other "bucks" who were far too interested in the battle to take notice of their unsavory neighbors. Wild cheers, as one or other of the gladiators gained some advantage, were followed by a silence, almost dreadful in its intensity, as the men cautiously sparred for an opening. It began to look as if the Game Chicken had met his match, yet in the 26th round when his chances were darkest his friends stuck to him by giving odds, and the heaviest bet ever made on a prize fight was registered by Earl Grosvenor.

Captain Halliday asked 11 to 10 in hundreds on Pearce. Lord Thanet cried: "Thousands!" "Let them double it and we'll halve," said Earl Grosvenor, as he heard the conversation, so the bet was booked and £22,000 was laid on the Game Chicken!

Here Pearce began to pick up again. He sent in one of his sledge hammer blows which stretched Gully insensible, but the boy was soon brought to and in the thirty-fifth round was felled by Pearce again.

"Six to one on the Chicken," again became the cry, and "two to one" was offered immediately after as Gully went down again.

By this time Gully's face had lost all semblance to a human countenance. He was plainly suffering greatly, but, despite the cries of "Take him away; he's had enough!" his lion-like courage was so great that he stood for twenty more rounds! Good old Pearce was reluctant to further punish so gallant an adversary but Gully would not stop. Indeed he was not yet beaten, for in the fifty-seventh round he caught the Chicken a staggerer which all but lifted him off his legs. For one more round the boy stood up. Blind, staggering and almost senseless, a push of the hand sufficed to send him down and Fletcher Reid insisted upon Tom Jones throwing up the sponge.

A wild ovation to both conqueror and conquered followed the conclusion of the fight."

"You're a fine fellow," said the Game Chicken, grasping Gully's hand as he lay in the arms of Dick Whale, "you made it bad for me, and you're the only one that ever stood up against me so long. He'll be a sharp 'un that beats John Gully."

Never before or since did a beaten man cover himself with so much glory and the demonstration was the greater from a feeling of contrition at the slurs which had been cast upon his courage and honor. In his after fights these qualities brought him time and again to victory, and it was the same indomitable pluck which aided him to fight his way into Parliament, into the legislative halls, where, as Speaker, his grandson, Hon. William Court Gully, now presides.

Mr. James Huddart in London.

Mr. James Huddart, the founder and managing director of the new line of steamers connecting Canada and Australia is now in London, say The Star, and daily holds informal levee at his office in Billiter street, City, so numerous are the callers to congratulate him on having imitated and successfully developed such an important and long-needed service. Mr. Huddart is an active, thoughtful, shrewd, far-seeing, young-looking Australian, with a firm and enthusiastic belief in his mission to establish direct regular and permanent communication between the two great British communities that live on opposite sides of the Pacific. Tyneside folks have reason to rejoice in the new departure, for Mr. Huddart's Pacific service means the construction of new, powerful and splendidly-equipped steamers, and the entering into contracts in this connection is one of the chief reasons for Mr. Huddart's present visit to England.

Mr. Huddart has spent practically the whole of his life in Australia, his father having been one of the pioneer captains in Antipodean waters. He is the senior partner in the firm of Huddart, Parker & Co., a firm that has had a large fleet of intercolonial steamers at work for many years past. He has been a permanent member of the Melbourne Harbor Trust, and is one of the best known men of business in that "Queen City of the South." Mr. Huddart has lately been traveling in Canada, where he had interviews with the leading statesmen of the Dominion. He has achieved a big success at the outset by establishing a working and connecting alliance between the Canadian Pacific Railway and his Pacific steamship service.

"LA REINE DES REINES'

THE QUEEN OF PARIS WASHERWOMEN, A BLONDE OF 19.

Mlle. Marie Louise Grimm the Central Figure in This Year's Mid-Lent Festival—How the Queen is Chosen—Chooses Her Own King.

Cette aunee on a choisi
La plus jeune et la plus belle.

So runs the song composed in honor of the "Reine des Reines," who will appear in all the splendor of her little court. To see this little queen was the object of a promenade the other day by a Paris correspondent of The New York Herald. Mlle Marie Louise Grimm—for that is her name—is a poor girl, earning her living as a repasseuse, or ironing woman. She works by the side of her mother, who is the patronne of a little boutique in the Rue des Boulets.

Her mother, Mme. Grimm, is an Alsacienne by birth, and well spoken of by all who know her. The little family is composed of the mother, daughter and two sons, all of whom live together in that harmony which is always the result of industry, good spirits and a common object in view.

It was a day to be remembered when la petite Marie found herself in the Cafe American, sent as a "deputy" from the Lavoir Saint-Victor. Rue des Boulets, to choose "la plus jeune et la plus belle" from among those assembled from other quarters.

The fete of the Mi-Careme is an event in the life of the blanchisseuses never to be forgotten. It is the pivot day of the year—it is the "May day" of Merrie England; it is something to look forward to in the long winter evenings when the young ironing girls toil at the work table under the eye of their patronne, their thoughts far away, passing with mechanical regularity the little irons over a spotless chemise.

It is a day to be remembered when, looking back in after years, they recount to their children the story of their reign on the eventful day of Mi-Careme.

How is it that the washerwomen keep a special holiday at this time of the year?

Like a great many customs, the precise origin of this feature of the fete is not so easy to trace—very likely because it has grown and developed from a very small and unpretentious beginning.

The invention of the Mi-Careme, explains a French authority, is more recent than that of the carnival. It springs from the weariness produced by the long period of abstinence and privations more or less customary during the season of Lent. To relieve this feeling the fete was introduced.

There are some who attribute the Mi-Careme to the custom established in certain petites villes, where the young men gave a ball on Mardi Gras to their girl friends, who, in turn, entertained the young men of their district on the third Thursday in Lent.

In addition to this custom, particularly at Paris, there is a custom in vogue among the blanchisseuses to name on this day a queen and to dress her up in gay attire and give a ball in their lavoir. This latter custom is probably a souvenir of the rois des metiers, who formerly held a position of importance in their trades the societies over which they presided corresponding a good deal to the English guilds.

In a good many towns of France the fete of the Mi-Careme is considered specially one in honor of the young girls of the neighborhood.

After the Franco-Prussian war of 1870 there were signs of a temporary decline in the observance of these fetes, but gradually the good spirits and fondness for gayety of the French people—never to be really suppressed—have come to the surface once more, and the forthcoming Mi-Careme will probably be more generally observed than for some time past.

"Never imagine for a moment," said Thackeray, "that because you see an unsophisticated English girl, whose whole life is passed in the country among surroundings of the simplest description, she has not her little romance, her dreams—if not of impossible knight errants—at all events, of possible elder sons."

And the little blanchisseuses of Paris they are not without theirs.

When, therefore, Marie Grimm found herself actually chosen by her camarades to represent their lavoir at the Cafe American, she knew at once that she was a possible queen, on the principle that a cardinal is a possible Pope, and a French citizen, at the time of election, a possible President of the Republic.

THE ELECTION OF A QUEEN.

A quarter of a century of young French girls, each ardently thinking of her prospects. There were also anxious mothers, and—need it be said?—not a few of the youth of the sterner sex.

Prospects were discussed, the chances of some girl absolutely discounted, and of others eagerly advanced—there was a brouhaha de conversations, when suddenly all was silence. The voting had begun.

Small wonder was it if some of the girls voted for themselves the first time—even men do that sometimes.

The voting is announced. She who had obtained the most votes was Mlle. Mulinowski. She had received a dozen votes, and if she had got one more she would have been the lucky one.

The excitement of the assemblee plenlere was now intense. Already the smiling Victorine was the recipient of compliments of the most flattering description. Friends pressed around her—when the president announced a second tour must be made.

But when one steps into politics one must be ready for surprises. "It is the unexpected that always happens," said one of England's greatest statesmen.

He spoke of great affairs, but is there not politics of the washtub?

Mlle. Victorine now came out second and Mlle. Grimm led the way with seventeen votes.

This was final, and when the queen-elect stepped out to receive the diadem and the manteau fleur-de-lys there was a shout of applause.

The choice of two demoiselles d'honneur had now to be made. The one who obtained the most votes after the queen-elect was naturally the first maid of honor, but in this case the young blanchisseuse pouted and would not act in a secondary position.

She felt that she should occupy the position of queen or have nothing to do with the affair. Three years ago her sister had been Reine, and now, if she could not succeed in her aspirations to the throne, why, the dignity of her family, already ennobled, could not brook defeat.

And so she left the company, and the next in order of votes were selected. Thus it was that Mlle. Mulinowski was there and then declared first maid of honor and Mlle. Gauthier the second maid of honor.

APPEARANCE OF THE "REINE DES REINES."

Mlle. Grimm is a blonde, 19 years of age. Broad shoulders, rather spready hands, a figure that, if it did not exhibit grace, betokened strength; a well-formed neck, wavy hair, grayish blue yes, and a good-humored expression.

That was the "queen of queens."

Is she pretty? Not exactly.

How was it, then, that Mlle. Grimm was selected?

A glance at her clear, straightforward eyes, a brief causerie, sufficed to tell the tale. It was because of her kindly disposition, doubtless, that she won favor among her comrades.

With an air at once modest and self-possessed, Mlle. Grimm explained:

"You see, I am not exactly queen yet. I shall be, but then it is only for one day, that is all."

But the glance of the young Francaise showed that one day of her reign represented a great deal of time to her—the triumph of a lifetime, perhaps.

"You have chosen your Roi?"

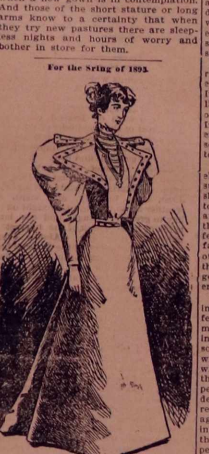
A WORD OF CAUTION.

Never Recommend Your Dressmaker to a Friend if You are Wise.

Unless you are willing to run the risk of breaking the cordial relations that exist between you and another woman, don't recommend a dressmaker to her notice, for it isn't woman nature to forget the origin of a botched gown, despite protestations to the contrary. It will readily be admitted that a dressmaker who suits one woman to a T, and who has always proved satisfactory to one patron, may do nothing to please another. It is always more or less an experiment, as any woman knows, to try a new hand at one's gowns. The best of dressmakers often fail, just as very often $1 a day seamstresses turn out very creditable pieces of work, and when one entrust a dress pattern to hands unknown its ultimate fate is a lottery. Enter that lottery unadvised—if you would have no gnawing regrets—let your friends try their luck with no encouragement from you, if you wish to preserve peace of mind and continued friendships.

The whole question of gown making is a vexatious one to the one who cannot afford to place it in the hands of an unquestioned woman who knows that it is a necessity for her to employ cheap dressmakers, to be her own designer, to wear bodices with unbound seams and to put on skirt facings herself in order to save the time of hired hands, a new dress presents direful possibilities that bring wrinkles and nerves in their train. There are women who have settled the matter by patronizing the ready-made garments now to be had at any of the larger stores, but when one is under five feet in height, and every skirt is designed for a woman five feet five inches, or when one is blessed with abnormally long arms attached to a narrow chest, and even the sleeves of to-day, big as they are, do not cover the bony wrist, the dressmaker is the only avenue to approach when a new gown is in contemplation. And those of the short stature or long arms know to a certainty that when they try new pastures there are sleepless nights and hours of worry and bother in store for them.

For the Sring of 1895.



Royal Courtesy.

A characteristic incident of a visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales and their daughters to the general postoffice has just become known. The story is that, as they were passing through the telegraph department, the Prince suddenly marched up to an operator and tapped him on the shoulder. The telegraphist hastily dismounted from his stool and made a respectful salutation to the Prince. The reply of his Royal Highness was to take the young man's hand and shake it heartily, an example which was followed by the Princess and the rest of the royal family. It was afterward explained that this telegraphist was on duty at Sandringham during the fatal illness of the Duke of Clarence. The story embodies two of the Prince's most charming characteristics. First, his great gift of retaining in memory the faces of those he has known ever so slightly. Secondly, his true royal gratitude and a sweetness in acknowledging services rendered.—Tid-Bits.

Acquired Dumbness.

Jaggs—"Is Blobbs dumb in his own house?"

Laggs—"Practically so."

Jaggs—"What's the matter?"

Laggs—"He promised his wife he would always listen when she talked."

SOFT TYPEWRITER KEYS.

Covers Which Spare the Fingers and Improve the Impression.

A boon to typewriters consists in an attachment for the keys of the machine which gives them a soft and yielding surface for the fingers to strike against. The idea is not entirely new, but it is only lately that a cushion for the keys meeting with very much favor among good operators has been introduced. The present device is of hollow rubber, three-sixteenths of an inch deep, with a flat surface, corresponding in size with that of the key itself, and having a metal base which attaches firmly to the key. The characters on each cushion are the same as those on the key to which it is fastened.

The advantage of resilient key tips compared with those of glass or celluloid used on most machines is plain; by their use the operator's fingers is not battered and chafed from continued manipulation of the keys, and the machine is not so liable to be racked, or the type thrown out of align. Moreover, characters which are small in size and often pierce the paper and injure the cylinder of the machine, are caused to strike with less force, and leave a more even impression on the written page.

For the use of those operators able to write without closely observing the keys, cushions are made on which the characters are omitted altogether. These serve the double purpose of relieving the eyes of the strain imposed upon them by frequently glancing at the keyboard, and of insuring the machine against being tampered with by persons not thoroughly familiar with its use. For the further benefit of the eyes rubber of any desired color is used in making these tips, and the metal base may be coated either with nickel or black enamel. The space-bar of the typewriter is also provided with a cushion of the same height and elasticity as that of the keys.—New York Sun.

SOME DEEP SEA WONDERS

THE WAY THEY ARE FOUND AS STRANGE AS WHAT IS FOUND.

The Water Lamb and Lion Lie Down Together in the Presence of the Glowing Electric Light—Keeping a Deep-Sea Line Straight.

Few people eat fish at a depth of 800 feet. There are fewer fishermen at a depth of 4,500 fathoms, or 27,000 feet. This is a depth of about 5 1-2 miles. It takes a heavy sinker and a strong line to reach this enormous ocean depth. Uncle Sam is the only angler in the world who insists on such deep-sea fishing and measures depths, not by hundreds of feet, but by actual miles. He has a boat built specially for the purpose. This vessel is the United States Fish Commission steamer Albatross.

The Albatross is strictly a scientific fishing craft. She cost over $100,000, is 234 feet long, and of 1,074 tons displacement, with a brigantine rig. Her business is to follow ocean fish as they migrate from their summer to their winter habitat, and observe their manner of life. This work includes the collection of fish, mud and shells from a depth of 27,000 feet to the surface. The tremendous scope of this work is hardly appreciable by minds not conversant with the details of it. It involves not only the exercise of a rare scientific talent, but also the exercise of a masterly seamanship in carrying out the demands of science in securing fish specimens. For instance, the ingenuity of the scientists and navigators has resorted to the employment of the electric light at great depths in order to attract heretofore unknown and otherwise unobtainable fish into the trawl which is let down from the ship's side.

In this way small fish are usually caught. Sometimes, when the electric light is near the surface of the ocean, large fish are attracted by the illumination. The light seems to make the big fish angry. Sharks, for instance, will dart at the light as if it were a deadly foe.

The light is sometimes lowered 800 feet from the surface. At a depth of 70 feet the illumination becomes invisible. When the light is 20 or 30 feet down and huge fish congregate about it their shadows are cast upward on the surface of the sea, and from the deck of the ship the scene is weird indeed. It is a veritable congress of monsters of the deep that sometimes gathers about what to them is a wonderful sight. An electric-lighted submarine home is something novel, even to a tough old shark.

Occasionally a man-eater shark is curious enough to "monkey" with this electric light and tries to swallow it. If the electric current supplying the light happens to be strong the curiosity of the meddling shark is soon satisfied. In fact, the fish is shocked by the modern invention. It dies. The bodies of several such shocked fish have floated to the surface.

It has been noted that the effect of the electric light upon big fish has been such that as deadly enemies as the shark and the swordfish will swim up to the light side by side, and so amazed are they by the wonderful shining bulb that they appear to forget the deadly feud existing between these piscatorial families, and they do not rush at each other in mortal combat. Other fish that usually fight on sight lie down together, as it were, in this shining presence, as might a lion and a lamb.

The operation of sounding, or of fishing at a depth of tens of thousands of feet, requires much skill in both the management of the ship and the sounding apparatus. In ordinary deep-sea sounding a three-eighths inch steel wire is used. Then tension on this wire must be constant, else it will kink, thus redusing the tensible strength 50 per cent. Ocean currents complicate deep-sea exploration. A surface current is quickly detected and guarded against, but when the rope or sounding line is swept under the bottom of the ship by a submarine current, with, perhaps, thousands of fathoms of line out, it requires great skill and patience to clear the line without kinking, and thereby possibly losing a portion of it. When a deep-sea sounding is to be taken the sinker is lowered to the water's edge. A thermometer and water specimen cup are clamped on to the line of wire. An officer takes his station besides the sounding machine. Seamen are at hand, attending to the guide pulleys. A fireman stands with his hand on the throttle of the sounding engine, awaiting the officer's command. The record keeper takes his position beside the register, where he can read it rapidly. This register shows the number of fathoms of line paid out. At the order "Let go!" the sinker shoots down into the ocean at a speed of 10 to 15 feet per second. The record-keeper makes a note of every 100 fathoms of line paid out. The officer of the deck maneuvers the ship in a way that will keep the wire line vertical. The instant the sinker strikes the bottom of the sea, miles below the ship, the sounding engine is stopped. The record-keeper notes the number of turns indicated on the register and the slack line is hove in by hand until it clears the bottom. Then the sounding engine is reversed and the line is hauled aboard about as fast as it was paid out.

The water specimen cup or bottle, which is let down on the sounding line, is an important part of the equipment of deep-sea explorers. The density of ocean water of different depths and in the different great ocean currents is a matter of moment to scientists in determining important submarine questions. To obtain a specimen of water at a depth, say, of 18,000 feet, with all of its free gases, and bring it to the surface without allowing these gases to escape or the water to mingle with other water, was impossible until the invention of a metal water-cup so arranged that when it descends into the briny deep for several miles or so the resistance of the water during the descent keeps open the valves of the cup. When the cup is stopped at the desired depth and is being pulled to the surface the resistance of the water sets in motion a small propeller arranged on the upper side of the cup. This propeller forces shut certain valves of the hollow cup and locks them, and thus the water is secured in what amounts to a hermetically sealed metal bulb, which holds its contents intact until opened by the scientist in the laboratory, either on board the Albatross or at Washington, whither the water specimens are sometimes sent for a more elaborate analysis than is usually carried on on shipboard.

These water-cups are strongly built. They need to be in order to withstand the great pressure of the water several miles below the surface. This pressure is hundreds of tons to the square inch. One of the curiosities on the Albatross is a heavy glass globe filled with water. This hollow glass ball was let down to a great depth in the ocean until the water pressure became so great that the water was literally forced through the pores of the glass and the ball was thus filled. On account of this water pressure it is necessary to inclose the mercury bulbs of the deep-sea thermometers in a secondary glass case, which is also filled with mercury, and thus any possible pressure on the mercury bulb which indicates the temperature is taken up by the secondary or protective bulb. Without such a protection the readings of the thermometer would be very inaccurate, as the pressure on the temperature bulb would force the mercury beyond the point to which the temperature of the water sends it.

The statement that here is no life below an ocean depth of three miles has been refuted by the experience of the Albatross. Sometimes, when deep-sea fish, accustomed to live in the high-pressure found at great depths, find their way upward to a depth where the pressure is lessened very materially, and then endeavor to return to their deep homes, they canont do so because their bladders, under the lessened pressure, become so expanded that the fish are unable to overcome the resistance when endeavoring to swim downward. Consequently the fish soon float to the surface, absolutely helpless.

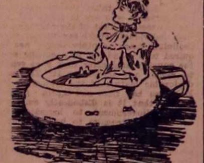
IN QUAINT COCKLESHELLS.

Hell Gate's Dangers Defied in Five New-Fangled Pneumatic Outing Boats.

A novel boating party, passing through the swift and dangerous eddies of Hell Gate yesterday afternoon, attracted the attention of hundreds of spectators from the New York and Long Island shores, as well as from the passengers on board the Sound steamers. The party consisted of Miss Marie Green, who is said to be as much at home in the water as on land; H. D. Lyman, the inventor of the novel boats, in which the party were taking their outing; Emory B. Remington, Prof. Wilson, instructor in ecquatics of the Manhattan Athletic Club, and Harry C. Graham.

The boats are pneumatic affairs, and resemble, when in the water, a life belt on a large scale. The occupant sits astride the "bottom" of the boat, much as one does the saddle of a bicycle, and propels himself with his legs, which are encased in rubber shoes and leggings, and on which there are fins with which the propelling is done. The occupant is on view from the waist up and glides along in the water with apparent ease and grace. The invention is a new one, and intended for sporting purposes mainly. The trip yesterday was made on a wager that it would be impossible to pass through Hell Gate in the pneumatic boats with safety.

To show how thoroughly practical the invention is, Miss Green determined to be one of the party. The start was made from off the foot of 120th street, and down the stream the party paddled with their feet. On the way down the party got in betwen two Sound steamers, and the wash they received was strong. The little boats, however, rode the waves lashed up by the steamers like ducks, and did not ship any water.



MISS GREEN'S TRIP THROUGH HELL GATE.

The party made its way through the Gate and down the East River, to Willie's float, at the foot of East 89th street, without mishap, and were received by a large congregation of friends and sightseers, who welcomed them with cheers.

The outing boat weighs from fifteen to twenty pounds, and can be carried, when not inflated, as an ordinary hand grip, or strapped on the shoulders as a knapsack. It contains four airtight compartments, any one of which is sufficient, in case of puncturing of the others, for keeping the occupant of the craft afloat.—New York Recorder.

PRETTY GIRLS NOT WANTED.

Business Men Who Vainly Seek for Unattractive Typewriters.

The day of the pretty typewriter, like the day of the rose, when summer really settles down to business, is about over. It was to be expected that as the novelty wore off, the ephemeral type of business woman would brush away like superfluous leafage, and leave only the sturdy stock to endure. For years the novelty lasted, and while it did men put up with bad orthography, faulty punctuation and a score of other evils to retain in their employ some pretty girl with a doll-face and baby ways, as illy suited to the practical demands of everyday routine as a painted cockatoo would be for an incubator. Gradually, as a new generation came around to make the innovation of woman into business less of a novelty, the idea grew in the commercial mind that it was not bleached hair and beauty that was needed to make the type-machine a success, and the stenographer's pencil an adjunct to prosperity. As the thought grew, the revolution went on, until there really seems to be a prospect that the middle-aged and unprepossessing bread-winner is to have a chance at last. It is no longer an unusual spectacle to see a business man dictating his letters to a woman old enough to be his mother, and the gentle creature who manipulates the type-machine is fully as often plain as pretty and sensible as silly. It is a good thing, too, for the warfare has been bitterly sustained between the classes. The fools have been cared for long enough, now give the wise virgins a chance! Nobody who has not kept both eyes open to this state of things knows exactly how far the subordinatating of merit to appearance has been carried. Worthy women of age and aptitude have been driven to the wall by popinjay youngsters whose only claim to consideration was good looks joined to a pert manner and jaunty dress. The first and only requisite looked for when a man was hiring an office assistant has been good looks, until the position offered seemed almost a prize to be contested along the lines of a beauty show. I had occasion to visit an establishment once which had almost become bankrupt through strain of hard times, and from employing a dozen stenographers and typewriters had dwindled to keeping two. What was my indignation to find that the two retained were the biggest dunces of the lot. They were remarkably pretty girls, however, and for that reason held their position, while several hard-working, capable and trustworthy women of mature years and wide experience were turned adrift. I, for one, am glad that the wheel has taken a turn, and that the ugly woman is coming to the front. There is plenty of room in less pretentious walks of life for the rapid, haughty and altogether ultra fine young lady typewriter. Let her step aside now and give the woman with brains and good sense a chance.

You May Hit the Line.

"Aim high," said the captain. "If you do not hit the line you aim at you may hit the one beyond it." Aim for 365 pounds of butter a year from each cow; for a few cents a pound more than your neighbor gets for his products; for a few more bushels or tons per acre than he gets, and generally for a little better results than he obtains. You may hit the line and you might shoot beyond it, but that is better than shooting into the dirt at your feet.

THE CARAQUET RY. SINKHOLE

All Public Money Expended On It is Lost,

M'MULLEN ON SUPERANNUATION.

The Prince Edward Island Election Tunnel Again Discussed in the House—The Hudson Bay Railway Bonus Off —Motions For Various Papers.

Ottawa, April 27.—The reply made by the Minister of Railways in the House yesterday to an enquiry by Mr. Mulock shows that the public money expended on the Caraquet Railway has been practically lost. The total gross receipts for last year amounted to $18,083.09, and the working expenses exceeded all the gross earnings by $706. Such has been the yearly result ever since the road was built. The total mileage of the road is 70 and the average daily earnings per mile last year were less than 83 cents. The Dominion Government floated the scheme by giving it a bonus of $224,000, which led to New Brunswick giving it a bonus of $180,000, and this led to English investors being induced to invest in the bonds of the road to the amount of $486,600. It was represented that stock of the company had been floated to the amount of $950,000. If this is true, then this amount being added brings the total sum to $1,840,600, which has been absolutely sunk in this one hole.

Hon. L. H. Davies made an effort to obtain from the leader of the House a statement as to the progress and results of the negotiations with the Newfoundland delegates, but the Minister, on the ground that the negotiations had not been concluded, asked that the question be not pressed.

Mr. James McMullen, who keeps a close watch upon public expenditures and who has the Auditor-General's report at his finger ends, will renew his attack upon the superannuation system, which has cost the country since its inauguration, 23 years ago $2,500,000 over and above the receipts, and which is made use of by the Government to force useful oifficials into retirement that places may be made for political favorites. Yesterday he obtained an order of the House, calling upon the Government to bring down a statement, showing the payments of the fund, the benefits derived therefrom, up to April of this year, and a heap of other information that it is expected will enable him to make out even a stronger case against the system than he has already presented.

Mr. McMullen takes the ground that civil servants who are in receipt of pay far in excess of that of the average private individual should lay up for their declining years as other people are required to do, and not be a charge upon the country long after they have ceased to render any service to it. The most deplorable feature of the system as Mr. McMullen has time and again pointed out, is that it is dishonestly employed by the Government to increase the volume of patronage to be distributed.

Mr. Perry made a motion for information with regard to the winter service connection of Prince Edward Island with the mainland. Upon this motion he brought on the sessional discussion upon the grievance of the island against confederation. As usual he acquitted himself as the island's champion with great directness and originality of expression. The terms of confederation, he declared The terms of confederation, he declared, were not being observed so far as the island is concerned. The Government was willing to spend thirty, forty or sixty million dollars to keep the compact with British Columbia; they were willing to involve the whole country in commotion in trying to enforce the compact with Manitoba. They were even willing to run the ruisk of a rebellion in the Northwest. Well, he would warn the Government to have a care. He would not say that there would be a rebellion in Prince Edward Island, but there was a time when patience ceased to be a virtue. The House laughed in an amused way, although the representative of the smallest sister in the federation was apparently belligerently in earnest. They were a peaceable people, but strong in their claims for justice. (Applause.) They had been trifled with and humbugged by this Government, past the patience of the people and he demanded that the Government do something to carry out the promises which were held out at election times.

This led up to the great Island issue of the tunnel. He accused the Government of using this project just at election times with the object of influencing the people to send them supporters to Parliament. The borings in 1891 and the cessation of operations since that year he thought sufficiently evidenced the object of the Government. Mr. Foster's announcement the other day that no borings had been made last year, because the season was too boisterous, was, he said, a piece of political impudence. The real reason was that there was not to be an election in 1894.

From the tunnel to the general influences used in the Island in behalf of the Conservative party was an easy stage, and Mr. Perry told the House something of the nature of the appeals made to the people of the Island. From the Summerside Journal he read an appeal which declared that Islanders "should rise above the petty level of party politics," and send to Ottawa supporters of the Government who could get justice for the Island.

Mr. Yeo added his testimony to the inadequacy of the present winter service, and urged upon the Government more strenuous efforts to carry out the terms of Confederation, which promised uninterrupted communication with the mainland. He took occasion to refer to the profits which had been made with regard to the tunnel. He hoped there would not be a repetition of what they had in 1891. The Island was tired of having the tunnel dangled before it upon the eve of an election, and then that nothing more should be heard of it during the next four years. If the Government did not intend to take up the project seriously the expenditure upon it was a wilful waste of public money. (Applause.)

Mr. Foster professed the Government's earnestness in the experimental borings which had been instituted. Although no holes had been put down last year, another contract had been let for this season, and they hoped for better results.

Mr. Mills (Bothwell): What's it all for?

Mr. Foster (smiling): The hon. member must have been out of the House during the speeches which the members from Prince Edward Island have been delivering for years past.

Mr. Davies: It's for elections.

Mr. Foster: Is that all the member for Prince wants it for?

Mr. Davies: No; but I am afraid it's all the Government wants it for

Mr. Mills: Is it to add to the deficit?

Mr. Foster: No; but there are some things which must be done, deficit or no deficit, and one of these is doing justice to Prince Edward Island. (Laughter.)

During the discussion Mr. Davies pointed out that a wharf had been constructed at a cost of $236,000 at Cape Tormentine, ostensibly to carry out the terms of Confederation, which required that communication should be maintained between Prince Edward Island and mainland. But that this was not the real purpose was shown by the fact that no corresponding wharf had been built on the Island side of the Straits of Newfoundland, and that the railroad of Mr. Wood, the Conservative member for Westmoreland, terminated at Cape Tormentine. Mr. Davies' statement ridiculed that the money had been spent for the benefit of Mr. Wood and his railway and not to fulfil the compact of Confederation.

Additional interest attached to Mr. Laurier's motion for the order in council granting a loan of $2,500,000 to the Hudson's Bay Railway, by the widely circulated statement that the Government has turned tail and got from under the scheme. It will be remembered that Mr. Laurier asked Mr. Foster to bring down the order-in-council, but the Minister, who professed not to be able to recollect the terms of the document, as if $2,500,000 was a small matter to him, positively refused to do so unless he was compelled by an order of the House. Yesterday the order was made, and the Government will have no further excuse for concealing from Parliament the facts of this extraordinary transaction.

Mr. Mulock secured an order for the communications that have passed between the Canadian and Imperial Governments since July, 1892, in regard to the scheduling of Canadian cattle by Great Britain, or the removal of the embargo.

Mr. Mulock was also granted an order for the papers relating to Contractor Charlebois' claim for extras in connection with the erection of the Langevin Block, which cost the country about one million dollars, while Charlebois' tender called for but $355,000.

Mr. Haggart, replying to a question by Mr. Choquette, said that no amount had been granted to the contractors for the Sault Ste. Marie Canal for extra work. The contractors had presented no claims against the Government for extra work, but they had intimated that they intended to present claims.

Mr. Foster was prepared to make his explanation of the Cabinet charges, but at Mr. Laurier's suggestion he reserved it until the Minister of Justice is in his place. The young minister when he returns to the House will doubtless receive a large share of the attention of Opposition speakers.

STIFF CASE AGAINST A CORONER.

Dr. Jayne of Tonawanda Held for Perjury Said to Be a St. Catharines Man.

Buffalo, April 26.—Accusations of a grave nature are made against Dr. Asa W. Jayne, health officer and coroner of Tonawanda, who was recently arrested on a charge of perjury, for having testified in the case of one Albert H. Knowles, a native of Welland County, Ontario, who illegally obtained naturalization papers on the strength of Jayne's testimony.

Jayne was up before the United States Commissioner on the perjury charge today and was admitted to $1500 bail, the case to go to the Federal grand jury at Rochester.

A Tonawanda man states that Jayne is really one William Adams of St. Catharines, Ont., that he is not and never has been a citizen of the United States, that there are doubts as to whether he is or ever was legally qualified to practice medicine.

NEW STYLE OF SWINDLING.

A Toronto Man in the Law's Clutches at Buffalo.

Buffalo, April 26.—R. E. Ross, a slick young man, who came here from Toronto a few months ago to work for Fred. Robbins, the real estate dealer, is under arrest on a charge of swindling residents of Black Rock. His scheme was to visit people and represent himself as having houses to rent. When he found people looking for houses he would state that there was a water bill due, which, if they paid, he would let them have the place. The game worked well for a time, but he gradually grew overbearing, and in consequence fell into the clutches of the law. Ross is locked up at police headquarters pending examination.

DIED AT 104.

Niagara's Oldest Inhabitant, a Former Slave, Gone Home.

Niagara, Ont., April 26.—The oldest inhabitant, in the person of Mr. James Bannister, passed quietly away this morning, at the age of 104 years. Deceased was a refugee from slavery and came to this country when quite a young man, locating in Niagara, where he has lived since.

Antipodean Politics.

Sydney, N.S.W., April 26.—Premier Turner of Victoria announces that the colonies' expenditure in the coming year will be reduced by £460,000, and thus will be brought within the revenue. This will obviate the necessity of additional taxation.

Premier Reid of New South Wales informed a deputation to-day that the entire Dibbs' tariff of New South Wales, except the grain duty, probably would be repealed in July.

East Wicklow Bye-Election.

Dublin, April 26.—A Parliamentary election was held in the East Wicklow constituency to-day to choose a member for the seat left vacant by the resignation of John Sweetman, Home Ruler. Mr. Sweetman ran again. He wished to be elected as an Independent Nationalist, under no obligations to the Rosebery Government. The result will not be known till to-morrow.

O'Grady's Annexation Flapdoodle

Buffalo, April 26.—The Commercial devotes its leading editorial to-day to "The Annexation Foolishness," and says that the answer of the Canadian Premier and the Liberal leaders is what intelligent Americans might have expected to such an untimely and unwarranted bit of flapdoodle as Mr. O'Grady worked off, in some politician's interest, in the Assembly on Wednesday. The Commercial argues that the religious question now dominant in Canada would bar any prospect of union.

Crazed by Accounts of Murders.

San Diego, Cal., April 26.—James Smith, a ranch hand near Delmar, crazed by reading accounts of the Emanuel Church murders in San Francisco, made a criminal and murderous assault on Mrs. Hugh Frazer, the wife of his employer, yesterday. The woman escaped and gave the alarm. Constable Bladworth attempted to arrest Smith, but the latter attacked him with a dirk and the officer shot and killed Smith.

Mrs. W. B. Brown, of Washington, N.C., has given to the state council of King's Daughters a beautiful home, which is to be used as a home for imbecile children. The legislature of the state will be asked to make appropriations for its support.

The late Lord Randolph Churchill had six sisters, each one of whom married remarkably well, although they were by no means beauties. There is, perhaps, no record of six sisters, and plain girls with extravagant tastes and no money, having been thus happily married to young men, each one remarkably rich, and in some instances a millionaire. It has been calculated that the six married sisters own, through their husbands, sixteen millions of money.

Mlle. Letizia Bonaparte Wyse, who was married on the 23rd ult. to M. Aristide Bergasse, an ensign in the French navy, is the daughter of Bonaparte Wyse, the famous engineer, who now holds concessions from the Columbian Government for cutting the Panama Canal.

Of Interest to Farmers.

The supposition that an orchard will thrive with small applications of fertilizers has deprived farmers of yields which would have been possible with a larger amount of plant food. What is most desirable in orchards is potash, and it will not be extravagant to apply as much as 100 pounds per acre.

Poultry manure is usually kept dry mixed with earth, but it will be more serviceable if kept moist (not wet), and collected daily. It may be mixed with an equal bulk of dry earth, adding a peck of kainit to five bushels of the mixture. The hard lumps in the dry droppings are due to silicates, which form when it is kept a long while in a dry condition.

FLEET STREET AND ITS MEMORIES.

The Famous Old Thoroughfare Full of a Thousand Recollections.

"We walked in the evening in Greenwich Park," says Boswell. "He asked me, I suppose by way of trying my disposition: 'Is not this very fine?' Having no exquisite relish of the beauties of nature and being more delighted with the busy hum of men, I answered: 'Yes, sir; but not equal to Fleet street.' Johnson: 'You are right, sir.'" That was more than a century ago, and Fleet street continues to be one of the great thoroughfares of the world, unique in the variety of the interests which attach to it, of the influences which proceed from it. No man visits London, says The Toronto Empire, without walking many times in Fleet street—unless he is an utter Philistine or fribble. It is a great panoramic spectacle now to even the least intellectual of men; it is a grand historical development, full of a thousand recollections, to the man who, by chance or taste or design, has filled his mind with the old history of London—the London of the days when the tower was a royal residence; when the temple really held knights templars; when Holborn was really a brook in a hollow; when Clarkenwell and Bridewell were really streams and fountains pertaining to clerics and saints; when a sweet stream flowed down Piccadilly; when the Strand—i. e., the bank of the Thames—was the promenade of princes, prelates and beauties; when Westminster was far away and men were robbed in going to their home from the house of parliament; when foreign ambassadors fought in the streets, by means of armed retainers, for precedence over each other at a royal reception; when the abbey was the temple, indeed, of silence and reconciliation, the resting place of kings and saints, not the art gallery for Jews and soldiers and scoffers. To the man who keeps these things in mind Fleet street is never dull, never dark, never dirty, never without an unfailing attraction.

Nobody needs a book to enable him to go on talking of Fleet street, of any part of London, indeed, for, in one way or another, the city and its many streets have become incorporated into English literature. To say that Paris is France is generally held to be a fair result of experience. Paris is no doubt France, for the purpose of revolution, at least. London is not England for the purpose of politics—far from it. Paris is France, no doubt, also for most forms of literature. London also, though not to the same extent, forms a large part of England for literature, for society, for science, for art. All the higher literature of England concerns itself more or less with London streets. And Fleet street takes a large share in exciting all this interest.

The Woes of Iceland.

The accounts which have just reached Europe from that most distressful island in the Arctic seas give us little reason to hope that anything can be done to remedy the woes of Iceland essentially. Like most of the remainder of the world, that remote little country has enjoyed this year an almost unprecedented wealth of sunlight and heat. The brief Icelandic summer can have a rare beauty of its own, and that of 1893 has been enchanting. Steady drought in June, rains in July, and warm dry weather again in August, brought on the hay to great advantage, and the latest batch of letters speak of the harvest as unusually promising. Almost everywhere along the coasts the fisheries have been excellently successful. It is plain, therefore, that, for once, Iceland has had a chance from the weather, which has of late years been its most cruel enemy.

If a succession of good seasons like the present had occurred a dozen years ago, Iceland might have been saved. But especially since the political agitations of 1885, which disturbed and discouraged the population, things have been going materially from bad to worse. We are occasionally called upon to listen to jeremiads about Iceland starvation from those whose sentiment for the Icelanders is more active than their information is exact, and the English public has become suspicious of cries of "Wolf!" But the present season, with its excellent weather and good supplies of food, has not shown any re-action against the draining away of the people. This summer no fewer than 600 persons emigrated to America, bringing the population below that limit of 70,000 to which it had already dwindled. The island now contains, it is believed, fewer inhabitants than it did in 1870, before the temporary rise in Icelandic prosperity. The emigrants are largely of the farm-laborer class, and there is a growing complaint that portions of the country are going out of cultivation because there is no one to work on the land.

The great geyser has been very sluggish this year, and it is believed that weather which is excellent for crops acts in a deplorable way upon this class of phenomena. It is by her extraordinary sights, and by the visitors drawn to see them, that Iceland must hope to live. —London Saturday Review.

2000 Wire Nails a Minute.

A rather unique wire nail machine has been erected recently in the Machinery Hall. It is really ten machines in one, says Iron Age. It is circular in form, the ten parts of the machine being placed on a massive table, receiving motion from its center. The motion is imparted in a novel manner. A heavy shaft runs to the center, where it is connected by suitable gearing with a vertical plunger. On the sides of the plunger are wedges which operate the ten sections as the plunger moves up and down. A coil of wire is placed on a reel below the table in front of each section, and the finished nails run down metal troughs into boxes by the side of each reel. The whole ten sections can be operated at one time on nails of the same size.

Protection of Nonsmokers.

Among the novel societies incorporated in Europe recently is "The Society for the Protection of Nonsmokers," in Lower Austria. The members, already numerous, propose no campaign against smokers, but they intend to accomplish, if possible, the strict enforcement of the regulations regarding the prohibition of smoking in certain railroad train compartments, public buildinds, restaurants frequented by men and women, street cars, concert halls and other places of public amusement. They wish to prevent smoking, if possible, in all public places. Circulars are to be sent to restaurant-keepers asking that rooms be set apart for nonsmokers. Branches of the society are to be established in Vienna, Prague Bruenn and Graz. Influential names are on the roll of membership.

WOMEN OF TWO CONTINENTS.

The Clever Ones Compared by a Much Travelled American.

The women of the world, both abroad and at home, that one hears the most about are the smart set who rule the social kingdom from the capitals of Europe and in America from its chief metropolis. These women represent the fashion, wealth and social life of their day. They live vividly before the mental eye of all classes of people, thanks to social chronicles in the daily journals and constant foreign communications by cable.

As Americans, our interest outside of our own smart set is centered almost exclusively on the smart women of England. Their lives and doings have influenced ours to such a degree that we have come very near being a princeps copy in red, white and blue, heavily gilded with American eagles.

It may not be uninteresting to glance at the contrast between the smart English woman and the smart American, which is so pronounced and noticeable in various ways when viewed by the advantages and disadvantages to women themselves.

As a rule—when the American woman compares herself and her lot with the England woman's—she is apt to be too well satisfied with herself, her habits, her customs, and is misguided by what she considers her great advantages. She sums up majorities and overlooks minorities socially, and in that way fails to see the superior social distinction of many English women of fashion who have made for themselves brilliant names and positions. In consequence of this oversight the emulation that would have advantaged us has never been attempted here.

What is particularly admirable in this best type of upper class English women is her respect for her own individuality and the generous allowance she is ready to make for the individuality of others. Another fine trait is her commendable pride in any special talent she may possess, and the pains she will take to develop it, perfect it, along with the courage she has to live up to the pursuit of it.

If she is a married woman her husband almost invariably manifests pride and interest in her attainments, and, if practical, assists her, or, if not, gives help in a negative way by not interfering or placing obstacles in her path.

With few exceptions these women are great social leaders—intelligently interested in the movement of everything intellectual and national—and wield a strong influence over the best minds of the day, through the charm of their drawing-room gatherings.

Smart women in America, on the other hand, rich in a thousand and one attractions of person and race, quick of wit, and alert of mind, give themselves up to the aims of fashion and pleasure, ad are satisfied to resemble one another as closely as peas in a pod. When one has had the pleasure of meeting a half-dozen of them the rest of the set will be tuned to a decapo movement, limited. Individuality they abhor—and will shun it as an infection. They crush out every disposition to distinguish themselves in any avenue that fashion's forefinger does not point out, or do anything that will cause them to step aside from the throng that environs them. Social routine is to them an adored treadmill, which they enter in youth and reluctantly depart from in old age.

One cannot shut one's eyes to the fact that the members of our smart set stand in frightful awe of each other, and are not disposed to do independent things or create innovations. Well-born, travelled foreigners constantly comment on this peculiarity, and are at a loss to understand the broad stretches of personal freedom that women outside of this charmed circle enjoy and the conservative uniform limitations these women force upon themselves.

Why should women of great possibilities allow their minds to lie dormant from self-inflicted tyranny? Why be mercilessly bound to pleasure's wheel year after year, until mind and soul grow deformed?

Should women with power to reach higher things, be content to coddle this poor shadow, and, figuratively, swathe themselves in slavish nonentity? They only waste their best years and foolishly let their fair daughters follow them, to waste their lives in like manner.

It is for smart women to invest society with varied interests, to give it a new growth in keeping with the advanced times. Abundance of matter lies at their door, expectantly waiting. It only needs the courage of a few with talent and ability to make themselves leaders and inaugurate a regenerated society, so attractive and stimulating that the brilliant men who long ago fled from its inanities and wearisome aims, would again return to its portals and restore the lost prestige of days long since past—when poets, philosophers, statesmen and men of letters crowded the drawing-rooms of the smart set of old New York.

Horse-Swapping in Tennessee.

A travellingman thus describes a "horse-swapping day" in Tennessee: "One of the men was mounted on a raw-boned dapple gray while the other nag was of a deep yellow, and looked much like a living, moving hatrack. One was leading a mule and the other an old steed that looked like a broken-down car horse. Presently the man on the yellow horse said to the other: 'Well?' The answer was, 'Well?' 'Talk.' 'You talk.' 'Well, what'll you do?' 'swap.' 'How'll you swap?' 'Horse and horse.' After dickering for some time a trade was effected and one of them got a dollar to boot. We wandered about over the place and covered about an acre and a half until we grew tired, and then returned to the train. On the way back we overheard two of the strangers talking. One of these said he was three jackknives and $3.25 in money ahead. We were told that these swapping days are held once a month. The men meet at this place and swap anything, from a jackknife to a farm, but trading in horses is the favorite fancy with them."—New York Tribune.

The Cost of Carelessness.

Familiarity with danger seems to breed, if not a contempt for it, an utter carelessness. We have seen, says the Chattanooga Tradesman, the "Mohawk Dutchman," the celebrated expert with a band scroll saw, rub the ball of his thumb in dirty grease and then cut the grease off with the rapidly running saw as clean as could be done with soap and water. We have seen a man put his finger under a powerful trip hammer in motion just to show how well he could manage the machine. Many other foolish things are done just to "show off." But most of the accidents happen through a carelessness resulting from familiarity. As long as an operator is afraid of his machine he is not apt to get hurt. Many human minds are so constituted that they cannot bear a sustained effort in one direction; that is, cannot be always on the alert in regard to a certain contingency. A train despatcher or switch tender may hold a place for years without ever making a mistake, and at last make a terrible one, from some cause he could not explain. The only way to lessen the number of casualties—they cannot be avoided entirely—is to take all precautions. This is required of the owners if they wish to escape costly damage suits, but when all possible precautions have been taken, one can then only trust to luck.

Now that Mr. Foster exults over his revised revision of the tariff last year and the Tory press tells how good a thing protection is for the farmer increasing the cost of the goods they buy and decreasing the price of the products they sell, a glance at the present duty on a few common necessities of life will be profitable.

A SUGAR REVOLUTION

The "Intell" attributes the reduced price of sugar to the National Policy. Matthew Marshall in a recent article in the New York Sun on Industrial Revolutions says:

The immense revolution in the sugar industry caused by the discovery of an improved process of making sugar from beets has made, so far as can be known, no impression in Wall street excepting as it has affected the profits of the American Sugar Refining Company, but to the world at large it has been of the greatest importance. For years and years France, Germany and Austria strove unsuccessfully to extract from beets a sugar which in price and in quality would compete with that yielded by the sugar cane, but finally they triumphed. The consequence has been a reduction of profits to the Cuban Louisianian, and East Indian sugar planters, amounting in many cases to ruin and a reduction in price to consumers equal to millions of dollars a year. Contributory to the same results has been the invention of glucose made from indian corn, which takes the place of sugar for certain purposes, and thus practically increase the supply of it.

WHENCE COMES McGREEVY

The Intell. raises its pap-soiled hands in hypocritical horror at the idea of Thos. McGreevy being elected as a Conservative. Yet the Hon. Thos. was elected, now by whom? Mr. Dobell his opponent was an independent as will be seen by the following excerpt from his electoral address:

"Owing to the death of your late member, the Hon John Hearn, a vacancy has arisen in your division. I have to acknowledge the receipt of a requisition, numerously signed, and I feel honored to observe that it contains names of both nationalities and creeds, I also find among the subscribers gentlemen on both sides of politics. This requisition invites me to come forward as your candidate. In accordance with my promise in 1892, I readily and hartily do so. This time I come untrammeled by any pledge to either political party. And if you send me to parliament as your representative, I shall not allow party spirit to warp my judgment, and shall record my vote upon all questions as in my belief the best interests of the country demamd I need scarcely say my special efforts will be exerted to promote in every practical way the prosperity and commercial development of the city of Quebec in which the larger part of my life has been passed and with which my own interests are identified. I shall used my best endeavors, if elected, to have measures carried which will benefit the Dominion; increase its foreign trade; remove obstacles to a closer and freer trade with our sister colonies and the Mother Country; and I shall not cease to advocate reciprocal trade, on fair and just terms, with our great neighbor, the United States."

Mr. Laurier stated in the House that Mr. Dobell received the Liberal support in Quebec West. Now who elected the Hon. Thomas by a majority of seven?

Quick Relief, With no After Unpleasantness Comes to Those who use South American Kidney Cure.

Whilst both sexes are sufferers from kidney trouble, in many respects women are liable to peculiar weaknesses and pain, because of disorganization of the kidneys. Objection is taken, and rightly, to many remedies because of the method of use, as well as after-unpleasantness. This is never the case with South American Kidney Cure. It gives ease to the patient in six hours, and no annoying effects follow, for in a short time, even in aggravagated cases, an entire cure is aflected. There is no other medicine like South American Kidney Cure. It is a remedy for the kidneys and bladders only—not a general specific that is supposed to cure everything and ends by effecting no cure. South American Kidney Cure does its particular work and does it well.

That scrofulous taint which has been in your blood for years, will be expelled by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier.

MORE OR LESS SCIENTIFIC.

Scientists say that butter is the most nutritious of all articles of diet, with bacon a good second.

Sir Robert Ball, the Astronomer Royal for Ireland, is said to believe that the time is approaching when posterity will be able to construct machinery that will be operated with heat obtained by the direct action of the sun's rays.

The waters of North America, which means the Gulf of Mexico, the two great oceans and the rivers, creeks and lakes, are stocked with 1,800 different varieties of fish. Of the above number, 500 are peculiar to the Pacific and about 600 to the rivers, creeks and lakes.

Dr. A. E. Bridger expresses the opinion in The British Medical Journal that in the act of kissing we encounter only beneficent organisms. He says that "The advantages of kissing outweigh its infinitesimal risk, for it provides us with microbes useful for digestion." This will be a popular verdict.

When the cricket wishes to "sing" he bends the front part of his body downward a little, raises his wings without unfolding them, and rubs two odd little files quickly against each other. The sound which he makes in this way is greatly increased by two plates, which act like the parchment of a drum, causing the sound to become louder and to spread further.

Mr. F. L. Stevens, North Hoosick, N. Y., states that paper mills there are sometimes troubled with static electricity. In some cases sparks six to eight inches in length are produced as the paper leaves the calendar. A steam damper is used to prevent this, or a copper wire, well grounded, is made to rest on the web as it passes from the calendars to the reels.

In a recent balloon ascent of six miles Dr. A. Berson, of Berlin, states that the thermometer registered 84 degrees of frost F., and that he took an occasional sip at an oxygen cylinder which was part of his equipment, but that he suffered no serious inconvenience. This is so unprecedented that it would be interesting, and perhaps more satisfactory, to know whether the accuracy of the instruments used had been properly verified.

Ground oyster shells were given by the mediæval doctors to children suffering from rickets and scrofula. Now Drs. Muntz and Chatin tell the Paris Academy of Medicine that the old fellows were right. The shells contain lime, nitrogen, iron, sulphur, manganese, magnesia, flour, bromine, phosphoric acid and iodine, all excellent for feeble children. They say that if nurses and growing children were to take powdered oyster shells in their food, teeth would be improved.

The artificial rubies made in Paris a few years ago were regarded as scientific curiosities. But stones are now being largely sold in London and elsewhere which, while closely resembling in all essential respects the rubies of Burmah, are undoubtedly of artificial origin. Tried for hardness, specific gravity, lustre and subjected to all the tests which are usually applied to prescious stones, they cannot be distinguished from the natural ruby; they are actually crystalized red alumina, only differing from the natural ruby in the process by which they have been produced.

One of the most wonderful of the many discoveries in science that have been made during the last few years is the fact that a ray of light produces sound. A beam of sunlight is caused to pass through a prism, so as to produce what is called the solar spectrum, or rainbow. A disk, having slits in it, is revolved swiftly, and the colored light of the rainbow is made to break through it. Place the ear to a vessel containing silk, wool or other colored material. As the colored lights of the spectrum fall upon it sounds will be given by different parts of the spectrum, and there will be silence in other parts.

A very interesting contribution to scientific thought is made by Sir Robert Ball, his argument being that since the days of Whewell and Brewster the theory of the other planets being inhabited has been strengthened by fresh discoveries. Thus, spectroscopic research has demonstrated that hydrogen, carbon, sodium iron, calcium and other elements, necessary for building up the framework of living beings are widely diffused throughout the universe; and though there is not the same emphatic demonstration of the existence of oxygen because it has been held that the well-marked lines in the solar spectrum attributed to oxygen are really due to the oxygen in the earth's atmosphere—in all probability this life-giving gas is just as abundant on many other globes as on this one.

A Russian Wonder.

The newest society "sensation" in St. Petersburg is an old peasant woman with a wonderful memory. Her name is Irina Andrejewna Fedosova: she is 70 years of age, can neither read nor write, but knows by heart over 19,000 legends, folk-songs, and poems! When she gives a public recital the scene is a striking one. A little bent figure appears, hobbles on the platform, sits down on a chair, with hands folded, and withered face, quite expressionless. Amid a hush of expectation she begins to speak; then her face brightens, her eyes open widely and sparkle, while her voice grows clear and penetrating. She looks ten years younger in her enthusiasm, as she half speaks, half sings, the legends of her youth; tales of great wars, old fairy tales, long-lost tragedies, or tender love stories, while the audience, carried away by her strange magnetism, listens spellbound, laughs, and weeps at her will. She is the "rage" in the Russian capital, and we hear that two eminent literary men have written down a number of her memory-stored treasures, which they intend to publish in book form, when it should prove a rich find for lovers of folk-lore.—Detroit Free Press.

A Parisian Jest.

There are some very funny fellows in Paris, and many of them like nothing better than to play their jokes on entire strangers. One of these walking along one of the largest business streets one day saw before a clothing shop a great placard stating that the concern had 100,000 overcoats for sale.

Entering the shop the joker asked the man in charge if he were very busy.

"No," replied the salesman. "What can I do for you?"

"I see," said the jester, "that you have 100,000 overcoats for sale. I thought I'd like to try them on."—Harper's Young People.

SEVEN GREAT WONDERS AT COREA.

Among Them is a Hovering Stone and an Indestructible Forest.

A Chinese paper describes the seven wonders which Corea, like unto other Oriental countries, possesses, and which played a conspicuous role in antiquity. The Corean "wonders" consist, first, of a hot mineral spring near Kin Shantao, which is capable of curing sickness and diseases of all sorts. The second wonder is the two wells, one at each end of the peninsula, which have the peculiar characteristic that when one is full the other is empty. The water of the one is intensely bitter, that of the other has a pleasant and sweet taste. The third wonder is a cold cave from which there issues constantly an ice-cold wind, with such force that a strong man is not able to stand up against it. A pine forest which cannot be eradicated constitutes the fourth wonder. No matter what injury may be done to the roots the young trees spring up again like the phoenix from its ashes. The most remarkable, however, is the fifth wonder—the famous hovering stone—which stands, or rather appears to stand, in front of a palace erected to its honor. This is a massive rectangular block, free on all sides. Two men standing, one on each end, can draw a cord underneath the stone, from side to side, without encountering any obstacle. The sixth wonder is a hot stone which has been lying from time immemorial on the summit of a hill, and evolving a glowing heat. The seventh Corean wonder is a sweating Buddha. This is guarded in a great temple, in whose court for thirty yards on all sides not a single blade of grass grows. No tree, no flower will flourish on the sacred spot, and even wild creatures are careful not to profane it.

SUPERIOR VITALITY OF INSECTS.

Eggs Often Uninjured Even After Subjection to Intense Cold.

The eggs of insects have greater powers of vitality than any others. A case was published of an egg producing an insect eighty years after it must have been laid, and the scientist responsible for this statement thinks the power of vivification may endure in these eggs for an indefinite period. Many eggs of insects are exposed to the air without any covering, and many are sheltered too slightly to be secure from the frost. This, however, they are able to resist, remaining unfrozen, though exposed to the severest cold, or, still more surprising, are uninjured by its intensest action, recovering their vitality even after having been frozen into lumps of ice. On exposing several silk-worm eggs for five hours to a freezing mixture which made Fahrenheit's therometer fall to 38° below zero Spollanzi found that they were not frozen nor their fertility in the slightest degree impaired. Others were exposed to a degree of 56° below zero without being injured. The quality of the eggs of the snails is, perhaps, even more marvelous. These eggs, desiccated in a furnace until they are scarcely visible, will always remain their original bulk when damped, and the young will be brought forth as though the eggs had never been in any way interfered with. Neither heat nor cold seems to have any injurious effect upon their vitality, for they have been frozen into ice for any length of time and when the ice is melted will be found to be wholly uninjured.—Baltimore American.

Lady Stanley of Alderley.

The Dowager Lady Stanley of Alderley, whose death took place last month, was in many respects a most remarkable woman. Her great age of 87 was no hindrance to her extraordinary intellectual and physical activity. Within the last few weeks she attended the weekly meeting of the Girls' Public Day School Company (of which she was one of the earliest promoters), had attended a lecture at the Royal Institution on her old friend Carlyle, and had gone, in spite of the severity of the weather, to see a window given by her son, the present Lord Stanley, to a church. As a matter of history it may be recorded that she was born before the Jubilee of George III., was presented at court to George IV., was familiar with the widow of the young Pretender, and was present both at the Coronation and the Jubilee of her Majesty Queen Victoria. More than half a century ago Lady Stanley was one of the original promoters of the Queen's College, and she became one of the members of its first council. She assisted to a great extent, and to the best of her ability, Miss Emily Davies, to whom the foundation of Girton College was primarily and mainly owing. During the whole of her life she has been doing the best that she could do for the recent development of the education of women, never thrusting herself to the front or endeavoring to monopolize the credit that was due to others, and all this good work was accomplished without her neglecting her duties as a woman or taking a due interest in her children, even to the second and third generation. Lady Stanley had twelve children, seven of whom are now living. Even recently she regretted she was not ten years younger to go and explore some of the newly-investigated regions of Central Asia, and as an example of her brightness, it is related that at one of the last visits paid to her by the late Premier, Mr. Gladstone, when he endeavored to turn the subject of conversation from that of politics, in which they differed, by alluding to a recent novel, she is reported to have said, "Do not let us talk of novels; leave them for your old age, as I do," a singular jest for a lady who was 87 when addressed to a statesman of 85.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Playing Sweet Marie

"Bill Doolan's band has been captured in Oklahoma," remarked the newspaper reader. "You don't say so," replied the man who pretends to keep posted, but doesn't. "What was Bill's band doing?" Playing "Sweet Marie."

One Hundred Miles an Hour.

The real danger in increasing the speed of expresses driven by steam does not lie in incidental risks. It is not denied that a modern locomotive might be built which could run up to ninety or possibly one hundred miles an hour if the lines were straight. It is the curves of the existing lines which render any such speed impossible, unless the weight of the engines and trains were also increased far beyond what the bridges and permanent way would bear. At the first sharp curve the 100-mile express would fly off the rails. The necessary relation of these curves to speed is accurately known, and it is that, and not the want of power, or novel dangers from wind pressure or boiler explosions, which sets the limit to modern train speed. As the force tending to throw off the line a train running at the speed of one hundred and fifty miles an hour would be about six and a half times greater than that which a steam express train resists at a curve when running at sixty miles an hour, it is plain that the present lines could not be used for the "lightning express," even though the electro-motor were substituted for the steam engine. The lines must not only be stronger, but straighter, than would be possible by any modification of their present form.—The Spectator.

The New Woman

He—"A drink like that makes me feel like a new man."

She—"Let me have some of it. Perhaps it will make me feel like a new woman."

He (with fears of "emancipation")—"Well, I guess not."

Wine Caused the Loss of the Victoria.

It is now stated on good authority that the fearful disaster which befell the warship Victoria, resulting in the instant destruction of hundreds of lives, is another of the long list of calamities which may be set down to the credit of strong drink. It is said that the fatal order which resulted in the collision with the Camperdown was given in a fit of recklessness superinduced by too much wine drinking. On no other ground, it is said, can it be explained why a man ordinarily so cool, discreet and skilful as Admiral Tryon, should have given an order which the commonest sailors knew could only result in disaster. It is charitable to believe that Admiral Tryon was not in a condition of mind to realize what he was about when he said that "six cables length" instead of eight should be the distance between the ships in that manœuvre. That two cables of difference meant a swift and awful death to hundreds of brave men, including the admiral himself. It was wine that did it and not Admiral Tryon.—Christian at Work.

UP-TO-DATE PHOTOGRAPHS.

They are Costly, but Their Charms May be Perennial.

Being photographed nowadays is an elaborate process. Heretofore, when a woman wanted her photograph taken she went to the studio and arranged about the size of the picture and the number she wanted. She gave a reassuring touch to her hair, sat down before the camera, turned her head a little to the right or to the left, as the artist desired, and, clamped on either temple, gazed fixedly, inspiringly or otherwise, at a spot on the wall. Now the subject's "possibilities" are studied in detail. Nothing is left to accident. The fashionable woman carries her various gowns to the studio with her, and tries them on, each in turn, that the artist may decide which suits her best. She pays $50 for the photographs. Her hair is arranged by skillful hands in different ways, that a style of coiffure may be chosen which will be appropriate, not only to the contour of her face and head, but to the environments of the picture. The subject's hands and arms are criticised, likewise her throat and neck, to see whether a severe high costume or an evening gown shall be used. The topics of backgrounds and accessories are discussed. All of these tinted carbon photographs are taken full length. Maybe the subject will pose as a dame of the first empire, with skin ny satin gown, elaborate coiffure, jeweled girdle, fan and lorgnette. Perhaps she stands, half turned about, with her back to the spectator, and her pure profile deftly brought out on a dark velvet curtain. All women would not look charming in such a position. The artist knows whom to choose, and the subject will wonder at her beauty when she sees the picture. A wilful, coquettish girl is posed as a modern Priscilla. The quaint spinning wheel and high-backed chair, the small-paned window at the back of the colonial room, form a charming contrast with her rich brocade gown and beaming face. The scant, puffed sleeves set off the rounded arms, the curve of the wrist, the painting, and the undulating outlines of the figure are suggested, not revealed, by the prim folds of the flowered silk frock. These latter-day photographs are like paintings, and are likely never to grow old-fashioned. They have the charm that distinguishes the portrait painters of the old English school; a charm that custom will not stale. They will not become out of date and grotesque, like the photographs of twenty years ago, found in family albums. In those days a woman was hired to put the lights in the eyes, color the cheeks, and paint the ribbon bows and artificial flowers of the ladies and the gay neckties and buttonhole bouquets of the gentlemen. The new photographs, be it a hundred years hence, no matter what evolutions, contractions, or diminutions may befall woman's dress.

TRUE INWARDNESS OF IT.

An English paper is authority for the statement that one of the principal grievances which have led to the divorce between Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt was the lady's habit of spending money. Mr. Vanderbilt possesses property real and personal to the value of $80,000,000. His wife's pocket money was an allowance of $100,000 a year. As she possessed under any circumstances almost anything that a woman could possibly desire, she no doubt found much difficulty in getting rid of the little hundred "thou" of dollars, so she had to seek for original methods. Her latest achievement in that way was a little while ago in Paris. She and her husband were staying at the Continental Hotel. She did not like her apartments, so the story goes, and so she engaged the whole of the first floor of the enormous hotel and had it completely refurnished at her own cost. As she was only going to stay six weeks, Paris was simply dumbfounded at this prodigality. The furnishing bill amounted to $35,000, the weekly hotel bill was $3,000. Mrs. Vanderbilt desired proceedings to have the allowance increased to $300,000.

Just how she is going to spend that $300,000 is an interesting question. Possibly some of it will go in the purchase of a foreign title for her daughter Consuelo, who recently sailed with her mother for London. There is, in fact, a rumor that the young lady will soon marry the Prince of Battenberg. It is said that on the passage over both the ladies had in their staterooms hammocks that are supposed to be the most complete protection against seasickness ever invented. It is consoling to those of us who do not possess it to know that even $300,000 a year cannot purchase immunity from seasickness.

Five Photographs in One.

An Atlantic City, N. J., photographer produces a photograph at a single exposure, which gives five different images of the same person in different positions. This is accomplished by placing the sitter between two mirrors placed at an angle of five degrees to each other. The double reflection between these mirrors produces four images of the person placed in front of them, the principles being the same as that of the ordinary kaleidoscope. The original face is made in profile and the reflections give the full face, opposite profile, and two rear views. The result is curious and interesting, and it has been suggested, would be useful in identifying criminals.—Popular Science News.

ENGLISH and CANADIAN PHYSICIANS FAIL

Sick Since 1878 with Heart Disease, Nervous Debility and Indigestion—"I Would Not be Alive To-day Were it not for South American Nervine Tonic.

MRS. H. STAPLETON, WINGHAM, ONT.

From all parts of the world people in ill-health have travelled to Great Britain to consult with the late Sir Andrew Clarke, the medical adviser of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, who conferred on him, as a recognition of his great talents, the honor of knighthood. England's G. O. M., Gladstone found in him a tried councilor and friend. But times without number it has been shown that when the highest medical skill has failed to cure, South American Nervine Tonic has taken men and women almost from out of the grave and given back to them lost health. A remarkable case comes to us at the present time Mrs. Harriet Stapleton, an old and respected resident of the well-known town of Wingham, Ont., had almost reached death's door. "I have been troubled," to quote her own words, "very much for a number of years (since 1878) with heart disease, nervous dibility, indigestion, and dyspepsia, and have been treated by a number of the best physicians both in Canada and England, and had tried several proprietory medicines, but obtained no relief. I was advised three months ago to take South American Nervine, and must say I do believe if I had not done so I would not be alive to-day. I have received very great benefit from the medicine, the first few doses even having a most beneficial effect. I strongly and cheerfully recommend South American Nervine to all who suffer as I have. "I will never be without it." To these very unmistakable words, freely given, Mrs Stapleton attaches her own signature dated Wingham Ont., April 9th, 1894.

Can more be asked? Mrs. Stapleton's case has its counterpart in scores and hundreds of homes, in every village and hamlet in the Dominion. Women are terrible sufferers. Mrs. Stapleton said she had become so bad that she was afraid actually to put her foot to the ground, and was in truth afraid of her own shadow. The case was a desperate one indeed, but it was not beyond the reach of South American Nervine. It cured in Mrs. Stapleton's case. It will cure in others just as despairing. It must cure, for it is founded on the unquestioned scientific principle of a application to the nerve centres of the system from which comes all diseases, trifling or serious.

Doctors' efforts are largely experimental. They may understand the patient; often they do not. Medicine is given. Perhaps it will produce temporary relief. Sometimes it is as harmless as sugar and water. South American Nervine looks upon ill-health as too serious to trifle with. It's one aim is to make sick men and women, no matter how far gone their condition may be, well. It does all it aims to do. It cures.

A Midnight Walk with a colicy baby or a colicy stomach isn't pleasant. Either can be avoided by keeping a bottle of Perry Davis' PAIN KILLER on the medicine shelf. It is invaluable in sudden attacks of Cramps, Cholera Morbus, Dysentery and Diarrhœa. Just as valuable for all external pains.

Dose—One teaspoonful in a half glass of water or milk (warm if convenient).

UNCLE HOBERT-S STRATEGY.

"You see, my boy," said Uncle Hobart, "matrimony is a dangerous thing. You take a house for, say a year, and if it don't suit you at the year's end, you give it up and take another. You buy a horse, and if it balks, you send it off to auction to be sold. But with a wife it's altogether differeht. You can neither sell nor exchange her—it's a life-long bargain."

"But, Uncle Hobart," said the nephew and heir-apparent of that gentleman, "let's take another view of the matter. Suppose that she is all that is lovely, excellent and desirable."

Uncle Hobart Renshaw rubbed his nose.

As an inveterate bachelor of five-and-fifty, he was naturally inclined to take the less sanguine view of the case.

"Paul," said he, "it's of no use to argue the matter. A young man in love is a young man mad for the time being. If you've made up your mind to get married, not all the arguments in creation will avail against it. Only be sure you make a right choice. Remember how much depends upon it."

Paul Fontaine laughed good-humoredly. Like all young men, he thought so much caution quite unnecessary.

"There are two sisters of these Lindleys, you say?" said Uncle Hobart, reflectively, polishing his glittering spectacle glasses.

"'Two, sir; Emily and Esther."

"Both of 'em pretty?"

"As twin blush roses, sir."

"There you go!" said Uncle Hobart, testily. "Right into sentiment, just like a three-volume novel."

"Well, sir, isn't it natural enough to compare a pretty girl to a beautiful flower? If I could think of any other comparison"—

"You needn't trouble yourself," interrupted Uncle Hobart. "'What I want to find out is what they are like."

"Esther is bright and sparklin; Emily is all softness and refinement. Esther is a brunette, with the blackest hair I ever saw. Emily has chestnut curls and blue eyes, and a lovely, fair complexion."

"Exactly." Uncle Hobart hummed an old tune which had been popular in his youth:

Black eyes most dazzle at a ball,
Blue eyes most please when shadows fall.

"And which do you like best, Paul—eh?"

"They are both of them charming," energetically answered the young man. "Upon my life, uncle, I sometimes wish that the Turkish system prevailed here, and that I could marry both of them."

"Difficult to decide which is the most fascinating?" questioned Uncle Hobart. "But the thing is, my lad, which will wash and wear the best for every-day life?"

"That is a question which the future will decide, Uncle. Unfortunately we have no chemical test to decide the matter."

"Think not?" said Uncle Hobart, drily. "'Look here, Paul, up to the present time you have only seen these girls through the chiaroscuro of visiting dress and company manners. What would you give to behold them as they really are—to get a peep behind the scenes?"

"Half that I am possessed of, uncle!" cried out Fontaine, with animation; "if only to be able to satisfactorily prove to you, sir, how pure, and noble and high-souled they are. But all this is nonesense—of course it is an impossibility!"

"Nothing of the sort," said Uncle Hobart. "You say that up to the present these girls do not know me personally, or of my conection with the board of health. Well, it is true that I am neither a wizard nor a magician, but I am what is quite as useful in this matter—a sanitary official. I go into people's back doors when I wish it; I stride remorselessly through the kitchen and cellars when I want to see for myself rather than trust my inspectors; I am at liberty to take a down-stairs view of the world. Eh, young man, what do you think of that?"

Paul Fontaine stared.

"I don't understand how——"

"But you will, doubtless, when I tell you that the Lindley's house is in my district; that I have decided to go there to-morrow morning to see personally that all the drainage is perfect. If you choose to volunteer a little help I'll disguise you as one of my men and——"

"With all my heart, uncle!" cried the young man, with glittering eyes and heightened color. 'I fear no ordeal to which you can subject Esther and Emily. Believe me, the metal will ring true!"

"Well, we'll see," said Mr. Renshaw. "In the meantime, suppose you ring for tea."

Mr. Hobart Renshaw was a man of property, but he was also a man of peculiarities. One of these was to earn his borough surveyor's salary as honestly as if he depended on it for his daily bread.

People called him a miser; but little cared he for that. The widow, the fatherless and he that was ready to perish could tell a different tale; and Hobart Renshaw, quaint and eccentric though he was, could read the book of human character with an almost unerring eye.

* * * * * *

"Run, Betty—run! It's that nuisance of a drain man again! It does seem to me as if he came about a great deal oftener than at all necessary."

The Lindleys were people who kept up a grand appearance upon a comparatively disproportionate foudation. Their sittng room was elegantly furnished; their hall upholstered in Persian patterned Brussels, with rosewood rack and Gothic hall-chair; but the kitchen was a gloomy, subterranean apartment, scantily furnished and uninviting in aspect.

Moreover, the Lindleys were struggling to keep up appearances on a moderate income, and Betty, the little workhouse girl, in her print frock and thick shoes, was the only servant they kept.

"Dear me! What is the young man sticking his nose in here for?" cried out Esther, indignantly. 'Does he expect to find drains in the fireplace, or under the washtubs?"

"Please, sir, the sink's in the cellar, sir. This way, sir!" said Betty, clamping on ahead and turning open a cellar door whence rushed out a blast of sepulchrally damp air.

But the one glance into the kitchen had been enough. Esther, in a greasy pink dress, and her hair in a bristle of curl papers, sat before a tray, with a bowl in her lap, eating a 10-o'clock breakfast; while her pretty feet, thrust into a pair of badly-worn slippers, displayed sundry unmended holes, and a soiled pocket handkerchief tied around her neck did duty in place of the neat collar or frill generally supposed to be necessary.

Mrs. Lindley was bending over a huge kettle of bubbling and boiling preserves upon the range; and at the wash-tub stood a slight, trim figure, with an apron tied around her waist, and sleeves above the elbows—Emily herself, scrubbing away with the energy of a laundress, and her shining hair wound in lustrous braids around and about her small head.

Uncle Hobart, following closely at the heels of his nephew, was just in time to hear Esther's petulant voice, from the other room, sounding shrilly on their ears.

"It's too bad, mamma! The toast is scorched to a cinder, and the coffee isn't drinkable. I must have some fresh made."

"Oh, Ettie, don't!" coaxed Emily. "Mamma is so tired, and she has so much to do! Won't a glass of milk do?"

"No, it won't! I must have coffee, and decent coffee, too!" asserted the brunette, tapping her pretty foot on the floor, and knitting her jetty brows.

"Then I'll make it," said Emily, "if you'll wait until I get these collars rubbed out."

"I'd be ashamed to turn washerwoman," grumbled Miss Esther.

"I'm not ashamed of anything that is useful!" cried Emily, with spirit, "when papa works so hard, and the washing bills are so heavy. It won't hurt either of us to do a little honest work, and spare mamma all we can."

"Do leave off moralizing, and get my coffee!" snarled Esther, who had evidently risen in no amiable mood.

And the borough surveyor and his bogus assistant, having no excuse for remaining longer, heard nothing more.

Paul Fontaine was silent as he walked along the street; but Uncle Hobart chuckled softly to himself.

"Nothing like an inside view!" said he. The upstairs angel often turns into a downstairs demon—eh? Ha! ha! ha! Paul, my boy, beware of brunettes. There's mischief behind the arch of those black brows. If you're determined to have a wife, take the one at the washtub—the little girl who wanted to help her mother."

"I believe you are right, Uncle Hobart," said Paul.

* * * * *

"But tell me, Paul, how you came to choose me instead of Esther?" questioned the blue-eyed bride, as they stood together by the sea at Brighton, the week after their wedding. "Esther is so much prettier—so much lovelier than me. Every one likes Esther better than they do me. And do you know, darling, I half think that Esther was just a little disappointed that you didn't prefer her?"

"Do you think so?" said Paul, carelessly. "We can scarcely account for our preferences. Esther is very brilliant and beautiful; and when first we became acquainted I was fairly bewitched by her. But now I value the steady-shining star of your love above all the will-o-the-wisps in creation!"

But he never told her of his amateur sanitary inspection, and Uncle Hobart's test of character.

THE MILK WHITE DOE.

The sound was so faint that only the ears of the skilled huntsman might hear it.

It came from hundreds of tiny hoofs, muffled by the grass in the mountain park.

"Antelope!"

Together we lay face downward—I and my Indian guide—with our long rifles at easy rest, and awaited the coming of the band. It dashed over a hog back and into full view—a wildly leaping, struggling, undulating mass of reddish-brown, white-tufted bodies stretched to the fullest speed.

Nervous? Yes, for in a moment more the band would pass us within easy range.

We lay with forefingers on the triggers as the timid animals, wild with fear, skimmed along as if wafted by the spirit of the wind. Now they are directly opposite; we will never have such another shot.

Onward they dast, and pass so closely by that it seems we can hear their heartbeats. Their great, liquid eyes are wild with terror.

Another moment and the herd has swept by us, only the hindmost are in view; now, they are out of hearing, and presently they are lost to sight.

Absolute silence, save for the rustle of the brown grass as the cooling autumn wind stirs it.

Not a shot was fired. My finger was upon the trigger, my aim certain, but I lacked the power even for the gentle pressure necessary to send a bullet straight into the herd. I was under a spell.

I looked at Pablo. His dark face seemed almost pale; his eyes betrayed excitement, not the excitement of anger or fear, but of a tender sympathy.

The same power that had stayed my finger when it would have pressed the trigger had a like effect upon him.

"Senor," he said, "it is the milk-white doe that none may slay."

It was overpowering curiosity that had rendered my forefinger inflexible, for at the head of the band was the most beautiful animal I had ever seen a milk-white doe. She seemed fleeter, more timid and of more graceful contour than any of the herd. She was the perfection of animal grace and beauty. I fancied I heard a soft, sad moan as she passed before the muzzle of my rifle. I was lost briefly in pathetic contemplation, and the herd was gone.

"Come, Pablo, it is almost dusk, but we must follow; come, stir yourself, you unenthusiastic son of Montezuma, and let us begone.

"Senor," said Pablo, in his calm and imperturbably manner, yet with a solemn impressiveness. "It is death to all who follow the milk-white doe."

"Nonsense, I must have her; let us follow quick."

"Have patience, senor, and to-night when we smoke by the camp fire I will tell you the legend of the milk-white doe."

And this is the legend he told me:

Before the white man knew there was a western continent, before the Spaniards came, even before the reign of the ancient Quetzaalcoatl, Lord of the Seven Caves of Navatlaques and King of the Seven Nations, out of which arose the splendor of the Montezuman empire, the powerful tribes lived in the north. They were as the sands of the shore washed by the great ocean of the Rising Sun and the numbers of their arrows were greater than the twigs in the forest.

Their queen was Maxtella.

Her skin was as white as the snow on yonder mountain peak, her lips were as scarlet as the flaming loco blossom, her eyes were as blue as the chalchuites in the Minas de las Perdidas, and from their liquid depths beamed truth and purity of soul.

She was a virgin queen. Her courtiers wooed her in vain. The richest of them all laid his wealth on chalchuites and beautiful shells at her feet; the mightiest hunter brought her trophies of the chase. To all she spoke words of wisdom and beauty, but her love was for no one man; it was for all her people. Her virtue and her beauty were the marvels of those days.

Her counselors were wise beyond their generation. Many things they knew that were unknown to the subjects of Queen Maxtella. They knew of the eastern ocean, of a great country beyond to which their ancestors had gone years before.

The northern hordes were at peace. So powerful were they that the tribes in the south did not dare to make war with them, nor would the queen suffer her subjects to make war upon those weaker hordes who dwelt in rocks and caves, high up in the cliffs that bordered on the green canons. There was a vassal chief, Azul, of lowly birth and evil ways. He saw the beauteous Maxtella, and the sight of her touched his black heart. He loved Maxtella, not for her virtue nor her beauty nor her wisdom. He loved her that he might rule the land, and that from his blood and hers might come a race of savage kings, and that the northern hordes might make war upon the tribes of the south and despoil them of their treasure.

Azul knew the black magic art. He brought his richest treasure to Maxtella's court. He used his black art that he might appear pleasing in her sight. His arms and throat were bare. On his head was a snowy white helmet, and his dress was of green feathers. His breast-plate of feather work gleamed like jewels when the sun shone upon it. Tall and straight was this vassal chief, and mighty was his stride. Great blue and blood-red stones shone in the handle of his sword.

But the counselors were wise men. They could see his black art and read his evil mind, and they spurned him with scorn. They would have driven him from the court but they were powerless to do so. The vassal chief held in his hand a wand, sharpened like a knife, by which he worked his magic art.

When the Queen appeared he looked at her and she turned pale. Azul's eyes pierced her, but his magic was not strong enough to make her love him. Until then she knew not fear, but now the evil spell was upon her. All of Azul's power was exerted to subdue her gentle heart.

When she went to walk a wolf sprang up in her path, sharp stones cut through the deer skin and wounded her feet.

Near by was a spring of healing water, but when Maxtella went to drink of it a foul odor of poisonous gases arose.

She sought her couch, but Azul had driven sleep away. When she was alone the black-hearted vassal chief would suddenly appear and with the thongs of the deer would beat her white body until his savage lashes drew drops of blood.

All things could he make Maxtella do but love him. False words she spoke to her counselors and did unholy deeds that made her courtiers bow their heads in shame. No more was Maxtella just or merciful. Cruelty, pitiless cruelty, turned her love of her subjects to hate.

Of her attendants who remained faithful none was more so than a little page, a boy of not more than a score of years. These two sat one eve within the palace; the dusky shadows were gathering without, but the night could only bring added wretchedness to Maxtella. The boy sang to her, and as his song died away a black shape entered the room. It was Azul.

"Thy song is sad," he said to the page. Why do you weep, Maxtella?"

The rivers of Maxtella's eyes were dried up.

"Now I will teach you how to weep," and he struck her with his cruel thong.

Maxtella turned upon him her timid, pleading eyes. With a mighty bound the youth leaped toward the chief and seized the magic wand. Its possession gave him the strength of many men. He struck the wretch a blow and pinned him to the floor. Azul writhed in pain, and the blood died his dress of feathers crimson. None but a wizard might ever lose him. With the blow the spell he had wrought on Maxtella was broken, and all her gentleness and purity returned. It was this that caused her to pity the bleeding wretch, squirming in agony, yet furious with rage. She reached down her delicate hand to withdraw the wand, if it were possible, when Azul seized her by the arm and buried his sharp, gleaming teeth into the hand extended in mercy.

Maxtella, unable to release herself, shrieked with pain, for the bite of the sorcerer was as deadly as the poison of the snake with the castenets in his tail.

"Now is thy bloodm ingled with mine!" hissed Azul, "and of thy own free will. Now are we one forever. By my living hate and the mingling of our blood I have supremest power over thee. Coward thou hast ever been; coward thou shalt ever be. Thy spirit shall pass from thee in the form of the creature thou most resembles—a doe—timid of heart, fleet of foot and spotless white. None may slay thee, yet thou wilt ever long for the dart that would release the spell. Thy speed shall shame the fleetest of the herd and thy matchless beauty shall ever lure the hunter to his death."

And with these words a milk-white doe darted from the palace walls, trembling with fright. It hides in brakes and canons and flees when no hunter is nigh.

Hundreds have seen it and many have been lured to pursue it. The fallen rocks from canon walls hides the corse of many a hunter who sought to slay the milk-white doe. None have ever returned to tell the story of those chases. And those who escaped the canon's dangers—their bones lie bleaching in eternal snow.

Tons of Papers.

A statistician has learned that the annual aggregate circulation of the papers of the world is calculated to be 12,000,000,000 copies. To grasp an idea of this magnitude, we may state that it would cover no fewer than 10,450 square miles of surface; that it is printed on 781,250 tons of paper; and, further, that if the number, 12,000,000,000, represented, instead of copies, seconds, it would take over 333 years for them to elapse. In lieu of this arrangement, we might press and pile them vertically upward to gradually reaching our highest mountains; topping all these, and even the highest Alps; the pile would reach the magnificent altitude of 490, or, in round numbers, 500 miles. Calculating that the average man spends five minutes reading his paper in the day (this is a very low estimate), we find that the people of the world altogether annually occupy time equivalent to 100,000 years reading the papers.—Philadelphia Record.

CHASE'S CHAPTER

1. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills are a combination of valuable medicines in concentrated form as prepared by the eminent Physician and Author, Dr. A. W. Chase, with a view to not only be an unfailing remedy for Kidney and Liver troubles, but also tone the Stomach and purify the Blood, at a cost that is within the reach of all. The superior merit of these pills is established beyond question by the praise of thousands who use them—one Pill a dose, one box 25 cents.

2. When there is a Pain or Ache in the Back the Kidneys are speaking of trouble that will ever increase unless relieved. We have the reliable statement of L. B. Johnson, Holland Landing, who says: I had a constant Back-Ache, my back felt cold all the time, appetite poor, stomach sour and belching, urine scalding, had to get up 3 or 4 times during night to urinate, commenced taking one Kidney-Liver Pill a day; Back-Ache stopped in 48 hours, appetite returned, and able to enjoy a good meal and a good nights sleep; they cured me.

3. Constipation often exists with Kidney Trouble, in such a case there is no medicine that will effect a permanent cure except Chase's combined Kidney-Liver Pill, one 25 cent box will do more good than dollars and dollars worth of any other preparation, this is endorsed by D. Thompson, Holland Landing, Ont.

WOMAN'S NEED

Women suffer unspeakable tortures from muscular weakness, caused by impaired nerves and poor blood. Uric Kidney acid poison, unsuspected, weakens the nerves and poisons the blood. By and by, if the Kidneys do not properly purify the blood, then comes prolapsus, retroversion, etc. Blood 75 per cent. pure is not a nourisher—it is a death breeder.

Delicate women need not be told how much they would give to get and STAY well. If their blood is free from the poisonous ferments of the Kidneys and Liver, they will never know what "weakness" is. The blood is the source and sustainer of health it cannot be kept pure except the Kidneys and Liver do their work naturally. Something is needed to insure free and natural action of these organs, one 25 cent box of Kidney-Liver Pills will prove to any sufferer they are a boon to women, can be used with perfect confidence by those of delicate constitution.

One Kidney-Liver Pill taken weekly will effectually neutralize the formation of Uric Acid in the blood and prevent any tendency to Bright's Disease or Diabetes.

For purifying the Blood and renovating the system, especially in the Spring, one 25 cent box is equal to $10 worth of any Sarsaparilla or Bitters known. Sold by all dealers, or by mail on receipt of price, EDMANSON, BATES & CO., 45 Lombard Street, Toronto.

LIKE THE NOX-ous worm that feeds unseen upon the perfumed petals of the rose until it withers, fades and dies, so Scrofula, tainting the whole body with its poison, may lurk hidden for years, but none the less surely will show itself in some of its hideous forms that lead to misery and death. B. B. B. removes every trace of Scrofulous poison and every vestige of Bad Blood, which is the fountain-head of nearly all disease. It has cured terrible cases of Scrofula of 25 years' standing, and all Eruptions, Pimples, Blotches, Rashes, Sores, Ulcers, Abscesses, etc., yield readily to its specific healing powers, acting through the blood upon the entire system.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money.'

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S. Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

HE EASTER JUBILEE.

LOQUENT SERMON BY DR. TALMAGE ON THE RESURRECTION.

'Death is Swallowed Up in Victory, the Text of His Discourse—The Perfect Soul in its Perfect Body—The Perfect Christ in a Perfect Heaven—Victory.

About eighteen hundred and sixty-one Easter mornings have awakened the earth. In France for three centuries the almanacs made the year begin at Easter, until Charles IX. made the year begin at January 1st. In the Tower of London there is a Royal payroll of Edward I., on which there is an entry of eighteen pence for four hundred colored and pictured Easter eggs, with which the people sported. In Russia slaves were fed and alms were distributed on Easter.

Ecclesiastical councils met at Pontus, at Gaul, at Rome, at Achaia, to decide the particular day, and, after a controversy more animated than gracious, decided it, and now through all Christendom in some way, the first Sunday after the full moon which happens upon or next after March 21 is filled with Easter rejoicing. The royal court of the SaSbbaths is made up of fifty-two. Fifty-one are princes in the royal household; but Easter is Queen. She wears a richer diadem, and sways a more jewelled sceptre, and in her smile nations are irradiated. We welcome this queenly day, holding high up in hr right hand the wrenched-off bolt of Christ's sepulchre, and holding high up in her left hand the key to all the cemeteries in Christendom.

My text is an ejaculation. It is spun out of hallelujahs. Paul wrote right on in his argument about the resurrection, and observed all the laws of logic; but when he came to write the words of the text his fingers and his pen and the parchment on which he wrote took fire, and he cried out, "Death is swallowed up in victory!" It is a dreadful sight to see an army routed and flying. They scatter everything valuable on the track. Unwheeled artillery. Hoof of horse on breast of wounded and dying man. You have read of the French falling back from Sedan, or Napoleon's track of ninety thousand corpses in the snowy banks of Russia, or of the five kings tumbling over the rocks of Bethoram with their armies, while the hail-storms of heaven and the swords of Joshua's hosts struck them with their fury. But in my text is a worse discomfiture. It seems that a black giant proposed to conquer the earth. He gathered for his host all the aches and pains and maladies and distempers and epidemics of the ages. He marched them down, drilling them in the north-east wind, amid the slush of tempests. He threw up barricades of grave-mound. He pitched tent of charnel house. Some of the troops marched with slow tread, commanded by consumptions; some in double-quick, commanded by pneumonias. Some he took by long besiegement of evil habit, and some by one stroke of the battle-axe of casualty. With bony hand he pounded at the doors of hospitals and sick-rooms, and won all the victories in all the great battlefields of all the five continents. Forward, march! the conqueror of conquerors, and all the generals and commanders-in-chief, and all presidents and kings and sultans and czars drop under the feet of his war charger.

But one Christmas night his antagonist was born. As most of the plagues and sicknesses and despotisms came out of the east, it was appropriate that the new conqueror should come out of the same quarter. Power is given him to awaken all the fallen of all the centuries and of all lands, and marshal them against the black giant. Fields have already been won, but the last day will see the decisive battle. When Christ shall lead forth his two brigades, the brigade of the risen dead and the brigade of the celestial host, the black giant will fall back, and the brigade from the riven sepulchres will take him from beneath, and the brigade of descending immortals will take him from above, and "death shall be swallowed up in victory." The old braggart that threatened the conquest and destruction of the planet has lost his throne, has lost his sceptre, has lost his palace, has lost his prestige, and the one word written over all the gates of mausoleum and catacomb and necropolis, on cenotaph and sarcophagus, on the lonely cairn of the Arctic explorer, and on the catafalque of great cathedral, written in capitals of azelia and calla lily, written in musical cadence, written in doxology of great assemblages, written on the sculptured door of the family vault is "Victory." Coronal word, embannered word, apocalyptic word, chief word of triumphal arch under which conquerors return. Victory! Word shouted at Culloden and Balakalava and Blenheim; at Megiddo and Solferino; at Marathon, where the Athenians drove back the Medes; at Poictiers, where Charles Martel broke the ranks of the Saracens; at Salamis, where Themistocles in the great seafight confounded the Persians, and at the door of the Eastern cavern of chiselled rock where Christ came out through a recess and throttled the King of Terrors and put him back in the niche from which the celestial Conqueror had just emerged. Aha! when the jaws of the Eastern mausoleum took down the black giant, "death was swallowed up in victory."

I proclaim the abolition of death. The old antagonist is driven back into mythology with all the lore about Stygian ferry and Charon with oar and boat. We shall have no more to do with death than we have with the cloak-room at a Governor's or President's levee. We stop at such cloak-room and leave in charge of the servant our overcoat, our overshoes, our outward apparel, that we may not be impeded in the brilliant round of the drawing-room. Well, my friends, when we go out of this world we are going to a King's banquet, and to a reception of monarchs, and at the door of the tomb we leave the cloak of flesh and the wrappings with which we meet the storms of the world. At the close of our earthly reception, under the brush and broom of the porter, the coat or hat may be handed to us better than when we resigned it, and the cloak of humanity will finally be returned to us improved and brightened and purified and glorified. You and I do not want our bodies returned to us as they are now. We want to get rid of all their weaknesses, and all their susceptibilities to fatigue, and all their slowness of locomotion. They will be put through a chemistry of soil and heat and cold and changing seasons out of which God will reconstruct them as much better than they are now as the body of the rosiest and healthiest child that bounds over the lawn is better than the sickest patient in the hospital.

But as to our soul, we will cross right over, not waiting for obsequies, independent of obituary, into a state in every way better, with wider room and velocities beyond computation; the dullest of us into companionship with the very best spirits in their very best moods, in the best room of the universe, the four walls furnished and panelled and pictured and glorified with all the splendors that the infinite God in all ages has been able to invent.

This view, of course, makes it of little importance whether we are cremated or sepultured. If the latter is dust to dust, the former is ashes to ashes. If any prefer incineration, let them have it without caricature. The world may become so crowded that cremation may be universally adopted by law, as well as by general consent. Many of the mightiest and best of earth have gone through this process. Thousands and tens of thousands of God's children have been cremated. P. P. Bliss and wife, the evangelist singers, cremated by accident at Ashtabula Bridge; John Rogers, cremated by persecution; Latimer and Ridley, cremated at Oxford; Pothinus and Blondina, a slave, and Alexander, a physician, and their comrades, cremated at the order of Marcus Aurelius. At least a hundred thousand of Christ's disciples cremated, and there can be no doubt about the resurrection of their bodies. If the world lasts as much longer as it has already been built, there perhaps may be no room for the large acreage set apart for resting places, but that time has not come. Plenty of room yet, and the race need not pass that bridge of fire until it comes to it. The most of us prefer the old way. But whether out of natural disintegration or cremation we shall get that luminous, buoyant, gladsome, transcendent, magnificent, inexplicable structure called the resurrection body, you will have it, I will have it. I say to you to-day, as Paul said to Agrippa, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you, that God should raise the dead?"

That far-up cloud, higher than the hawk flies, higher than the eagle flies, what is it made of? Drops of water from the Hudson, other drops from East River, other drops from a stagnant pool out on Newark Flats. Up yonder there, embodied in a cloud, and the sun kindles it. If God can make such a lustrous cloud of water-drops, many of them soiled and impure, and fetched from miles away, can He not transport the fragments of a human body from the earth and out of them build a radiant body? Cannot God, who owns all the material out of which bones, and muscle and flesh are made, set them up again if they have fallen? If a manufacturer of telescopes drop a telescope on the floor and it breaks, can he not mend it again so you can see through it? And if God drops the human eye into the dust, the eye which he originally fashioned, can he not restore it? Aye, if the manufacturer of the telescope, by a change of the glass and a change of focus, can make a better glass than that which was originally constructed, and actually improve it, do you not thing that the fashioner of the human eye may improve its sight and multiply the natural eye by the thousandfold additional forces of the resurrection eye.

"'Why should it be thought with you an incredible thing that God should raise the dead?" Things all around us suggest it. Out of what grew all these flowers? Out of the mould and earth. Resurrected, Resurrected. The radiant butterfly, where did it come from? The loathsome caterpillar. That albatross that smites the tempest with its wing, where did it come from? A senseless shell. Near Bergerac, France, in a Celtic tomb, under a block, were found flower seeds that had been buried two thousand years. The explorer took the flower seed and planted it, and it came up, it bloomed in bluebell and helitrope. Two thousand years buried, yet resurrected. A traveller in Egypt says he found in a mummy pit in an Egyptian garden peas that had been buried there three thousand years ago. He brought them out, and on June 4, 1844, he planted them, and in thirty days they sprang up. Buried three thousand years, yet resurrected.

"'Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead? Where did all this silk come from? The silk that adorns our persons and your homes? In the hollow of a staff a Greek missionary brought from China to Europe the progenitors of those worms that now supply the silk markets of many nations The pageantry of bannered host and the luxurious articles of commercial emporium blazing out from the silkworms! And who shall be surprised if out of this insignificant earthly life our bodies unfold into something worthy of the coming eternities. Put silver into diluted nitre and it dissolves. Is the silver gone forever? No. Put in some pieces of copper and the silver reappears. If one force dissolves, another force reorganizes.

"'Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" The insects flew and the worms crawled last autumn feebler and feebler, and then stopped. They have taken no food, they want none. They lie dormant and insensible, but soon the south wind will blow the resurrection trumpet, and the air and the earth will be full of them. Do you not think that God can do as he does for the wasps, and the spiders and the snails? This morning at half-past four o'clock there was a resurrection. Out of the night, the day. In a few weeks there will be a resurrection in all our gardens. Why not some day a resurrection amid all the graves? Ever and anon there are instances of men and women entranced. A trance is death, followed by resurrection after a few days. Total suspension of mental power and voluntary action. Rev. William Tennent—a great evangelist of the last generation, of whom Dr. Archibald Alexander, a man far from being sentimental, wrote in most eulogistic terms—Rev. William Tennent seemed to die. His spirit seemed to have departed. People came in day after day and said:—"He is dead; he is dead." But the soil returned, and William Tennent lived to write out experiences of what he had seen while his soul was gone.

It may be found some time that what is called suspended animation or comatose state, is brief death, giving the soul an excursion into the next world, from which it comes back—a furlough of a few hours granted from the conflict of life to which it must return.

Do not this waking up of men from trance and this waking up of grains buried three thousand years ago, make it easier for you to believe that your body and mine, after the vacation of the grave, shall rouse and rally, though there may be three thousand years between our last breaths and the sounding of the archangelic reveille? Physiologists tell us that while the most of our bodies are built with such wonderful economy that we can spare nothing, and the loss of a finger is a hindrance, and the injury of a toe-joint makes us lame, still we have two or three apparently useless physical apparati, and no anatomist or physiologist has ever been able to tell what they are good for. Perhaps they are the foundation of the resurrection body, worth nothing to us in this state, to be indispensably valuable in the next state. The Jewish Rabbi appear to have had a hint of this suggestion when they said that in the human frame there was a small bone which was to be the basis of the resurrection body. That may have been a delusion. But this thing is certain, the Christian scientists of our day have found out that there are two or three superfluities of the body that are something gloriously suggestive of another state.

I called at my friend's house one summer day. I found the yard all piled up with rubbish of carpenter's and mason's work. The door was off. The plumbers had torn up the floor. The roof was being lifted in cupola. All the pictures were gone and the paper hangers were doing their work. All the modern improvements were being introduced into that dwelling. There was not a room in the house fit to live in at that time, although a month before when I visited that house everything was so beautiful I could not have suggested an improvement. My friend had gone with his family to the Holy Land, expecting to come back at the end of six months, when the building was to be done. And oh, what was his joy when at the end of six months he returned and the old house was enlarged and improved and glorified. That is your body. It looks well now. All the rooms filled with health, and we could hardly make a suggestion. But after awhile your soul will go to the Holy Land, and while you are gone the old house of your tabernacle will be entirely reconstructed from cellar to attic; every nerve, muscle, and bone and tissue and artery must be hauled over, and the old structure will be burnished and adorned and raised and cupolaed and enlarged, and all the improvements of heaven introduced, and you will move into it on resurrection day. "For we know that if our earthly house of this tabernacle were dissolved, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." Oh, what a day when body and soul meet again! They are very fond of each other. Did your body ever have a pain and your soul not re-echo it? Or, changing the question, did your soul ever have a trouble and your body not sympathize with it, growing wan and weak under the depressing influence? Or did your soul ever have a gladness, but your body celebrated it with kindled eye and cheek and elastic step? Surely, God never intended two such good friends to be very long separated. And so, when the world's last Easter morning shall come, the soul will descend, crying, "Where is my body?" and the body will ascend, saying, "Where is my soul?" and the Lord of the resurrection will bring them together and it will be a perfect soul in a perfect body, introduced by a perfect Christ into a perfect heaven. Victory!

THE NEGRO IN EUROPE.

His Color Sometimes Secures for Him Precedence Over the White Trash.

When I was first at Vienna, some years ago, I remember that the favorite and constant playmate of the young Archduchess Valerie, daughter of the Emperor, was a young negro named Mahmored, who had been employed in the Egyptian department of the International Exposition of 1873, where he had taken the fancy of the Empress to such a degree that she attached him to her household. Notwithstanding his color and the inferiority of his rank, he was treated with a greater condescension and familiarity and admitted to much more intimacy, not only by the imperial children, but also by the Empress, than if he had borne one of the most illustrious names in the Austro-Hungarian nobility.

At Lisbon I have been present when the King solemnly and in the presence of his whole court invested three full-blooded negroes from the coast of Africa with the dignity of knighthood of the Order of Christ, and one of the principal personages of the kingdom was an aged negress who had been with the Queen ever since her marriage, and who was chief of Her Majesty's attendants and maids.

The man of color enjoys a favor and consideration in the Old World that those who have never visited Europe will find it difficult to comprehend. He is much made of, petted, and admired, especially by the fair sex. Before we had been long in London I found that my negro attendant, who was acting for me as valet and courier, was making money at a rapid rate and in a somewhat peculiar manner. Some of my readers may be aware that the soldiers of the London garrison supplement their scanty pay by taking servant girls out for a walk in Hyde Park on Sunday afternoon. On that day the girls deck themselves out in all their finery, and aping their employers, promenade in Hyde Park, usually up and down the banks of the serpentine. Man does not like to be alone, and still less does woman. Hence the girls feel the necessity of a suitable escort, not so much for the sake of conversation as the look of the thing. The consequence is, that they secure the services of a soldier, who promenades them in the park for a couple of hours for a stipulated sum, after which they escort them home and leave them at the back door of the house where they are employed. There is a regular tariff—an infantry man having to content himself with a shilling, whereas the far more stately and imposing Life and Horse Guard receive as much as a half a crown.

While my black servant, Mike, was in London he seriously interfered with this source of revenue of the British army. It seemed as if all the cooks and servant girls in South Kensington, were bent on having him walk with them on Sunday, conscious of the fact that his color would attract more attention to themselves than an ordinary trooper, or even a sergeant of the Horse Guards. So active was the competition that I have known Mike to be paid as much as six or seven shillings for promenading with stout and mature-looking cooks for a couple of hours, along the Vanity Fair of Hyde Park, on a Sunday afternoon.

In Paris the attention of the fair sex to my colored gentleman became a a source of considerable embarrassment to me, and I had great trouble to prevent them from completely turning the boy's head. They served, however, to convince him that he was immeasurably superior to all other men servants of the white race. His conceit became amazing, and I remember that especially when, on the day after the death of the late King of Hanover in Paris, I went to his Majesty's house in the Rue de Presburg to write my name on the visitors' book. I was astonished to see Mike in the act of coming out. I had not time to speak to him at the moment, but a minute or two later, when inscribing my name, I was horrified to see, in a large and scrawling hand, that of Mike at the top of the page and figuring just between that of Lord Lyons, the British Ambassador, and that of Duc d'Aumale.

On reaching home I immediately inquired what on earth he meant by such a piece of presumption, whereupon he was good enough to inform me that he had overheard me saying that it was the correct thing to do, and that inasmuch as the Crown Prince of Hanover—now known as the Duke of Cumberland—had "tipped" him on several occasions quite liberally, Mike considered it only proper to take this means of conveying to him his expression of sympathy for the loss he had sustained.—Modern Society.

Progressive Euchre on a Big Scale.

A progressive euchre party on a large scale is one of the latest fashionable means of raising money for charitable purposes. Such a party, for which 300 tickets were sold, at which there were seated 250 players, was given at a private house one recent afternoon. The tables were arranged in three rooms, a ballroom, music room and dining-room, in three rows, the leaders moving up one side, down the center and back on the opposite side. Each player was given a tally card to avoid confusion in finding her place. The rules announced before the playing commenced were these: Five points to be played at head tables, and, when finished, signal to be given and playing to be stopped immediately at all the tables; in case of a tie, must cut, and ace high will progress; no lone hand to be played at any table; cut at each table for deal, ace high; high will deal at opening of games; the two players that progress will cut for deal, ace high, high deals. Several intermissions were had during the playing, when good music was rendered and light refreshments served. Eight or nine prizes were given to add to the zest of the contest to those who scored the greatest number of games.—New York Evening Post.

THE ALL-IMPORTANT QUESTION.

"HOW SHALL I REGAIN LOST STRENGTH ?"

Thousands of Rejuvenated and Happy Men and Women Emphatically Say:

Use Paine's Celery Compound, the Best of all Spring Medicines

THE ONLY MEDICINE IN THE WORLD THAT HONESTLY CURES SICK AND DISEASED PEOPLE.

The all-important question at this season of the year with the sick and ailing, is "how to throw off disease and get rid of suffering." Past experiences and happy results have amply demonstrated the fact that Paine's Celery Compound always cures; it even rescues victims of disease after other medicines have failed, and when doctors have given up all hope.

The following testimony from Mrs. C. Lumley, a lady well known in Cobourg Ont., leaves no doubt as to the marvellous efficacy of the wonderful medicine about which the whole civilized world is now talking:—

"I have much pleasure in recommending Paine's Celery Compound for nervousness and weakness, with which I was afflicted for a number of years, and for which my doctor could give no relief. I became very weak and had a stroke of paralysis. I was confined to my bed; and my doctor requested me to try a course of your medicine as the last thing that could be done. I did as recommended, and before I had finished the first bottle I experienced a change. I am glad to say that I am cured through the use of Paine's Celery Compound. I have recommended it to others and they have been benefited by it; I would urge all who need a medicine to give it a trial, as it has worked miracles for me."

TRUE LOVE IN GREENLAND.

How Marriage and Courtship Are Brought About in the Far North.

Since the Danish ministers have gained the confidence of the natives of Greenland, marriages in the far North are celebrated by the representatives of the church. In a recent issue of one of the Danish papers one of the missionaries gives the following account of the way courtship and marriage are brought about:

The man who calls on the missionary and says, "I wish to take unto myself a wife."

"Whom?" asks the missionary.

The man gives her name.

"Have you spoken with her?"

As a rule the answer is in the negative, and the missionary asks the reason.

"Because," comes the reply, "it is so difficult. You must speak to her."

The missionary then calls the young woman to him and says: "I think it is time that you marry."

"But," she replies, "I do not wish to marry."

"That is a pity," adds the missionary, "as I have a husband for you."

"Who is he?" asks the maiden.

The missionary names the candidate for her lover.

"But he is not worth anything. I will not have him."

"However," suggests the missionary, "he is a good fellow and attends well to his house. He throws a good harpoon, and he loves you."

The Greenland beauty listens attentively, but again declares that she will not accept the man as her husband.

"Very well," goes on the missionary, "I do not wish to force you. I shall easily find another wife for so good a fellow."

The missionary then remains silent as though he looked upon the incident as closed. But in a few minutes she whispers, "But if you wish it——"

"No," answers the pastor, "only if you wish it. I do not wish to overpersuade you."

"Pastor," she then breaks out, "I fear he is not worthy."

"But did he not kill two whales last summer while the others killed none? Will you not take him now?"

"Yes, yes; I will."

"God bless you both," answers the pastor, and joins the two in marriage.—N. Y. Tribune.

WORK OF A MIGHTY BLAST.

Nearly 200,000 Tons of Rock Loosened by a Single Explosion.

For many years a huge mass of rock technically known as a "dike," a legacy from previous workers, has frowned over one of the Great Dinerwic quarries, the property of Mr. Assehton Smith, and has been a growing menace to safety of the men employed in the galleries below, which, in a series of terraces, rise almost from the edge of the lake far up the steep breast of the mountain. The Hon. W. W. Vivian, who manages the quarries for Mr. Assehton Smith, decided to remove the dike, and during the last three months preparations for its declaration have been in active progress.

From three longitudinal tunnels in the solid rock ten chambers, each 11 feet by 4 feet, were made and charged with gelatine dynamite. Each bag of this explosive was placed in position by Mr. Vivian himself. Everything having been satisfactorily arranged. Mrs. Assehton Smith was requested to fire the twenty minutes' time fuse leading to the mass of some two and a half tons of gelatine dynamite safely packed in the entrails of the rock, a request to which she readily acceded. The hour was fixed for 1 o'clock on Saturday, and shortly before the time thousands of people from Llanberis and adjacent villages—Bangor, Carnarvon and other towns—took up advantageous positions in the neighborhood.

Punctually at the appointed time Mrs. Assehton Smith fired the time fuse, and at 1.02 o'clock the earth for a mile round was shaken as if by an earthquake. At the next instant the face of the tremendous dike, which towered gloomily upward, and on either side of which the rain-covered rock glistened in a passing burst of sunshine, began to quiver ominously, and the loose earth in its crevices clattered down its smooth face like an avalanche. Next, from different parts of the rock came sputtering bursts of smoke and then enormous blocks detached themselves from the mountainous mass of rock, toppled slowly forward, and finally crushed into the abyss below with deafening uproar, which, mingling with the thunders of the exploding dynamite, now freed from its rocky prison, reverberated grandly among the mountains and towered ruggedly into the cloud-darkened sky. Again and again was the downfall of the huge masses of rock repeated till 180,000 tons lay like "tumbled fragments of the hills" far below. A dense white smoke, the deadly afterdamp, clung for a while around the scene of the explosion, and, when cleared away, in the place of the dike there was a great gap, in which glistened here and there pinnacles of splintered rocks.—London Telegraph.

About Opals.

The prejudice against opals appears to be disappearing. Anyhow, they are popular. There are several varieties of opal, and therefore several degrees of merit. The precious, or noble, or oriental opal, is the supreme. This has all the colors, and when these colors are broken into spangles, it is then called the harlequin opal. Then comes the fire opal, or girasol, with hyacinth red and yellow reflection—the former comes from Hungary, the latter from Mexico. The common, or semi opals, are non-opalescent. The hydrophane, or oculus mundi, is non-transparent, but becomes so by immersion in water or any transparent fluid. The cacha-long is nearly opaque and of a bluish white color. The hyalite is colorless, pellucid and white. The opal jasper, or wood opal, is the petrifaction of wood, opalescent, but without the coloring which makes the "noble" gem so precious.—Buffalo Express.

"Go Lickee Wife."

British husbands, when their dinner parties turn out failures, are apt to grumble at their wives for the cook's misdeameanors, but they abstain from the practical style of rebuking practiced by the celestials. Recently the Chinese professor at a university gave a national banquet to fellow professors and was much put out bacause the cookery was not to his taste. After a time he got up, bowed solemnly, said, "Go lickee wife," and departed, returning presently, smiling as blandly as usual, after having administered judicious chatisement to his better half.

While our farmers are witnessing the low price of wheat they are neglecting crops that are grown in other countries and sold to us, such as barley, onions, and even potatoes. Barley is a crop that should thrive on any soil that will produce oats. Farmers in the West are turning their attention to it, and those who raised barley last year found it profitable.

Well-drained lands can be worked early in spring, and the soil will be warmer than if no drainage is done. Soils that are slow in absorbing moisture, or which bake so hard as to crack, will be benefitted by drainage and lime.

Broad tires are an advantage in those sections where te roads are bad, and they also help to pack down the roads that have been newly made. There have been great improvements made in waggon tires, as they are now adjustable, and can be used or removed, so as to substitute the wide for the narrow when desirable to do so.

SALISBURY ON CHAMBERLAIN

The Unionist Leader Patted on the Back.

BALFOUR ADDS HIS MEDE OF PRAISE

British Tory Leaders Afraid of the Unionists Seceding From the Alliance Speak in High Terms of Their Work and Paint Rosy Pictures of Office.

London, April 27.—Lord Salisbury has addressed a letter to E. H. Hulse, M.P., in which the ex-Premier declares that a vast mass of the Conservative voters, and certainly the leaders of the party, are desirous that the alliance between the Conservatives and Liberal-Unionist parties shall be confirmed and strengthened.

Lord Salisbury adds: "I meet some who seem to think the Conservatives have ceased to be sensible of the services rendered by the Liberal-Unionists, especially Mr. Chamberlain. We always have recognized most cordially the loyalty with which Mr. Chamberlain has devoted his great authority and splendid powers to the defence of the union.'

The letter is intended primarily to be an answer to the reports of friction in the Conservative-Liberal-Unionist alliance, These reports may be summarized in the statement that the Young Tories are said to dislike the alliance and to object especially to Joseph Chamberlain's growing power in the Unionist coalition. At the Carlton Club the general opinion is that Mr. Balfour should either throw off Mr. Chamberlain's domination or resign the leadership.

Mr. Balfour, the Conservative leader in the House of Commons, used language similar to that of Lord Salisbury in his speech at the annual assembly of the Primrose League, adding that the cordiality of the friendship existing between himself and Mr. Chamberlain was unimpaired. In the course of his speech, which is looked on as an important utterance, Mr. Balfour said that some of the members of the Conservative party, foreseeing victory in the next Parliament, seemed to suggest the kicking down of the ladder upon which they had climbed. Such a suggestion was unutterably mean. It was Mr. Chamberlain and his Liberal-Unionist colleagues, who for the past nine years had made a Home Rule policy impossible.

Continuing, Mr. Balfour said: "The present position of the Unionist parties is one of transition. What will follow permanent division or permanent union? I answer unhesitatingly, permanent union. Those persons who from a detached standpoint have watched the politics of England through the last decade must have noticed that old-fashioned Radicalism is now absolutely played out. The power of Gladstonianism is a power of tradition and history. That power is passed, and if it is to retain its vitality it must be done by the aid of revolutionary forces. Meanwhile the Unionist alliance aims at the greatness of the Empire alone, the right to subscribe itself the Imperial party, to promote social reform, to maintain industrial liberty and to resist Socialistic schemes. I look forward with absolute confidence to a time when the Liberal-Conservatives and Unionists will be united in one Government."

They invoked the example of Ontario in aiding the development of the iron industry, and asked that the Quebec Government follow a similar policy by giving a bonus of $1 per ton on iron ore and grant reserves of hardwood for charcoal burning.

A Woman Beheaded.

A woman was beheaded in Berlin Monday—the first woman to suffer the death penalty there since Berlin was made a kaiserstadt. At 8 o'clock in the morning two warders led her into the courtyard, where the headsman's block had been placed. Half dead with fear the woman was placed beside the block and there supported while the prosecutor read to her the sentence of death. The prisoner was told to kneel, but she apparently did not hear, and the warders gently but firmly forced her down until her head rested on the block. The next instant there was a gleaming flash of steel, and the head of the woman dropped into the basket placed to receive it, the executioner exclaiming: "The sentence of the law has been executed. May God have mercy on the poor sinner."

WHERE CZARS ARE CROWNED.

The Kremlin, Russias's Sacred Palace and the Head of the Empire.

The very heart of Moscow and, indeed, of all Russia, is the world renowned Kremlin, the nation's sacred palace. Many years ago the czar resided within its wooden walls, closely surrounded by his relatives and nobles. The wooden fortifications proved inadequate to resist the furious onslaughts of the savage Tartars and 500 years ago they were replaced by stone ones, and now, too, the imperial family have abandoned Moscow and spend most of their time in St. Petersburg.

But this is still the holy city and to the Kremlin churches must all the czars come to be crowned, writes a correspondent of The Sunday School Times. The grand coronation procession must first enter the Church of the Redeemer to offer prayers, then go to St. Michael's, and finally in the Cathedral of the Assumption, the most sacred edifice in all Russia, the czar places the crown upon his own head, for no one else is held worthy to preform such a duty.

This palatial citadel, the Kremlin, when seen from a distance is a most brilliant and dazzling sight; walls, roofs, spires and cupolas shine with masses of red, green, white, gold and silver untarnished by time, for all the colors are renewed as fast as they fade. Just outside the walls is a fine group of bronze statuary representing a peasant appealing to a Russian general to save the sacred Kremlin from the French; it is strikingly suggestive, as a man points eagerly upward to the Kremlin's towers, only a short distance away. The most holy of the five entrances to the fort is that known as the "Redeemer Gate." Over this is a picture of Christ, so sacred that no one can pass beneath it with covered head; even the Czar himself conforms to this custom. The image is said to have preserved Moscow from invasion several times, and it is believed that no enemy can enter through that gate." It is a deep gateway, owing to the thickness of its tower, and is frescoed on the inside, and has a high spire on the exterior. Over another of the Kremlin gates is a picture of St. Nicholas, called "miraculous" because it is said as the French were abandoning Moscow they sought to blow it up. The explosion of the powder caused a slight crack in the tower, which suddenly stopped as it reached the frame of this picture and left the image covered with glass and the lamp burning before it all unharmed. Close beside the sacred gate is the Convent of the Ascension, with blue-tinted walls and dome of silver. Here the princesses and daughters of the noblemen resort when they wish to escape the frivolities of the world, and in the crypt are the tombs of many Russian empresses who died before the time of Peter the Great. Since then they have been buried with their husbands in St. Petersburg.

ELECTRIC FEET WARMERS.

A Surprise to American Travellers on Railroads in England.

A feature which strikes the American traveller in England as peculiar is the foot warmer in the railway cars. On the ordinary car there is no provision for heating even in the depth of winter, and the passengers shiver in helpless wretchedness. As arrangements are being made for lighting the cars on some of the English lines by electricity, it is proposed to adopt the same means for heating the individual foot warmers with which anyone can be supplied on request. The electric feet warmer is fashioned out of asbestos cloth, of which there are three layers. The middle layer is first stitched backward and forward with fine wire. The three layers are then stitched together, and the whole is inclosed in a fancy cover. A simple device enables connection to be made readily with the source of electric supply, and the passenger can modify the heat at pleasure. This looks to Americans like beginning at the wrong end. The more practical way would seem to be to warm the car through, and save the necessity of a foot warmer for each passenger. This idea will probably be carried out before long on many of the principal English lines, and the electric foot warmer does not seem destined for railroad purposes at all events to be long in vogue.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Red Hair and Health.

A superabundance of iron in the blood is the theory put forward to account for red hair. "To the same cause is ascribed the vigor, the elasticity, the great vitality, the overflowing healthy animal life which runs riot through the veins of the ruddy-haired; and this strong sentient animal life is what renders them more intense in their emotions than their more languid fellow-creatures." Whether the writer is a Scotsman does not appear; but we are at liberty to assume that he is among the "carroty," for the pains he is at to excuse on the same assumption the "freckles on the peculiarly clear white skin which always accompany red hair."
—Pall Mall Gazette.

Yellow as a guinea.—The complexion in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick head ache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURES which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas, salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels there after to become regular. High professional sanction has been accorded to it; and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-smile of their signiture. Sold by all medicine dealers.

A HAPPY CHOICE.

AFTER 25 YEARS

A Wise Mother Chooses the Right Medicine, and her Son Tells of its Wonderful Effects.

GENTLEMEN,—In the spring of 1891 I got a bottle of B. B. B. for my mother, who had been troubled with Sick Headache. I got it from Mr. H. Paxton Baird, of Woodstock, N. B., who gave me two other medicines to take home and let my mother take her choice. Fortunately she chose the B. B. B., and I returned the other bottles. She used it for three months and has had no headache since. We are sure it was B. B. B. cured her as she took no other medicine.

- WALL PAPER -

THE DESIGNS of our spring wall papers are beautiful and the colorings exquisite. The effects they produce upon the wall have been studied with intelligent sympathy, and the "long-felt-wants" of a few years ago have been provided for with cultivated taste. A judicious employment of any of our papers leaves little to be done in a room—a few ornaments according to the taste or wealth of the occupant are all that is necessary to contribute to its beauty and comfort. Our papers thoroughly represent the standard of the prevailing taste in interior decorations.

This will keep the air in your house pure and healthy, thus saving sickness and doctor's bills ; but raising the bottom sash causes direct draught which is a well known fact to be very injurious to health more particularly in sleeping rooms. SUPERANNUATION ABUSES.

Active Officeholders Retired for Newer Favorites.

IT COSTS CANADA $28,000 A YEAR

Mr. McMullen's Exposure of the Abuses of the System—550 Men Well Able to Work Forced to Retire—Some Flagrant Cases

Ottawa, April 29.—The debate on the address is now a matter of official record, written on the pages of Hansard, and other events will emerge to engross the public mind, but it will be remembered as a preliminary trial of strength, in which the advantage of the argument and the ability with which it was presented were conspicuously upon the Liberal side of the House. The situation which has been created by the weaknesses, the mistakes and wrongdoings of the Government, while disastrous to the interests of the country, have given the Opposition an opportunity, which it has not been slow to improve. The division of the Cabinet upon vital matters of policy was disclosed by the utterances of some ministers in the recent bye-elections, by the silence of others when their duty was to declare themselves, by the foolish conduct of the young Minister of Justice, who wobbled and then repented, and by the manner in which Parliament was called, afforded a prolific theme to Liberal speakers, aside from the great questions of political controversy which are now agitating the public mind. Governments apologists labored to convince the House and the country that the present commercial and financial stagnation is not to be laid to the account of the restrictive fiscal system which they have announced their determination to maintain, but the array of hard facts which the opponents of this view, headed by the distinguished leader of the Liberal party were able to summon from official sources, were the most eloquent arguments that could be advanced to controvert that position. Most effective was the comparison which was made between the promises and performance of the National Policy, the Tupperian fairy tales of seventeen years ago, with the $5,000,000 deficit of today, the roseate visions of prosperity and plenty, with the depression and want of the present. What the Government will do in the face of the "ugly and ill-visaged" deficit that confronts it is a question upon which politicians are speculating. Little reliance is placed in the promises of economy contained in the Speech from the Throne, "in order to produce equilibrium between revenue and expenditure," for everyone remembers that last year, after Mr. Foster had undertaken to see that that economy would then rule, the Government committed the country to such enormous expenditures as the $750,000 steamship subvention and to $2,960,580 of new railway subsidies, and not to mention the loan of $2,500,000 to the Hudson Bay Railway Company.

Mr. McMullen on Friday laid the a ground work for a renewed attack upon the superannuation system, which he has for years been fighting, against the odds of a servile Government majority. Mr. McMullen does not propose to interfere with those civil servants who have paid money into the fund, but he holds that it is unfair to the laboring men and to the farmers of this country they should continue t obe taxed $280,000 a year to keep 50 men in luxurious idleness, many of them able to work, many living a life of ease in foreign lands.

Sept. 8, '71, the superannuation system was created with the idea that, after an official had become worn out in the public service he should be retired upon an allowance, and his place filled by an efficient substitute. A fund was created, to supply which two per cent. of the salaries of civil servants was retained. In 1871 the receipts of this fund amounted to $50,000, and the expenditure to only $13,000. In 1893 the receipts were $64,433, and the expenditure $263,710. In 1894 there was paid into the fund $63,974, while there was spent out of it no less a sum than $262,302. In the 23 years since the inauguration of the system the country has spent $2,500,000 over and above the receipts. The Superannuation Act prohibits the pensioning of officials under the age of 60, unless for very special reasons, yet over 170 of the 550 men on the superannuation list are under that age and over 70 are under 50 years. The system honestly and properly administered would be bad enough, but when the Government abuses it to provide places for hungry followers, every disinterested man in the country will agree that it is time to improve it out of existence. There is abundant evidence to sustain the position which the Liberal party has taken upon this question, and a few examples may be given to show to what use the system has been put. Mr. Dansereau, a leading Montreal Conservative, desired the postmastership of that city, and Mr. Lamothe, the postmaster, was superannuated. He was, under the act, entitled to a retiring allowance of $1360, but the Government added eight years to his time, and Mr. Lamothe is drawing $2000 a year, while Mr. Dansereau is receiving, as postmaster, $4000, which makes the cost of the office $6000 a year. Mr. Shakespeare, when a member of Parliament, demanded as his political reward the postmastership of Victoria, B.C. The office was then held by Mr. Robert Wallace, who was quite capable of performing his duties, and who resisted the attempt to displace him. To pacify Mr. Wallace eight years was added to his term of office by act of Parliament, and he is now living in England drawing a pension of $1300 a year, and Mr. Shakespeare is paid for doing his work $2000 a year.

Mr. Charles Thibeault was paid $2000 a year for nine years as secretary of the Dominion Board of Arbitrators, which was a sinecure, and at the age of 49 was allowed to retire in receipt of a pension of $760 a year.

One of the most outrageous abuses of the system which can be cited is the case of Mr. Vankoughnet. This gentleman was Superintendent-General of Indian Affairs, but in 1893 the Government found it necessary to make a place for Mr. Hayter Reid, whose connection with the looting of furs that got Gen. Middleton into trouble, was anything but creditable. Mr. Vankoughnet, who was 57 years of age and in good health, protested against the attempt to force him into retirement, but Hon. Mr Daly, the Minister of the Interior, made the threat that if he did not apply for superannuation it would be all the worse for him. Mr. Vankoughnet is now living in England, drawing a pension of $2112 a year, while Mr. Reed is in receipt of an annual salary of $3200. Mr. Trudeau was forced to retire from the position of Deputy Minister of Railways and Canals against his will on an allowance of $3756 a year. Mr John Tillon, who was Deputy Minister of Fisheries was superannuated at the age of 55, and he can be seen any day on the streets of Ottawa, a strong, healthy, vigorous man. Yet Mr. Tillon receives from the fund reserved for aged, feeble and sick persons $1536 a year. In the face of these illustrations, among scores of others of the operation of the superannuation system, it will scarcely be argued by anybody outside of a Cabinet minister or a person who hopes to benefit from this gigantic imposition that Mr. McMullen is not justified in his crusade against the system.

MURDER WILL OUT.

A Philadelphian Arrested For a 16 Year Old Crime—Pleads Guilty

Philadelphia, April 29.—Alfonso F. Cutaier, jr., a grocer at 4923 Lancaster-avenue, has been arrested for the murder of his aunt, Johanna Logue, 16 years ago. The woman was the wife of James Logue, one of the most notorious burglars in the United States. About two years ago the skeleton of a woman was discovered beneath the floor of the kitchen of the house at 1250 North 11th-street. By a hand satchel and a knowledge that Logue once lived in the house, the skeleton was identified as that of his wife Johanna. Suspicion was immediately directed towards Logue, but the most untiring efforts of the police failed to discover his whereabouts. About two months ago Logue walked into Coroner Ashbridge's house one evening stating he had heard that he was accused of the murder of his wife and he had come to answer the charge. The old burglar protested his innocence of the murder of his wife and told the coroner a story that has helped to unravel the mystery. When arrested Cutaier at first protested his innocence, but finally, under close questioning, acknowledged having caused the death of his aunt.

Murdered by Tramps on a Train.

Mansfield, Ohio, April 29.—Fred Boebel, a contractor of this city, was killed, robbed and thrown from a Pennsylvania freight train between Crest Line and Mansfield some time last night. His body was found this morning. He is supposed to have missed the train at Crest Line and boarded a freight train in which were tramps, who shot him four times, assaulted him with a piece of railroad iron and after robbing him threw the body from the train. Boebel was robbed of a silver watch and chain and quite a sum of money.

Murder and Suicide by a Wife.

Paris, April 29.—The French bicyclist, Medinger, was shot and killed by his wife in this city Saturday. After committing the deed the woman turned the revolver upon herself, and fired with fatal effect. It is believed that jealousy was the cause of the act.

NEWFOUNDLAND FISH BOUNTY.

How It Is Proposed to Meet the French Shore Difficulty

St. John's, Nfld., April 29.—A semi-official statement shows that the Newfoundland delegates to Canada, regarding confederation, demanded only the bounty on fish exported to markets where the French bounty-fed output ruins our trade. If this be conceded it will kill the French fishery on the banks and force the French to abandon their settlements on our coasts altogether, and give Canada undisputed control of the North American fisheries. A revulsion of feeling has set in in consequence of this. The delegates are praised for their patriotic endeavors to obtain the best bargain possible. The country hopes the Imperial Government will guarantee a portion of the bounty.

197 MILES IN 185 MINUTES.

This Is the Best the Delaware, Lackawanna Road Can Do.

Binghamton, April 29.—The record for the fastest long distance run on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western was broken Saturday by a special train from New York to Buffalo. The train, which consisted of three cars, left Hoboken at about 8 a.m. The run to Elmira, 57 miles, was made in 58 minutes. The first stop was at Bath, where four minutes was spent. From Bath to East Buffalo, 103 3-4 miles, the time was 103 minutes. A stop of four minutes, however, was made at Mount Morris, so that the actual running time for the distance was 99 minutes. The train was reported at East Buffalo at 3.59 p.m. Deducting eight minutes for the two stops the traveling time for the 197 miles was just 185 minutes.

Thrown From a Wagon and Killed

Bracebridge, Ont., April 29.—Last evening a boy named John Osborne, 16 years of age, was driving a team with a load of lumber, when the horses became unmanageable going down a hill and ran away. They ran against a telegraph pole and the boy was instantly killed, being crushed between the pole and the wagon.

Italian Precautions Against Anarchists

Rome, April 27.—Vigorous methods are being taken by the authorities throughout Italy to enforce the edict prohibiting May day celebrations. Three battalions have been added to the garrison in this city, and all the troops here and at Milan, Genoa and all garrison towns will be kept in barracks from April 30 until after the danger of a demonstration is passed. Many Anarchists and Socialists have been arrested and are temporarily confined.

The Willard Fountain Unveiled.

Chicago, April 27.—The Willard Fountain, which was presented to the city by the children of the World's W.C.T.U., was unveiled and dedicated Saturday. The fountain cost over $20,000, and over 300,000 children living in Europe and America contributed to the fund.

$600 Loss in Collingwood.

Collingwood, Ont., 29.—Fire broke out here Saturday in the residence of J. McNabb. Cause, defective flue. The house was burned to the ground. Loss $600; small insurance.

Uxbridge Farmer Loses $3000.

Uxbridge, Ont., April 29.—The barns and outbuildings of Robert Stretton were totally destroyed by fire, together with most of the farm implements, eight head of cattle and five hogs. Loss about $3000; insured for $800.

Collapse of a Big Brussels Building

Brussels, April 27.—While a large force of workingmen was busy on an immense building, in which a show, representing the City of Venice is to be given, the roof collapsed, and many of the men were buried under the wreck. Fifteen of the victims were seriously injured.

A superabundance of iron in the blood is the theory put forward to account for red hair. "To the same cause is ascribed the vigor, the elasticity, the great vitality, the overflowing healthy animal life which runs riot through the veins of the ruddy-haired ; and this strong sentient animal life is what renders them more intense in their emotions than their more languid fellow-creatures." Whether the writer is a Scotsman does not appear ; but we are at liberty to assume that he is among the "carroty," for the pains he is at to excuse on the same assumption the "freckles on the peculiarly clear white skin which always accompany red hair."

BRITAIN OCCUPIES CORINTO

Nicaragua Refused to Pay the Indemnity Demanded.

LOOKS AS IF TROUBLE MAY ARISE

No Opposition Made to the Landing of the Bluejackets—The Occupation May Last for Several Years Unless the Republic Comes to Time.

London, April 29.—A despatch from Managua on the 27th says : Shortly after 2 o'clock in the morning 22 boats, filled with marines and seamen, were lowered from the warships, and immediately after the vessels came around, bows on, and advanced in a line toward the Government pier. Each large launch carried a machine gun forward. There was a great crowd at the pier, but no hostile demonstration was made. The landing party marched without opposition to the Customs House and planted the British flag thereon.

A part of the marines occupy the principal square of the city. Rear Admiral Stephenson has declared martial law.

A large force of Nicaraguan troops arrived at Corinto on the evening of the 26th, with artillery, and encamped at the lower end of the town.

Order is maintained by the British marines, who patrol the streets. The populace is quiet. The landing party was commanded by Captain Frederick French of the Royal Arthur, who immediately issued a proclamation assuring the citizens that their rights would be respected and that they might pursue their vocations without fear of molestation. The proclamation also contained a warning that any acts of hostility would be opposed with the full force of the fleet.

A Colon despatch says that the Nicaraguan forces at Corinto withdrew, crossing the lagoon separating the town from the mainland, and are now strongly entrenched there. The British ships had taken a position from which they can open fire if the Nicaraguan forces should attempt to interfere with the occupation of the town. Corinto is almost deserted, a bombardment having been generally expected.

A mob, headed by a military band, paraded the streets of Managua and attempted to attack the British consulate, but were prevented by the Nicaraguan police, who finally succeeded in dispersing the rioters. The consulate was guarded last night by a Nicaraguan military force, and every precaution was taken to prevent any violent demonstration. The enthusiasm of the people is aroused. Their hatred of England cannot be eradicated. The Government is using all means in its power to restrain the populace from committing violence. Later advices received here from Nicaragua state that the excitement throughout Nicaragua increases.

Great disappointment is expressed at the failure of the United States to secure some modification of Great Britain's terms. While the conservative course pursued by the Washington Government was fully expected by President Zelaya and his Cabinet, in view of the information furnished to them by the Nicaraguan Minister at Washington, the people generally believed that the United States would interfere. The Nicaraguan Government is exerting itself to restrain the populace. No indication has yet been given of an immediate intention to pay the indemnity, although the continued occupation of Corinto must sooner or later prove very embarrassing to Nicaragua. Mr. Bayard's request for a brief respite in order that Nicaragua might pay the indemnity in London, it is stated here, was refused by Lord Kimberley. Had this respite been granted Nicaragua would have borrowed the money in New York to settle the British demand.

Practically a British Possession.

Washington, April 29.—The situation in Corinto remains unchanged. Dr. Guzman, the Nicaraguan Minister, this evening, in reply to a cable despatch asking for specific information as to the position of affairs from Manuel Mutus, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, an official despatch stating that the British were still in control of the city ; that the British flag was flying over the Custom House ; that the Nicaraguan flag had been withdrawn from all the public places ; that all the national authorities had deserted the town, and that Corinto at present was practically a British possession. The despatch contained no further particulars, which leads Dr. Guzman to believe that all is quiet in the republic.

The Heroes of Chitral.

London, April 29.—G. W. Smalley cables: The gallant defence and gallant relief of Chitral have interested Englishmen more than all else this week. There are two new heroes—Robertson, who held the fort, and Col. Kelly, who, after a wonderful march in the face of tremendous natural obstacles and of outnumbering foes, came in time to rescue his comrades. The heroes, in truth, number hundreds, for the soldiers in the fort and in the relieving column were heroes. Col. Kelly, I am told, is an officer who has waited 30 years for his chance. Dr. Robertson is a civilian and an able political agent, but with the stuff of a soldier in him also. For 45 days he stood siege, and for all time to come he has a place in Indian history, the course of which is likely to be much modified by these recent events.

WRECKED IN LAKE ERIE.

The Sakie Shepherd Goes Down Off Toledo—One Life Lost.

Toledo, Ohio, April 29.—The steam barge Sakie Shepherd sunk about five miles off Turtle Island in Lake Erie Saturday. She was loaded with salt, and bound for Toledo. A leak was sprung in the morning, and a heavy sea running, the captain and several of the crew put off for Vienna, Mich., for help. While they were away the sea washed away some of the upper works, and the vessel sank rapidly. Albert Hamlin, the engineer, and the cook, named Brown, were left on the boat. The tug Roy went out for the wrecked men. Hamlin was found on the roof of the cabin almost dead from fright and quite out of his head. He was brought to this city. When he was able to talk he said Brown had jumped overboard during the afternoon, after putting a life preserver around him. No trace of Brown was found.

Six Dead Seamen Washed Ashore

London, April 29.—Six dead seamen and a small boat marked "Steamer Marie," came ashore near Plymouth on Thursday. The owners of the steamer Marie, Captain Rochester, have identified one of the bodies as that of her engineer, and they suppose that their vessel foundered in the channel not far from Plymouth.

DEAN'S CURE.

sers Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To.

Mimico, Aug. 20, 1894

Wm. Dean, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

Walter Burgess.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles ! Piles ! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes: "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelee's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

Germany reports 289 instances of suicide among school children during the last six years.

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S. Bulleo, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about ten years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal."

For Over Fifty Years

Old and Well-tried Remedy.—Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup has been used for over fifty years by millions of mothers for their children while teething, with perfect success. It soothes the child, softens the gums, allays all pain, cures wind colic, and is the best remedy for diarrhoea. Is pleasant to the taste. Sold by druggists in every part of the World. Twenty-five cents a bottle. Its value is incalculable. Be sure and ask for Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup, and take no other kind.

She (bitterly)—Before you married me I was an angel. I'll never be that again I know. He (sarcastically)—Well, I live in hope.

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and the bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity. Then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough, heals the diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. If one wants to save the lives of their children and themselves from much trouble and expense, let them get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has a cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

The Pekin (China) Gazette, a journal that was 800 years old when the Normans invaded England, has had further distinction of having had 1,600 of its editors beheaded.

Beyond Dispute.

There is no better, safer or more pleasant remedy made than Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. It cures Hoarseness, Sore Throat, Colds, Bronchitis, and all throat troubles.

After La Grippe obstinate coughs, lung troubles frequently follow. There is no remedy so prompt, and at the same time so safe and pleasant, as Milburn's Cod Liver Oil Emulsion with Wild Cherry and Hypophosphites, which is the largest and best preparation of anti-consumptive remedies. Price 50c. an $1.00 per bottle.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Montreal Star: We will all grow tired some day of paying a contractor $100,000 to build a $50,000 work we do not want in order that a political party may get $10,000 for its campaign fund. A few more deficits and a few more storeys added to the debt, will hurry our education in the matter forward.

The probabilities are now that the next presidential campaign in the Republic will be fought on the question of the currency. Both mono metalists and silver men claim to be for "honest money." President Cleveland has come out uncompromisingly for the single gold standard but the Republican leaders seem still to be seeking light.

It is announced that Sir Hector Langevin will introduce the dishonored Thos. McGreevy to Mr. Speaker. It is usual for two members to officiate in this capacity and we "would suggest Sir Hector Langevin." But we do not see that Uncle Thomas needs any very extended introduction to the present Parliament; the tax-payers would have felt safer if he had been allowed to continue his intimate domestic footing with the Ottawa jailer instead of taking his old place among the Conservative forces at Ottawa.

The much-talked of Monroe Doctrine was not at its inception the dangerous looking thing it is now. At the close of the Napoleonic wars, Russia, Austria, France, Spain and Portugal joined in what they with pleasing humility termed the Holy Alliance, with the avowed intent of arranging the international affairs of the planet. Canning, who was then general manager for the "Shopkeeper" could not be induced to join the ring but on the contrary he pursuaded President Monroe who from 1817 to 1825 was the first magistrate of the Republic, to announce to the alliance that its projected program as far as the Ammericas were concerned would not be allowed. This is somewhat different from the present claims of the American press of a suzerainty over all New World territory south of its own southern boundry. Wheaton says on the subject: "It is to be borne in mind that the declarations known as the Monroe doctrine have never received the sanction of an act or resolution of congress, nor have they any of that authority which European governments attach to a royal ordinance. They are, in fact, only the declarations of an existing administration of what its own policy would be and what it thinks should ever be the policy of the country on the subject of paramount and permanent interest." And Woolsey says: "This Monroe doctrine embodied simply the policy of the moment. It pledged future administrations in the United States to no course of action. . . . To argue that the government is bound to a definite course of action under all circumstances is an error."

This makes somewhat of a rift in that omnius cloud of speadeagleism and makes the air of America somewhat more salubrious.

How to Cure all Skin Diseases

Simply apply "Swayne's Ointment. No internal medicine required. Cures tetter, eczema, itch, all eruptions on the face, hands, nose, &c., leaving the skin clear, white and healthy. Its great healing and curative powers are possessed by no other remedy. Ask your druggist for Swayne's Ointment.

Skepticism.—This is, unhappily, an age of skepticism, but there is one point upon which persons acquainted with the subject agree, namely, that Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, is a medicine that can be relied upon to cure a cough, remove pain, heal sores of various kinds, and benefit any inflamed portion of the body to which it is applied.

"After years of dyspeptic misery, I can at last eat a good square meal without its distressing me," gratefully exclaimed one whose appetite had been restored by the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. This remedy wonderfully sharpens the appetite and improves digestion.

New York, April 29.—The Sun's London cable says: The report of the Royal Commission on the use of opium, presented in Parliament this week, will much astonish many people, especially in America, but it must be accepted as the decisive verdict of truth and science upon this vexed subject. The enquiry was conducted on a very great scale, and the decision was practically unanimous. Over 720 witnesses were examined, including 152 called at the desire of the Anti-Opium Society. Every care was taken to obtain representative testimony, and the commission record their conviction that the evidence forms trustworthy grounds for the conclusions reached upon this, the crucial issue, whether the use of opium, as habitually practised in India, is or is not injurious. The commissioners relied to a great degree on the statements of 161 medical witnesses. The medical witnesses who advocated prohibition were few, and all of them were more opposed to the use of alcohol than to that of opium. The general effect of the medical testimony is declared in the report to be that "The temperate use of opium in India should be viewed in the same light as the temperate use of alcohol in England." Opium is harmful, harmless, or even beneficial, according to the measure and discretion with which it is used." The natives of India, on the whole, agree with the doctors, but they attach greater value to the drug than science directly warrants. Opium is largely taken as a stimulant by those past middle age. They use it, in the striking phrase of one of the witnesses, as a prop to a falling house. In the opinion of the great majority of native medical practitioners and representatives of a large influential class this employment of the drug is attended by beneficial results. Opium eaters of 15 to 20 years' standing appeared before the commission. They believed the habit had done them good. Their appearance and vigor satisfied the commissioners, at all events, that it had done them no perceptible harm.

Opium is also used as an occasional stimulant in physical emergencies. It has been issued by medical advice to troops engaged in fighting and roadmaking among the mountains of Sikkim. It is occasionally taken by camel drivers who work in the extremes of heat and cold that prevail in the Rajputana desert. Many consumers in the Punjab use the drug in the winter months only.

Another striking fact also in the opium habit is that it prevails among some of the most manly, hard-working, thrifty races of India. The splendid Sikh soldiers and peasants, the active Marwari traders and Rajputs are among the opium eaters. Opium is consumed in the native army, and, the witnesses say, does no perceptible harm, and is often beneficial. It is used among the natives in the public service, and in the service of railroad companies, planters and mill owners. The evidence of employers is all to the same effect. Dismissals for intemperance in the use of opium are practically unknown. Opium, Sir William Roberts observed, does not appear to beget any specific disease. Opium eaters bear surgical operations as well as nonconsumers, and the manager of a large insurance company said that after 20 years' experience his company charged no extra premium on the lives of moderate opium eaters.

THE RESERVOIR BURST.

French Villages Inundated—Numbers of People Drowned.

Epinal, France, April 27.—A reservoir near here burst on Saturday, inundating many villages and drowning numbers of persons.

The Bousey Reservoir had a capacity of 7,000,000 cubic meters. The torrent carried off some of the houses in the villages of Darnieulles, Eguey and Domevres, and swamped many others, besides demolishing walls, bridges, roads, crops and farm buildings. The disaster occurred at 5 o'clock in the morning. The rush of water through the villages was so sudden that there was hardly any chance to escape, and many persons were drowned in their beds.

Every house at Bouzey was demolished, and very few remain at Les Forges, where there are 1400 inhabitants. At Uxeguey 23 persons were drowned. Every building was destroyed in Darniulles, where the population numbers 600. Notwithstanding the fact that Nomexy is ten miles from the dam, many of the inhabitants of the place had not time to reach the upper portions of their dwellings before the torrent was upon them. The damage caused by the flood is estimated at $10,000,000.

Later advices state that the loss of life is far beyond the first estimates. About 130 deaths are now known to have been caused by the flood, and the list may grow, as in the confusion and ruin it has been impossible to account for scores of persons who are missing. More than 200 families are homeless. A large part of the valley is little more than a morass, with timbers and uprooted trees protruding from them. The soldiers who are looking for bodies make only slow progress, as the work of digging in the debris is necessarily slow. Part of the Bouzy tavern was found today on the bank of the Moselle, 11 miles distant.

A VOTE OF CONFIDENCE.

Will Be Moved in the House of Commons To-day.

London, April 29.—Sir William Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, will move in the House of Commons Monday that the rest of the session be devoted entirely to Government business. Henry Seton-Karr, Conservative for St. Helen's, will propose an amendment directly negativing the motion, thus virtually putting the question of confidence. A very close division, probably the closest since the last general election, is expected. All parties are rallying their forces, and urgent whips and telegraphic summonses have been sent in every direction to members.

SEVEN GREAT WONDERS AT COREA.

Among Them is a Hovering Stone and an Indestructible Forest.

A Chinese paper describes the seven wonders which Corea, like unto other Oriental countries, possesses, and which played a conspicuous role in antiquity. The Corean "wonders" consist, first, of a hot mineral spring near Kin Shantao, which is capable of curing sickness and diseases of all sorts. The second wonder is the two wells, one at each end of the peninsula, which have the peculiar characteristic that when one is full the other is empty. The water of the one is intensely bitter, that of the other has a pleasant and sweet taste. The third wonder is a cold cave from which there issues constantly an ice-cold wind, with such force that a strong man is not able to stand up against it. A pine forest which cannot be eradicated constitutes the fourth wonder.

No matter what injury may be done to the roots the young trees spring up the most remarkable, however, is the fifth wonder—the famous hovering stone—which stands, or rather appears to stand, in front of a palace erected to its honor. This is a massive rectangular block, free on all sides. Two men standing, one on each end, can draw a cord underneath the stone, from side to side, without encountering any obstacle. The sixth wonder is a hot stone which has been lying from time immemorial on the summit of a hill, and evolving a glowing heat. The seventh Corean wonder is a sweating Buddha. This is guarded in a great temple, in whose court for thirty yards on all sides not a single blade of grass grows. No tree, no flower will flourish on the sacred spot, and even wild creatures are careful not to profane it.

SUPERIOR VITALITY OF INSECTS.

Eggs Often Uninjured Even After Subjection to Intense Cold.

The eggs of insects have greater powers of vitality than any others. A case was published of an egg producing an insect eighty years after it must have been laid, and the scientist responsible for this statement thinks the power of vivification may endure in these eggs for an indefinite period. Many eggs of insects are exposed to the air without any covering, and many are sheltered too slightly to be secure from the frost. This, however, they are able to resist, remaining unfrozen, though exposed to the severest cold, or, still more surprising, are uninjured by its intensest action, recovering their vitality even after having been frozen into lumps of ice. On exposing several silk-worm eggs for five hours to a freezing mixture which made Fahrenheit's therometer fall to 38° below zero Spollanzi found that they were not frozen nor their fertility in the slightest degree impaired. Others were exposed to a degree of 56° below zero without being injured. The quality of the eggs of the snails is, perhaps, even more marvelous. These eggs, desiccated in a furnace until they are scarcely visible, will always remain their original bulk when damped, and the young will be brought forth as though the eggs had never been in any way interfered with. Neither heat nor cold seems to have any injurious effect upon their vitality, for they have been frozen into ice for any length of time and when the ice is melted will be found to be wholly uninjured.—Baltimore American.

Lady Stanley of Alderley.

The Dowager Lady Stanley of Alderley, whose death took place last month, was in many respects a most remarkable woman. Her great age of 87 was no hindrance to her extraordinary intellectual and physical activity. Within the last few weeks she attended the weekly meeting of the Girls' Public Day School Company (of which she was one of the earliest promoters), had attended a lecture at the Royal Institution on her old friend Carlyle, and had gone, in spite of the severity of the weather, to see a window given by her son, the present Lord Stanley, to a church. As a matter of history it may be recorded that she was born before the Jubilee of George III., was presented at court to George IV., was familiar with the widow of the young Pretender, and was present both at the Coronation and the Jubilee of her Majesty Queen Victoria. More than half a century ago Lady Stanley was one of the original promoters of the Queen's College, and she became one of the members of its first council. She asisted to a great extent, and to the best of her ability, Miss Emily Davies, to whom the foundation of Girton College was primarily and mainly owing. During the whole of her life she has been doing the best that she could do for the recent development of the education of women, never thrusting herself to the front or endeavoring to monopolize the credit that was due to others, and all this good work was accomplished without her neglecting her duties as a woman or taking a due interest in her children, even to the second and third generation. Lady Stanley had twelve children, seven of whom are now living. Even recentlly she regretted she was not ten years younger to go and explore some of the newly-investigated regions of Central Asia, and as an example of her brightness, it is related that at one of the last visits paid to her by the late Premier, Mr. Gladstone, when he endeavored to turn the subject of conversation from that of politics, in which they differed, by alluding to a recent novel, she is reported to have said, "Do not let us talk of novels; leave them for your old age, as I do." a singular jest for a lady who was 87 when addressed to a statesman of 85.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Playing Sweet Marie

"Bill Doolan's band has been captured in Oklahoma," remarked the newspaper reader. "You don't say so," replied the man who pretends to keep posted, but doesn't. "What was Bill's band doing?" Playing "Sweet Marie."

One Hundred Miles an Hour.

The real danger in increasing the speed of expresses driven by steam does not lie in incidental risks. It is not denied that a modern locomotive might be built which could run up to ninety or possibly one hundred miles an hour if the lines were straight. It is the curves of the existing lines which render any such speed impossible, unless the weight of the engines and trains were also increased far beyond what the bridges and permanent way would bear. At the first sharp curve the 100-mile express would fly off the rails. The necessary relation of these curves to speed is accurately known, and it is that, and not the want of power, or novel dangers from wind pressure or boiler explosions, which sets the limit to modern train speed. As the force tending to throw off the line a train running at the speed of one hundred and fifty miles an hour would be about six and a half times greater than that which a steam express train resists at a curve when running at sixty miles an hour, it is plain that the present lines could not be used for the "lightning express," even though the electro-motor were substituted for the steam engine. The lines must not only be stronger, but straighter, than would be possible by any modification of their present form. —The Spectator.

The New Woman.

He—"A drink like that makes me feel like a new man."

She—"Let me have some of it. Perhaps it will make me feel like a new woman."

He (with fears of "emancipation")—"Well, I guess not."

Wine Caused the Loss of the Victoria.

It is now stated on good authority that the fearful disaster which befell the warship Victoria, resulting in the instant destruction of hundreds of lives, is another of the long list of calamities which may be set down to the credit of strong drink. It is said that the fatal order which resulted in the collision with the Camperdown was given in a fit of recklessness superinduced by too much wine drinking. On no other ground, it is said, can it be explained why a man ordinarily so cool, discreet and skilful as Admiral Tryon, should have given an order which the commonest sailors knew could only result in disaster. It is charitable to believe that Admiral Tryon was not in a condition of mind to realize what he was about when he said that "six cables length" instead of eight should be the distance between the ships in that manœuvre. That two cables of difference meant a swift and awful death to hundreds of brave men, including the admiral himself. It was wine that did it and not Admiral Tryon.—Christian at Work.

"We always fry ours in Cottolene."

Our Meat, Fish, Oysters, Saratoga Chips, Eggs, Doughnuts, Vegetables, etc.

Like most other people, our folks formerly used lard for all such purposes. When it disagreed with any of the family (which it often did) we said it was "too rich." We finally tried and not one of us has had an attack of "richness" since. We further found that, unlike lard, Cottolene had no unpleasant odor when cooking, and lastly Mother's favorite and conservative cooking authority came out and gave it a big recommendation which clinched the matter. So that's why we always fry ours in Cottolene.

Sold in 3 and 5 lb. pails, by all grocers. Made only by THE N. K. FAIRBANK COMPANY, Wellington and Ann Streets, MONTREAL.

Fever and Ague and Bilious Derangements are positively cured by the use of Parmelee's Pills. They not only cleanse the stomach and bowels from all bilious matter, but they open the excretory vessels, causing them to pour copious effusions from the blood into the bowels, after which the corrupt mass is thrown out by the natural passage of the body. They are used as a general family medicine with the best results.

CENTURY OF WAR.

A French Physician Declares It Has Cost France the Lives of 6,000,000 Soldiers.

A highly interesting study of what 100 years of war have cost France in human life has just been made public by Dr. Lagneau, member of the Academy of Medicine of Paris, and is found in the Lancet. When the revolution broke out, France's effective army was only 120,000 men. For the wars waged during the 10 years in Belgium, on the Sambre, the Meuse, the Rhine, the Alps, the Pyrenees, in the Vendee and in Egypt there were called out 2,800,000. At the last census made in the ninth year of the republic there remained of these only 677,598. In killed and in dead by disease the wars of the first republic cost France 2,122,402 men. From 1801 to Waterloo 3,157,398 men scarcely sufficed to fill the blanks which, in an incessant war against combined Europe, France incurred at Austerlitz, Jena, Auerstadt, Friedland, Saragossa, Smolensk, Moscow, Lutzen, Bautzen, Dresden, Leipzig and Waterloo. Under the restoration, Louis Philippe, and the second republic, in spite of the war in Spain (1823), the conquest of Algiers (1830), and the taking of Antwerp, France passed through a period of comparative calm. The army numbered about 213,748, and the mortality averaged 22 per 1,000. In 1853-5 commenced the epoch of the great wars—the Crimea, Italy (1859-60), China (1860-1), Mexico (1862-6), and the disasters of 1870. In the Crimea, out of 309,268 men 95,615 succumbed; in Italy, out of 500,000 there died 18,673; in China, 950; and in Cochin China 48 per 1,000. The second empire cost France about 1,600,000 soldiers. According to Dr. Lagneau's demographic tables the century from 1795 to 1895 witnessed the death in battle or by disease of 6,000,000 French soldiers.

Living a la Japonaise.

I do not know of anything more simpler and more delightful than housekeeping in Japan—if you live a la Japonaise. I myself determined to try it, and, having found a suitable spot to settle in, on the highest hill in Tokio, I proceeded to engage a native servant, who was also to be my adviser as to how to furnish my establishment in strictly Japanese fashion. The furnishing was completed in les than ten minutes, and here are some of the principal items of which it consisted:—Two foutangs or thin mattresses, between which one lies at night, and a makura, a wooden pillow, or rather an instrument of torture for the first few nights, furnished my bedroom; a hibachi, or brass brazier, with chopsticks to stir the fire with, and a water kettle made the hall cozy; and a little lacquer table, a foot squre and about six inches, with a couple of tiny little plates and a bowl, made the dining-room quite complete and replete with every comfort. Two silk cushions were placed in the sitting-room for distinguished guests to sit on.

"Ah," said I to my servant, "but do you not think that I shall need something more?" as to my European mind what I had purchased seemed somewhat insufficient to furnish a twelve-roomed house.

"No, sir," said he in his broken English, "real Japanese gentlemen has no furniture." Upon which I began to feel rather sorry to have emulated the "Japan gentleman." Still, I thought I would go on for the fun of the thing, and, though I must confess as I went around my new abode my rooms did not look overfurnished, I decided to make the best of what I had got. It is astonishing with how little one can do if one tries, and how much better penury is than profusion. When a couple of days had elapsed I almost began to feel that I had furnished my house too richly! I could certainly have done with a deal less.—Fortnightly Review.

He Smoked 628,713 Cigars

The Paris newspapers tell of a peculiar old man who died at Vienna early in March in his seventy-third year. They call him the most exact man of whom there is record. From his twenty-seventh year he kept accurate account of all he bought and what he paid for it. A few days before his death he made up his books to show just what eating, drinking and wearing clothes had cost him during his last fifty-six years. The totals show that in this period he wore out eighty-five pairs of trousers and seventy-four coats and vests, for which he paid $8,000. He had bought 208 shirts and 306 collars, valued at $300. His omnibus fare was $208. In the twenty-seven years of his convivial life he consumed 28,786 glasses of beer. He gave up drinking in his forty-fourth year, but he continued to smoke constantly, even during his last sickness, raising the number of his cigars to 628,713, or an average of 11,217 a year. Of the whole number some 43,500 were given him; he bought the rest for $12,500, or 2 cents each.

This exact old man took most pride in his socks, which were of the best silk and most expensive make, costing usually $4 50 a pair. He wore out but sixty-two pairs between his twenty-seventh and seventy-third years, or hardly more than a pair a year.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The Cost of Confetti.

Every one who has been in a Continental city at carnival time has seen the "confetti" which are thrown about in the mimic warfare in the streets. The making and selling of these tiny paper pellets constitutes an industry of some little importance. It is estimated that the Parisians alone spend £24,000 sterling, or 600,000 francs, upon them every year. Great fluctuations take place in the selling price. When the fun is at its fastest, and purchasers are eager, the price is as much as a franc and a half kilogramme, or say eightpence a pound English; but towards the end of the carnival holders are glad to dispose of them at 70 centimes a kilogramme, or less than half the former price. The total weight of confetti sold in Paris this year has been estimated at 500,000 kilogrammes, or over 1,000 tons.—London Daily News.

A Curious Fad.

The Count of Montesquieu, a wealthy and eccentric French nobleman, inhabits a splendid villa in the neighborhood of Paris, chiefly remarkable for its magnificent conservatory, which is used as a banqueting hall. Creeping among the plants in this winter garden are to be seen a number of little tortoises, which their eccentric owner has had enamelled and studded with precious stones.—Buntes Allerlei.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

BRITAIN'S EASTERN POLICY

Cession of Territory Would Be Ruinous to Japan.

THE JAPS MASTERS OF DIPLOMACY

British Diplomats in Tokyo and Pekin Report That Partition of China is Inevitable—Germany the Catspaw of Russia—France Without Oriental Interest.

London, April 27.—The final decision of the British Government to refrain from meddling with the eastern question as regards China and Japan has been taken upon the advice, strongly put of the British diplomats in Pekin and Tokyo, and have been asked by the Government to report their views and observations. It is likely, as the situation now appears, that the conditions of the treaty of peace, when seen with the unprejudiced eye, will show that Japan has won a complete victory, not only by force of arms, but in the field of diplomacy. Their reports, which were made after the Chinese New Year, indicated that Japan was determined to dictate in terms far more rigorous than those exacted at Shimonoseki.

Lord Kimberley, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has received assertions from the British representative in Tokyo that the present Japanese Ministry are experiencing their last days of existence as a composite body. The British agent expresses his belief that the conditions of the treaty of peace as already published are incapable of reduction in respect of their exactions, and that the minimum of the Japanese claims is vastly greater than before the war, when as a matter of fact acquisition of territory was the chief aim of the Mikado's Government. It is represented to the Foreign Office by the British agent at Tokyo that Count Ito, the president of the Japanese public Ministers, will be unable to govern much longer, owing to the tactics of the party of the opposition in the Diet in rejecting war measures and refusing to vote supplies, virtually bringing the legislative machinery to a standstill. Although the complete success of the war with the consequent revision of the existing treaties has greatly subdued to his spirit there is no doubt that the Ito party will be overthrown if they accede to the demands of Russia. What may happen if they oppose these demands is a matter of still graver doubt.

Lord Kimberley and his colleagues take the same view of the situation as that which Viscount Curzon, M.P., outlined on the eve of the war, that if the Ito ministry should fall it would be a genuine calamity, not only to Japan, but to the other powers as well. The British Government ascribe the early and successful close of the war to the tact and capacity of Count Ito, in spite of the clamor of a vast majority of the people of Japan, who are still practically insisting that Japanese troops shall occupy Pekin.

In view of this feeling the British and other European representatives in China and Japan have advised their Governments that any proposal that Japan surrender any part of the ceded territory at the bidding of the European powers, whether such cession should ultimately be necessary or not, would be likely to jeopardize the Japan constitution, which occurrence would inevitably undo the great part of the progressive work which has been done in Japan within the last quarter of a century. Inquiries on this subject have brought from Chinese sources a great deal of information in the same view, though couched in different terms.

Mr. Pickering, an official who has served long and faithfully in the British service, and who has lately been employed in the intelligence department of the War Office, to report upon the state of the Chinese army, says:

"The partition of China is inevitable. If England is wise, she will prepare for the coming scramble. In the meantime the interest lies in the success of Japan. It is the belief that Russia will not remain content until she gets an all-the-year-round open port in the Pacific and a portion of Manchuria. Germany will act merely as a cuckoo to place her young in the nests of the others, so as to make money out of our markets and undersell us."

The anti-Japanese protest issued by France is regarded generally as a mere form to satisfy Russia. Certainly if it is proposed to attack Japan the proposal will be defeated in the Chamber of Deputies. M. Felix Geline, a member of the Chamber of Deputies and editor of Le Republic Francaise, writes in his paper on the subject, "France bolsters China and assisting her to recover her strength may eventually mean an invasion of Tonkin by the "Black Flags." The article proceeds to say, "Russia must not imagine that she can lead her anywhere she pleases. We are in an excellent position with Japan; do not let us destroy that position."

The entire English press devote column upon column of space in comments upon the question of Mr. Balfor at the annual assembly of the Primrose League yesterday. The utterances of the Conservative leader are regarded in the light of a great Tory victory, inasmuch as the rupture between the Tories and the Unionists which was foreshadowed in last week's despatches would undoubtedly have occurred if Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour had not promised to go to the country with a program embodying the social reforms which Mr. Chamberlain advocates. In the meantime Mr. Chamberlain remains in his Birmingham residence watching events. He has not only not delivered a speech or granted an interview, but he has not been in London since the adjournmet of Parliament for the Easter session. When the ultra-Tory section began their campaign with a view of showing that the Conservatives could win elections without Mr. Chamberlain or his program he notified the Conservative leaders that if they fought their elections merely on the lines on the maintenance of the union ad of the church he would push the program independently with the personal followers of Mr. Chamberlain, together with the support of the moderate Liberals and Lord Salisbury and Mr. Balfour. The meaning is that he will be the next Chancellor of the Exchequer and that the Duke of Devonshire will also be in the Cabinet. Many expect to see the Chamberlain scheme of Irish local government which Mr. Gladstone overruled in 1885 reproduced with alterations made in accordance with Mr. Balfour's experience in Ireland during his term as Chief Secretary.

BRITISH PRISON REFORM.

Possibility of the Present System Being Swept Away Root and Branch.

London, April 29.—Harold Frederics cables: If the present Government manages to remain in office it is likely that the present year will witness a remarkable organisation and reform of the British prison system. A Departmental Committee of the Home Office has been enquiring into the subject, and its unanimous report almost takes the most sanguine philanthropists's breath away. The report declares the existing system to be inhuman and vicious, and says that it must be cleared away, root and branch. It urges that prisoners be better treated and fed, allowed a certain degree of intercourse with their fellows and with books, be taught trades, or put intelligently to work at the craft that they know, and be helped when released. It also warmly recommends some plan for not imprisoning young offenders at all, and a special treatment for habitual drunkards. The report as a whole is an exceedingly important document in philanthropic literature, and, if Asquith and Herbert Gladstone continue in the Home Office, it is certain to bear fruit speedily. The trouble with any possible Tory successors would be not that they are less humane men, but that the matter has been made a party question by certain Tory papers, who have been treating Sir Edmund Du Cane, the dismissed Surveyor-General of Prisons, as a martyr to partisan rancor, whereas he was really put out because he was chiefly to blame for the mismanagement and savage barbarity which have marked the English prison administration under his long rule.

VICTIM OF BAD BOOKKEEPING.

Tilbury's ex Treasurer Arraigned for Misappropriation of Township Funds.

Windsor, Ont., April 28.—Clement Mailloux, ex-treasurer of Tilbury, was arraigned on Saturday on a charge of misappropriation of the township funds to the amount of $5900. The evidence was all given by Eli Queenbell, Mailloux's successor, and by C. A. Quellette, one of the auditors who discovered the alleged shortage.

The evidence indicated poor bookkeeping on the part of the ex-treasurer rather than any intent of defraud.

Mailloux was bound in $12,000 to appear at the sessions.

EAST WICKLOW BYE-ELECTION.

London, April 27.—The Parliamentary election in East Wicklow yesterday, caused by the action of the sitting member, John Sweetman, in withdrawing from the McCarthyite section of the Irish party and allying himself with the Parnellite faction, was very exciting. Mr. Sweetman, upon deserting the Anti-Parnellites, applied for the stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds and sought reelection as an Irish Nationalist, independent of all English parties. There were three candidates in the field, and the full vote of the constituency was cast. The election, which was fought bitterly throughout the day, resulted in the defeat of Mr. Sweetman. The result was as follows: O'Kelly, McCarthyite, 1273; Sweetman, Parnellite, 1189; Tottenham, Liberal-Unionist, 1159.

HOLLAND'S QUEEN IN LONDON.

She Visits Her Betrothed, Alfred of Saxe-Coburg Gotha.

London, April 27.—Queen Wilhelmina and Queen Regent Emma of Holland arrived at Queensboro on board the royal yacht Valk this morning, and proceeded at once by special train for London. Upon their arrival here they were met at the station by the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, the Duchess of Albany and the members of the Netherlands legation, and driven to Brown's Hotel, where they will remain for the present.

The Choir Danced in Church.

Winnipeg, Man., April 28.—A leading church member of Winnipeg is in bed with a nervous shock. He happened to be out late Saturday night, and when passing his church going home was astounded to find the organist in her place playing lively music, to which the members of the choir were holding a dance. There will be an advertisement in Monday's paper calling for applications for organist and choristers. As may be imagined the affair is all the talk, overshadowing for the time the school question.

Suicide of an American at Stratford.

Stratford, Ont., April 27.—Luther J. Allen, brother of John C. Allen, the Buffalo bucketshop man and gambler, who failed on Thursday, suicided at the American Hotel, this city, Friday night. From papers found on the dead man it seems that he is a victim of his brother's failure and that his suicide was due to financial troubles.

There will be no inquest, as the coroner considers it a clear case of suicide from opium or morphine.

A Stratford Man in Michigan.

Capac, Mich., April 27.—William Manse, a German, aged 26, whose parents live near Stratford, Ont., cut his throat here yesterday. He had fled from home because he had got a girl into trouble.

Death of Baron Moncreiff.

London, April 29. — Baron Moncreiff died in Edinburgh Saturday. James Wellwood Moncreiff, the first Baron Moncreiff, was born Nov., 1811. He had been Solicitor-General for Scotland and four times Lord Advocate of Scotland. In 1869 he was appointed Lord Justice Clerk and President of the second division of the Court of Session in Scotland. He was created Baron in 1873. In politics he was a Liberal.

Canadian Pictures in Paris.

Paris, April 29.—This year's exhibition of pictures and sculptures at the Old Salon in the Champs Elysees, which opens to the public on May 1, ranks distinctly above the average. There are more real works of art than have been seen in recent years.

Sixty-two of the exhibitors are from Canada and the United States. Several of them show two pictures each.

Evictions at Pullman.

Chicago, April 27.—One hundred and fifty families at Pullman have been served with notices of eviction. The company's officer says no writs of eviction will be executed except in the cases of men who are earning money outside of Pullman and who refuse to pay their rent, although able to do so.

Mrs. W. B. Brown, of Washington, N.C., has given to the state council of King's Daughters a beautiful home, which is to be used as a home for imbecile children. The legislature of the state will be asked to make appropriations for its support.

The late Lord Randolph Churchill had six sisters, each one of whom married remarkably well, although they were by no means beauties. There is, perhaps, no record of six sisters, and plain girls with extravagant tastes and no money, having been thus happily married to young men, each one remarkably rich, and in some instances a millionaire. It has been calculated that the six married sisters own, through their husbands, sixteen millions of money.

Mlle. Letizia Bonaparte Wyse, who was married on the 23rd ult. to M. Aristide Bergasse, an ensign in the French navy, is the daughter of Bonaparte Wyse, the famous engineer, who now holds concessions from the Columbian Government for cutting the Panama Canal.

Of Interest to Farmers.

The supposition that an orchard will thrive with small applications of fertilizers has deprived farmers of yields which would have been possible with a larger amount of plant food. What is most desirable in orchards is potash, and it will not be extravagant to apply as much as 100 pounds per acre.

Poultry manure is usually kept dry mixed with earth, but it will be more serviceable if kept moist (not wet), and collected daily. It may be mixed with an equal bulk of dry earth, adding a peck of kainit to five bushels of the mixture. The hard lumps in the dry droppings are due to silicates, which form when it is kept a long while in a dry condition.

Farmers' Daughters.

The farmer's daughter is, as a rule a strong, whole-hearted, sensible girl. Her father and mother, as they grow older, having no change from the incessant, monotonous routine work of a farm, sometimes become entirely oblivious to the bright, seemingly unnecessary phases of life; and just what they need to rouse them, to lift them out of the rut, is a rightly educated, sweet-tempered daughter, to bring her newfound friends from other places to visit them. The brothers may be overgrown and awkward; they, too, learn much from their sister and her friends. Yes, farmers, make great sacrifices for your daughters. Send them to good schools, encourage them to bring their friends to your home, be as sociable as possible; you will find a new zest in life. If you have trained your girls to be true women they deserve more than common educational advantages, and you will feel amply repaid in later years.

Woman's Waist.

No doubt it will be a relief to some girls with athletic proclivities to know the extreme limit of the size of the waist. A recent article from the pen of an eminent authority on the subject says it is not the proper thing to lace or even to have the appearance of lacing. No waist should be smaller than 24 inches. The proper measurement for the chest of a girl whose waist is that size is 38 inches. Thus it will be seen that the modern beauty must be solid and nearly approach the proportions of the heroic age. The present age is an athletic one, and as long as the young women continue their healthy exercises—lawn tennis, croquet, rowing, riding, bicycling, fencing, and vaulting, jumping, and turning in the gymnasium—bright eyes, good complexions, and firm, well-knit, and muscular figures will be found.

May Prove Aids to Beauty.

A rubber flesh brush is the next best thing to a masseuse. A thorough rubbing of the face and neck twice a day with it is almost equal to a facial massage. It does not irritate the skin as a bristle brush does, and it does exercise every particle of flesh and stimulate the nerves so that the face loses the strained look which one set of tired muscles and and another of unexercised ones give. The women who say and think that a daily bath is debilitating should remember that all unusual exercises are weakening, and that it is only by gradually accustoming one's self to them that strength is gained and maintained. Any one who fears the effect of a daily tub bath should begin by taking a sponge each morning. Then she should take first two, then three, and so on in increasing numbers, tub baths at night. She will have the night's rest to recover from the effect, and she will soon not only be able to take a tub bath at any time, but she will feel actually uncomfortable without it.

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

A CAB-DRIVER'S STORY.

"I was afflicted for eight years with Salt Rheum. During that time, I tried a great many medicines which were highly recommended, but none gave me relief. I was at last advised to try Ayer's Sarsaparilla, by a friend who told me that I must purchase six bottles, and use them according to directions. I yielded to his persuasion, bought the six bottles, and took the contents of three of these bottles without noticing any direct benefit. Before I had finished the fourth bottle, my hands were as

THE CITY CLERK IN TORONTO

Mr D B Robertson has a Busy Day in the Queen City

Mr. D. B. Robertson was in Toronto on Saturday and had a very busy day. He called on Dr. Bryce, secretary of the Provincial Board of Health regarding the proposed outlet and disposal of the sewerage. Mr. Robertson made an appointment with Dr. Bryce for the visiting committee of the Provincial Board to come to Belleville on Friday next. They will arrive on the early morning train.

Mr. Robertson also called upon the Toronto city clerk, Mr. J. Blevins to look into the manner of keeping track of the local improvements, assessments and the books necessary in respect thereto and also the method pursued in consolidating the Toronto by-laws. Mr. Robert McLean, secretary of the underwriters Association was next called upon and Mr. Robertson pointed out that owing to the very large number of private telephones in our city there was not that necessity for an electric fire alarm system, which the Association thought there was.

Mr. McLean, however, was very firm, and to maintain our rating in class "B" he thought we should put in an electric fire alarm system so Mr. Robertson accompanied by Mr. McQuaig, of Mr. McLean's staff, called upon Mr. Neilson, the manager of the Bell Telephone Co. in Toronto and inspected the various kinds of fire alarm boxes and gongs and ascertained that for about $1200 we could get a system that would be approved of by the Association and thus save our rating. Mr. Robertson urged that as we had brought 250 feet of hose this year that the Association put off the requisition for the fire alarm system for another year. This is to be considered.

THE MAIL LINERS

Will not Call at the Bay Ports on Both Trips

Following is a letter received by Mr. D. B. Robertson in reply to one sent by him to Mr. C. T. Gildersleeve, Manager of the R. O. Navigation Co., in reference to having the mail boats call at this port on both trips.

April, 27th, 95.

DEAR SIR,—Yours of the 23rd inst. is duly received. I quite concur with the great desirability in every point of view of this company's steamers calling at Bay of Quinte ports on their way going east as well as west. There is, however, this serious difficulty of the matter which to me is unsurmountable, viz., that the time of leaving Toronto is already much too early, if it were possible to do so, the steamers ought not to leave Toronto before six or seven o'clock in the evening but as this is impossible the only thing that can be done is to have them leave Toronto as late as it is practible in order to run the rapids by daylight on the following day. Regretting that it is not in the power of the company to comply with your request mentioned in your letter which I would otherwise have been glad to have done. Believe me,

Very Sincerely Yours,
C. F. GILDERSLEEVE,
General Manager.

EDUCATIONAL DAY.

REV. MR. BAKER TALKS OF RELIGION IN THE SCHOOLS.

Rev. Dr Dyer at Bridge St.—Education Can do Most Anything but Save a Man —Foreign Notes

Throughout the Methodist church yesterday Denominational Educational interests formed a beautiful theme of discourse and claimed the contributary consideration of the faithful; all this because it was Educational Sunday.

The Rev. Dr. Dyer, principal of Albert College, preached in Bridge Street in the morning an earnest and thoughtful sermon from the text "Many shall run to and fro and knowledge shall be increased," Daniel xii, 4. He drew attention by illustration of the recent progress of knowledge and stated that science was still plodding up that step-by-step pathway as of yore. Referring to the differences between science and the Bible he found that the scriptures still stood immutable, as the word of God. Some passages had been misinterpreted and science had corrected the interpretation, as for instance the significance of "day" in the story of creation which was now believed to mean an age or indefinite period of time. Scientists were coming more and more to believe in Jesus Christ.

He told then what education was; what it could do for man; and what it could not do. Education did not consist, he said, in the accumulation of facts, but rather the opposite, the leading forth of the mind, the broading of the perceptions. An old philosopher had said that of truth or the search for truth he would choose the search for truth, and another had said that if he had truth in one hand and the search for truth in the other he would let truth go that he might continue the pursuit of it. Education was the strengthening of the mental faculties, and it purposed the culture of the whole man, body, mind and spirit. Many men who had never entered college halls were splendidly educated. There were, he said, no impossibilities to young men living in this country to-day and if there were they were of his own making. It was not brilliancy and genius by which the highest honors were gained, but by perseverence and indomitable will. He cited Sir Mackenzie Bowell as an instance of a man with ordinary ability who had risen by perseverence, application and concentration of purpose. It had been objected to education that it unfitted ministers to speak a plain gospel to a plain people, but except in some isolated cases the contrary was the fact. It had been said too that Methodism was not a religion that could adapt itself to the highest culture, but it could not, then it was not true belief.

Coming to what education could not do for men, he said it could not save them. Science could offer no cure for sin, that required the all-healing touch of the Son of God.

In the evening the Rev. Mr. Baker preached upon the text "For I am determined not to know anything among you save Jesus Christ and him crucified." 1 Cor. ii: 2. His thought was that to know Christ was to know all of life, was to measure the height and depth of human experience. In concluding he gave the result of his thought upon the question of religion in the schools He was not particular that the Scriptures be taught in the public schools as a lesson. He did not deem it essential that a passage should be read each day without note or comment though he preferred that it should be. But what was wanted and what must be had was teachers who would be living epistles, who would by their lives be determined to reveal Jesus Christ and him crucified. This was the principle and the law upon which the School Boards and legislatures should govern the Educational system. To make the schools merely places where children could learn a trade or how to do business was defeating the very end of education. All christians, Catholics and Protestants could unite in a demand that every teacher be a child of God. The speaker did not want his children or his neighbor's children under the influence of a man or woman whose word or deed was a denial of the Saviour.

The music by the choir was especially good yesterday. In the morning they sang for an anthem Gaul's "O God who has prepared," and in the evening the anthem was "the sanctus" from Gounod's Messe Solennelle, and Miss Price sang a solo "I am a pilgrim," by Marsden. It was a beautiful hymn and melody and tastefully rendered. Miss Price was assisted by Miss Garrett and Messrs Eaton and Stafford.

AGAINST TOBACCO.

The Oklahoma House has passed a bill prohibiting the manufacture or sale or giving away of cigarettes or cigarette paper in the territory under penalty of $500 fine, one-half of which is to go to the informant. After a fierce conflict the anti-cigarette bill passed the California Legislature There are a million dollars at stake in the passage of the bill,' said one defender of the cigarette. 'There are a million boys at stake also,' said Mrs. Parvis the W. C. T. U. representative, and she continued to work for its passage, though threatened with removal from the floor of the house. In Michigan Professor Pattengill has had a bill introduced to prohibit the state or any disctrict in the state from employing any teacher who uses tabacco in any of its forms.

A Good Thing is Always Desirable

So it is with the visits of Prof. Dorenwend to Belleville. On his last visit he was so busy that many ladies and gentlemen were unable to be attended to. He is therefore returning to give all who desire it another opportunity of procuring his art goods for the head. Prof. Dorenwend is undoubtedly one of the leaders of his profession on this continent—his skill in arranging the coverings for the head of either lady or gentleman is well known. His goods are acknowledged to be perfect and in everyway true to nature. They are the best protection to the head besides giving a refined and youthful expression to the face. Call and examine these marvels of his art and have them fitted in order to judge the effect. Consult him about your hair, he will (free of charge) give you advice as to the preservation of it. He will be at Hotel Quinte Saturday 11th May.

The Very Latest.

We have just received a gent's genuine Russian tan cal laced boot pointed toe sewed soles, price $2.50, also a finer line, made by the celebrated Goodyear Welt process, price $3.00; and other American makes at $3.50 and $4.00.—Haines & Lockett.

As baldness makes one look prematurely old, so a full head of hair gives to mature life the appearance of youth. To secure this and prevent the former, Ayers's Hair Vigor is confidently recommended. Both ladies and gentlemen perfer it to any other dressing.

The great favor in which Ayer's Pills are held all over the world has been well earned. They are easy and even pleasant to take, and for all complaints of the stomach and liver, and bowels, are the safest and most thorough medicine in pharmacy. Every dose effective.

A HAMILTON BOOM

The Times' Fresh Breeze to Waft Mr. Tinsley Into a Commissionership.—H. K. Smith's Claims

The Times has good authority for the statement that the Ontario Government has decided upon the appointment of Mr. Edwin Tinsley, the well known locomotive engineer, to succeed A. D. Stewart in the office of Chief Game Warden of the Province. The new man will enter upon his duties immediately, with headquarters in the Parliament buildings at Toronto, and from his familiarity with all matters relating to fishing and hunting he ought to prove the right man in the right place.—Hamilton Times.

This announcement is entirely unofficial and is a boom of the Times for a man whose only recommendation is that he comes from Hamilton. Surely the fish and game commissioners themselves are the best judges of who would best fill the position vacated by Chief Game Warden, Stewart, and in their annual report referring to the case said:

"It will be necessary of course to fill Mr. Stewart's position without delay and your Commissioners beg to recommend that Mr. H. K. Smith, Warden in charge of the eastern portion of the province be appointed as Mr. Stewart's successor. Mr. Smith is a man of considerable executive ability, is thoroughly familiar with the workings of the Game and Fishery Acts, and can be depended upon for careful, intelligent and conscientious work."

There is no question in the world as to Mr. Smith's fitness for this position, and no comparison is possible with the Time's nominee. Mr. Smith has been officially connected with the protection of game and enforcing of the game laws of the Province since 1891 and has during that time given more personal attention to the work than any other man on the Commission. For a time, during Mr. Stewart absence in Europe, he performed the duties of Chief Warden to the entire satisfaction of the Government and Commission.

If Mr. Tinsley really must have an appointment he might be given the wardenship that would be made vacant by Mr. Smith's promotion and then he would have an opportunity of learning something about the business under Mr. Smith's able supervision.

THE AMBULANCE

It Will Cost $550, of Which $429 to Hand —The Lecture

Miss Gordon received from the Burns Co., Toronto, an estimate on an ambulance and their lowest figure for an ambulance complete was $550. St. Charles & Pringle's estimate for a modern ambulance complete in every particular was the same, so it has been decided that the ambulance will be made at home.

The total amount of the fund at present to hand is $429. Miss Gordon's course of lectures netted $100. The G. T. R. employees have contributed $100, St. Charles and Pringle will give $100, this morning Miss Gordon received $20 from Mr. Thos. Ritchie, and other citizens have contributed to the extent of $109. This leaves $121 still to be collected.

Miss Gordon concluded the ambulance fund lecture course on Friday with an address on wounds and bandages. Though no one could be got to volunteer to have an artery cut, or his wrist sprained or even to be burned or scalded and therefor the lecture was not illustrated, nevertheless results would indicate that the presentation was somewhat realistic as three of the ladies fainted. This if known would not be a flattering recommendation as to their qualifications for nurses, but no one is going to tell. Miss Gordon told and showed how to stop bleeding in the limbs and other parts of the body, told how to treat burns and scalds, etc. Fainting she said was one of natures devices to stop hemorrhage. She told of the different kinds of hemorrhages and of the proper positions and temperatures for the patients.

Mental Power From Manual Training

Dr. C. H Henderson, in The Popular Science Monthly says: Power, that is what we are after. Let us keep it always in mind. Let us not be turned off from the main quest, however alluring the side issues. We want the increased power of the human spirit.

Now, power is a result as well as a cause. Intellectual power is the result of a developed brain organism. This development comes through use. Any activity at the circumference means a corresponding activity at the center. The exercise of any one of the senses means the development of its corresponding brain center. The sum of this development is intelligence. This is what I mean by the psychological import of manual training. This it is which makes the lovers of power value manual training. Each movement of a motor nerve, whether it be in the fashioning of wood or metal or clay, involves a corresponding brain movement. These movements stimulate growth, and growth is what we are after. Intellect is a function of brain surface.

I believe, then, that the strongest argument for manual training is not the practical value of the skill which it develops, not even the moral significance of the sturdiness which it inculcates but that it is something which includes these and the other ends of culture, that it is the increased intellectual power which is the necessary physiological result of such training. This is a large claim, and one that has never been urged before, I believe on precisely these grounds. But it is a claim which can be fully substantiated.

The Evolution

Of medicinal agents is gradually relegating the old-time herbs, pills, draughts and vegetable extracts to the rear and bringing into general use the pleasant and effective liquid laxative, Syrup of Figs. To get the true remedy see that it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only. For sale by all leading druggists.

THE ELEMENTS OF BONE, BRAIN AND MUSCLE, are derived from the blood, which is the grand natural source of vital energy, the motor of the bodily organs. When the circulation becomes impoverished in consequence of weak digestion and imperfect assimilation of the food, which should enrich every bodily function fags and the system grows weak and disordered. When the blood becomes impure either from the development of inherited seeds of disease, or contamination by bile, or other causes, bilious maladies surely follow. A highly accredited remedy for these evils is NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery.

LITERARY NOTES.

"The Criminal Crowding of Public Schools" and "Crowded Schools as Promoters of Disease" are two subjects of pressing imporance that will be taken up in "The Forum for May. Professor J. H. Penniman, of Philadelphia, by a study of school reports themselves of many of our principal cities, shows what lamentable lack of sufficient and wholesome buildings there are—how, indeed, much of the educational work in Boston and New York, and many other cities is worse than wasted. Dr. H. D Chapin, of New York, lays down the conditions that should govern the healthful building and arrangement of school-rooms

Mr J. G Bourinot, Clerk of the Dominion Parliament, has written for the May Forum a very striking comparison of the Canadian and the American systems of government, to show why the American system does not commend itself to Canadians. He thus explains the absence of any influential annexation sentiment in Canada.

Yellow as a guinea —The complexion in a case of unchecked liver complaint, culminating in jaundice, is literally "as yellow as a guinea." It has this appearance because the bile, which enables the bowels to act, is directed from its proper course into the blood. In connection with this symptom is nausea, coating of the tongue, sick headache, impurity of the breath, pains through the right side and shoulder blade, dyspepsia and constipation. These and other concomitants of liver complaint are complaints removed by the use of NORTHROP & LYMAN'S VEGETABLE DISCOVERY AND DYSPEPTIC CURES which is almost an eradicant of scrofula, erysipelas salt rheum, ulcers, cancers, humours, female weakness, jaundice, and lumbago. It tones the stomach, rouses the liver, and after relieving them, causes the bowels thereafter to become regular. High professional sanction has been accorded to it; and its claims to public confidence are justified by ample evidence. Price, $1.00. Sample Bottle 10 cents. Ask for NORTHROP & LYMAN'S Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. The wrapper bears a fac-smile of their signature. Sold by all medicine dealers.

When so many people are taking and deriving benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla, who don't you try it yourself? It is highly recommended.

GENTLEMEN,—In the spring of 1891 I got a bottle of B. B. B. for my mother, who had been troubled with Sick Headache. I got it from Mr. H. Paxton Baird, of Woodstock, N. She used it for three months and has had no headache since. We are sure it was B. B. B. cured her as she took no other medicine.

- WALL PAPER -

THE DESIGNS of our spring wall papers are beautiful and the colorings exquisite. The effects they produce upon the wall have been studied with intelligent sympathy, and the "long-felt wants" of a few years ago have been provided for with cultivated taste. A judicious employment of any of our papers leaves little to be done in a room—a few ornaments according to the taste or wealth of the occupant are all that is necessary to contribute to its beauty and comfort. Our papers thoroughly represent the standard of the prevailing taste in interior decorations.

Paine's Celery Compound Set Him on the Rock of Health.

Indigestion, Stomach Troubles Headache Sleeplessness and Anxiety.

The Great Spring Medicine Sweeps Away These Troubles.

In almost every Canadian home, one or more members suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia, headache, nervousness or sleeplessness. In the great majority of cases the doctors have failed to effect a permanent cure, and the common patent medicines of our times have only prolonged suffering and agony.

How different the results with those who have used Paine's Celery Compound! they have in every case been raised to a condition of perfect health, robustness and mental vigor. Thousands of renewed and re-created men and women in Canada, will forever remember that their lives were saved and made happy by Paine's Celery Compound.

Mr Hugh J. Riley, of 42 Agnes Street, S. Henry, Montreal, is one of the many who have given public testimony for the benefit of sufferers in Canada. Mr. Riley writes as follows:

"I wish to publicly acknowledge the fact that I am indebted to your Paine's Celery Compound for health, strength and life. For over three years I was a terrible sufferer from indigestion, severe pains in the stomach and headache. In addition to these serious troubles, I had no appetite or relish for food, and hardly knew what it was to have a full night's rest. This condition of sleeplessness and anxiety made me very nervous, and I was fast becoming unfitted for my daily work. After all other medicines had failed, I was fortunately advised to use your Paine's Celery Compound; and now, I am delighted to declare that it has no equal in the world for removing such dangerous troubles as I suffered from. I am daily gaining in strength, sleep well every night, and my appetite is good and healthy. I strongly recommend Paine's Celery Compound to all who need a reliable and honest medicine, and one that is sure to cure."

NICARAGUA WILLING TO PAY

If Given Fifteen Days to Raise the $75,000.

HONDURAS MUST SETTLE NEXT

A Rebellion Against the Government Imminent and United States Warships Ordered to Greytown—A Settlement Expected in 48 Hours—A Rebellion Brewing

London, April 30.—A Managua despatch says: "At a late hour this evening President Zelaya received a telegram from Washington, stating that Great Britain would withdraw her ships from Corinto, and give Nicaragua 15 days in which to pay the $75,000 smart money if such a proposition would be accepted by the Nicaraguans. The despatch also states that so far as the remaining conditions in the ultimatum were concerned they would be so modified as to meet the objections of Nicaragua. It is understood that these positions are the result of the efforts of the United States to bring about a settlement of the pending difficulty in a manner alike honorable to both countries. Upon the receipt of the despatch President Zelaya at once held an audience with his principal advisers, and a reply will probably be made within a few hours. President Zelaya, it is believed, will be disposed to accept the terms outlined in the despatch. It will, however, require careful consideration owing to the intense hostility which exists against the British Government and the willingness on the part of some of the people to continue the struggle indefinitely.

A Rebellion Brewing

New York, April 30.—The Herald's Corinto news says the Opposition is taking advantage of the uneasiness to foment a rebellion against the Administration, and the Government is taking steps to nip it in the bud.

Rogoberto Cabezas, Governor of the Mosquito territory, has been recalled, but he refuses to surrender his authority. General Augustine Duarte, the new Governor, leaves to-day with a large number of men.

Business at Corinto is paralyzed. The customs house and the postoffice both remain closed.

It is said that the British Consul at Managua has been handed his passport.

The English appear to be puzzled how to act. There is reason to believe that they will retaliate for the closing of the port of Corinto by blockading San Juan Del Sur, Greytown and Bluefields.

The running of all trains is suspended, and Corinto is practically in a state of siege. No one is allowed to bring provisions into the neighborhood, and supplies are running short.

The British are organizing their government. An officer of the cruiser Royal Arthur says that the next two days will decide whether the British will occupy more territory, including Passo De Caballos, or withdraw altogether, as important telegrams are expected from England.

Official Announcement in the House.

London, April 30.—Sir Edward Grey, Parliamentary Secretary for Foreign Affairs, announced in the House yesterday that the Government had received despatches from Rear Admiral Stephenson at Corinto conveying information that that port had been occupied by the British on April 27, and that no opposition to its occupation had been made by the Nicaraguans. The despatches also stated that upon the landing of the British forces of sailors the Nicaraguan authorities withdrew from the town. To this announcement Sir Edward added the statement that care had been taken that British trade with Nicaragua should not be placed at the slightest disadvantage.

Sir William Harcourt, Chancellor of the Exchequer, moved that the remainder of the session be devoted wholly to the consideration of Government business.

Sir William Harcourt's motion was carried, 252 to 230, a Government majority of 22.

Sir Edward Grey, replying to a question as to the terms of British recognition of the republic of Hawaii, said that official recognition of the Hawaiian republic was given by Great Britain upon the stability of the form of government being ascertained. He knew of no precedent, he said, for the withdrawal of such recognition after it had been granted upon adequate knowledge of antecedent.

Referring to the situation in Nicaragua, Mr. William P. Byles (Liberal) asked if the dispute could not be settled by arbitration. Sir Edward Grey requested Mr. Byles to give notice of his intention to introduce a motion in accordance with his question.

U.S. GUNBOATS ORDERED OUT.

Stationed at Nicaragua Ports in Readiness for the Revolt

Washington, April 30.—After several conferences to-day between Secretary Gresham and Secretary Herbert, the Secretary of the Navy sent despatches to the commanders of the United States gunboats Alert and Atlanta, directing them to proceed without delay to San Juan del Sur and Greytown, Nicaragua, respectively. The Alert is at Panama, and will be in about 1 1-2 days in San Juan del Sur, which is the cable station nearest to Corinto, situated about 100 miles below that port. The Atlanta is at Key West, and can make the distance of 750 miles from that place to Greytown in 2 1-2 days.

When Secretary Herbert was asked the significance of these orders he answered "The newspapers say that a revolution is probable in Nicaragua. They state that the people are very much dissatisfied with the course of the Government and are likely to attempt to overthrow it. In order to protect the interests of American citizens there their lives and property, and following the policy always pursued in such contingencies I have sent the Alert to San Juan del Sur, and the Atlanta to Greytown. In addition to these vessels the Montgomery, now at Mobile, will sail on May 7 for Greytown, conveying the Nicaraguan Canal Commission to that place. The Monterey, which has sailed for Panama, will remain at Panama for the present. With two United States ships on one side of Nicaragua and one ship on the other side, it is plain that American interests will be well protected if the rumored revolution should take place. But I wish it distinctly understood that these vessels are sent to Nicaragua for the purpose of caring for citizens of the United States and their interests, and not on any business connected with the situation at Corinto."

The Alert is one of the older vessels of the navy, an iron cruiser of 1020 tons displacement, and propelled by a single screw. Her main battery consists of four guns, and she does not compare favorably with either of the British ships now at Corinto, although she would probably not be overmatched by the Wild Swan, now at San Juan del Sur, the port of her destination.

While the policy of the Government in the trouble at Corinto is well understood, the first authoritative statement on the subject was not made until to-day. A cabinet officer said that the 'United States could not interfere between Great Britain and Nicaragua in their matter of difference, because Nicaragua was a sovereign state, recognized as such by Great Britain, for offences committed against British subjects.

"The United States Government," he said, "does not undertake to extend a protectorate over Central America and South America to such an extent that a sovereign state of one or the other of these countries may insult another sovereign nation with the expetation that this Government will protect it from forcible resentment by the nation insulted. Such a principle has never been recognized by the United States, and if we attempted to assert it we would incur the enmity of every nation having dealings with Central and South America."

It is understood that the situation in Corinto has been relieved of much of its tension by an intimation cabled by Ambassador Bayard that in case Nicaragua would guarantee payment of the indemnity asked within 15 days, Great Britain would accede to a request for such an extension of time.

BRITISH PRESS COMMENTS.

The Proper Course Pursued Against the Insignificant, Insolent Republic.

London, April 30.—The occupation of the Nicaragua port, Corinto, by British, provoked various and voluminous comment from the London afternoon papers. The Pall Mall Gazette belittles the affair from all points of view, dismissing it with the remark that the object of Great Britain is merely to teach the little Spanish-American Republic manners, not to harm her. The memorial of President Zelaya, lamenting the insignificance and weakness of Nicaragua as compared with England, is, The Gazette says, simply laughable.

The Globe calls attention to the opera bouffe aspect of the affair, the interjection of the Monroe doctrine into which accentuates its ludicrous features. That doctrine, says The Globe, never had any convincing or binding effect upon anybody except Monroe himself, and is not now, if it ever has been, an axiom of international law. The paper condemns the bombastic utterances of certain American journals, and expresses gratification that in spite of them there is no desire on the part of the United States to quarrel with England over that presumed prohibitory doctrine.

The St. James Gazette, while regarding an alliance offensive and defensive with the United States as preferable to a similar understanding with any other country, believes that a standing pact of such a character is a bad thing inasmuch as both parties to such a convention would naturally act together only in certain matters. Seeing that American and British interests in South America are identical, and that England has no intention of making conquests anywhere on the American Continent, there is no ground for American jealousy. It is merely the desire of both powers to conduct their trade peacefully, and both happen to be hampered by the anarchy prevalent in Spanish America. England is disposed to accept the co-operation of the United States to correct this if the latter is inclined to act in concert. Alliance in this direction would be welcome.

Further than this, The St. James Gazette declares in another article that Great Britain has taken the proper and only possible way in the premises against an insignificant, insolent, impudent, arrogant and anarchical little South American Republic. The basis of the trouble seems to be in this case, as in others, that these barbarian Governments rely upon United States protection; otherwise they would behave themselves. Moreover, the Monroe doctrine has been the peg upon which they have hung their absurdities of speech and action. The idea that they seek to convey is that the American Government is ready to afford protection to every South American half-breed who feels like robbing a European.

"These fellows," The Gazette says, in conclusion, "erroneously fancy that the electioneering bombastes furiosos of American journalism utter the sentiment of the Federal Government, but the insolence and aggressions of the Venezuelans and Nicaraguans and others of their kind must be stopped. It is understood that the work in this direction begun with Nicaragua will be continued with Venezuela."

MAY COLLECT FROM HONDURAS.

Britain May Take Steps to Make the Mahogany Republic Pay Up.

London, April 29.—Representatives of Gautemala, who are acting also for Honduras, have been informed by the authorities of the latter country that Great Britain is preparing to take aggressive measures for the collection of the interest on Honduran bonds negotiated in England, upon which that republic defaulted nearly 20 years ago. The interest and principal in arrears, it was said, will amount to between £20,000 and £30,000 per annum, and the proposition is to collect the revenues of Honduran ports until some portion of the overdue interest at least is paid.

The Trouble and Its Origin

Washington, April 30.—The news from London that Great Britain now contemplates a movement against Honduras to collect overdue interest on bonds negotiated in London 20 years ago adds gravity to the situation. The principal ports of Honduras liable to blockade or occupation are Ampala, on the Pacific Coast, and Trujillo, on the Atlantic. One of the trans-Isthmian Canal projects, which at one time was favorably considered, was the construction of a canal, 200 miles in extent, over Honduran territory, from Puerto Cortez, in the Bay of Honduras, to the Bay of Ponseca, in the Pacific.

The present trouble between Honduras and Great Britain had its origin in 1868, when a British company was granted a concession to construct a railroad from Puerto Cortez to the Bay of Fonseca, a distance of 240 miles. The work was begun and sixty miles of the road completed. Then $30,000,000 worth of bonds were sold and operations were abandoned. Since that time the Government of Honduras has repeatedly attempted to reach an arrangement with the bondholders, so as to complete the road. In the meantime the enormous debt has been a bar to the country's advancement, and the Government has been unable to even pay the interest. The sixty miles of road are now operated by W. S. Valentine of New York, who hopes to complete the road to the Pacific when the difficulties shall have been adjusted.

A large proportion of the whole commerce of Honduras is with the United States, the imports from this country for 1891 amounting to $1,159,591, and in 1893 $684,912. The exports from Honduras were in 1891, $649,521, and in 1893, $471,693.

GRAND TRUNK ELECTION

The Semi-Annual Meeting in London To-day.

TYLER TO RECEIVE HIS CONGE

The Rivers Men Claim to Control a Majority of the Votes and the Meeting Is Looked Forward to With Keen Interest

London, April 30.—The annual meeting of the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada, which will be held Tuesday, is being awaited with keenest interest. The committee of the dissatisfied shareholders who are attempting to oust Sir Henry Tyler from the presidency of the company have every confidence that they will be successful in defeating him and placing Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson at the head of affairs.

The committee now claims to have proxies representing stock to the amount of £20,000,000. This is £7,000,000 more than was claimed a week ago. They also claimed to have a command of 620,000 votes. It is pointed out that at the half-yearly meeting in October last the board commanded only 286,681 votes. The city critics, however, say that Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson is only a financial expert, and that he would require the head of an authority high up in railway work to manage the road in case he is successful in displacing Sir Henry Tyler.

In a leader on yesterday's developments in Grand Trunk affairs, The Financial News says: Whatever the results of to-day's votes may be, a minority representing twenty millions of stock is emphatic enough to cause a self-respecting chairman to retire. The Board ought to resign en bloc. The Grand Trunk will never do much good on the present capital basis, whoever may be chairman. One essential factor of future success is a Canadian Board. Possibly at the eleventh hour the chairman will try to conciliate his critics by agreeing to introduce the Canadian element. This, however, would not suffice. Sir Henry Tyler has been the evil genius of the company, and while he controls the road there is no chance of recovery.

CANADIAN REPRINTS IN THE U.S.

Attempts to Prevent Their Sale Fail Because Not a Violation of the Copyright Law.

Washington, April 30.—Solicitor-General Conrad of the Department of Justice, has decided that the copyright law does not prevent American books copyrighted in this country from being published in Canada and sold in this country. The case came up on a cheap edition of "Ben Hur" being printed in Canada and sold in this country. It was sought to restrain the sale, but Solicitor Reeve of the Treasury held that it was not a violation of the law, and Solicitor-General Conrad sustains him.

FISH POACHERS CAUGHT.

Two American Boats Put Under Seizure by the Cruiser Dolphin.

Port Colborne, Ont., April 30.—The fishing cruiser Dolphin, which left the harbor yesterday, returned at noon with two American fishing boats and four fishermen, two in each boat. One of the boats was caught in Canadian waters off Windmill Point, when the Dolphin came up and seized them.

The other boats, the men claimed, were fishing off Sturgeon Point, in American waters, and the fishing not being very good on that shore were sailing back to Buffalo. The wind was blowing from the east, and they sailed too close into Canadian water, as it happened, to where the Dolphin had captured the first one. Capt. Peterson seized it, as finding the boat in Canadian waters with a full fishing outfit, left it liable to be seized.

The two small boats, with their occupants, were towed into port, waiting orders from Ottawa as to their release.

IN NEWFOUNDLAD.

Advices via New York Still Tell of the Anti-Confederation Feeling.

St. John's, Nfld., April 29.—The seal-fishing season just ended has been one of the most successful on record. Two-thirds of the steamers engaged in it did remarkable well, while the remainder made enough to pay expenses. The value of the catch is estimated to be about $500,000. This will prove wonderfully beneficial in thew way of bringing about the recovery of the colony from the recent commercial disasters.

The movement against a union with Canada is spreading rapidly. Petitions opposing confederation are receiving a large number of signatures throughout the colony. The confederation opponents are organizing to contest the question in all constituencies in the coming general election. The disruption of the Government party is probable, as all but the Cabinet ministers oppose federation.

THE CATTLE EMBARGO.

Mr. Angers' Report Failing Scotch Interest Is Dying Out.

London, April 30.—The Scottish papers admit that as Hon. Mr. Angers' exhaustive report has failed to induce the Right Hon. Herbert Gardner, President of the British Board of Agriculture, to release the embargo on Canadian cattle, the agitation in Scotland against the embargo is collapsing on all hands.

ANGLICAN AND ROMAN.

Lord Halifax on the Pope's Letter Touching Union.

London, April 29.—Lord Halifax, president of the English Church Union, addressed a meeting of his society in London this evening. After referring to his recent visit in Rome, and his private audience at the Vatican, he expressed profound gratitude to Leo XIII. for his letter to the English people regarding church union. This document Lord Halifax showed that the Pope's attitude towards the re-union of the Church of England and the Church of Rome was quite different from that of men who were supposed to represent his authority in England.

Volcanoes and Quakes in Mexico.

City of Mexico, April 29.—The volcano of Clima was in eruption last Friday and Saturday, but its activity has almost ceased in the last two days. The eruption was slight and did no damage. Guadalajara, capital of Jalisco Province, was shaken on Saturday by an earthquake, lasting two or three seconds. The earthquake is supposed to have been due to the same cause as the volcano's activity.

DEAN'S CURE.

Users Tell its Worth—We Don't Need To,

MIMICO, Aug. 20, 1894

WM. DEAN, Esq., Dear Sir:

I suffered for a long time with Sciatica and tried all kinds of remedies internally and externally, but to no purpose. I tried blistering but it didn't help either. Finally a friend recommended me to try your medicine, and I did so. From the time I started it I kept getting better, and before the fifth bottle was finished I was as well as ever and have stayed so ever since. I can't say too much in its praise. Yours truly,

WALTER BURGESS.

This medicine may now be obtained from any druggist in dollar bottles, or six for five dollars. Do not suffer nor permit your friends to suffer when you can get it.

The latest anthropological statistics prove that the daily, monthly and yearly number of births exceed the deaths on a ratio 3 to 1.

Piles! Piles! Itching Piles.

SYMPTOMS.—Moisture; intense itching and stinging; most at night; worse by scratching. If allowed to continue tumors form which often bleed and ulcerate becoming very sore. Swayne's Ointment stops the itching and bleeding, heals ulceration, and in most cases removes the tumors. At druggists or by mail, for 50 cents. Dr. Swayne & Son, Philadelphia

A carpet formed of layers of paper, a ply of felt, and an intermediate filling of cotton, and provided with an infold side, producing a spring edge, is a late invention.

Mr. Thomas Ballard, Syracuse, N. Y., writes. "I have been afflicted for nearly a year with that most-to-be-dreaded disease Dyspepsia, and at times worn out with pain and want of sleep, and after trying almost everything recommended, I tried one box of Parmelle's Valuable Pills. I am now nearly well, and believe they will cure me. I would not be without them for any money."

Germany reports 289 instances of suicide among school children during the last six years.

Still Another Triumph.—Mr. Thomas S Bullen, Sunderland, writes: "For fourteen years I was afflicted with piles; and frequently I was unable to walk or sit, but four years ago I was cured by using DR. THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL. I have also been subject to quinsy for over forty years, but Eclectric Oil cured it, and it was a permanent cure in both cases, as neither the piles nor quinsy have troubled me since."

A gold coin depreciates 5 per cent of its value in sixteen years of constant use.

A lady in Syracuse writes: "For about seven years before taking Northrup & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I suffered from a complaint very prevalent with our sex. I was unable to walk any distance, or stand on my feet any more than a few minutes at a time, without feeling exhausted; but now, I am thankful to say, I can walk two miles without feeling the least inconvenience. For female complaints it has no equal.'

It is worse than madness to neglect a cough or cold which is easily subdued if taken in time becomes, when left to itself, the forerunner of consumption and premature death. Inflammation, when it attacks the delicate tissue of the lungs and bronchial tubes, travels with perilous rapidity; then do not delay, get a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, the medicine that grasps this formidable foe of the human body, and drives it from the system. This medicine promotes a free and easy expectoration, subdues the cough heals diseased parts, and exerts a most wonderful influence in curing consumption and other diseases of the throat and lungs. If parents wish to save the lives of their children, and themselves from much anxiety, trouble and expense, let them procure a bottle of Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup, and whenever a child has taken cold, has a cough or hoarseness give the syrup according to direction.

THE CITY SHOULD MAKE THE GRANT

Next Monday night a committee of the Directors of the Agricultural Society will again approach the Council and ask for a grant towards holding an agricultural fair here next fall. It is said that the agricultural society will be satisfied with $250 and surely for this sum the city, as the capital of the Midland District, cannot afford to allow the agricultural fair to pass into the limbo of things that were, another victim of parsimonious shortsightedness.

That the citizens, the business men, are awake to the advisability of keeping the Agricultural Society and its fair a live and thriving issue was abundantly evidenced a couple of months ago when a couple of the Directors were able to secure a subscription list of $500 in a couple of hours. It should not be a question with the Council whether or not the people who attend the fair will while here spend the amount of the city's grant. That is the affair of the merchants and they have proved their interest by subscribing as we have said. The Council's grant would come from the people generally and this being the case is the Council justified in making the grant? We believe there is no doubt of it. Belleville is the centre of one of the richest agricultural districts in the province, and all faddists to the contrary notwithstanding, that is the basis of the city's prosperity and the only excuse for its existence. Whatever then tends toward the progress and advancement of agriculture in this district in just so far tends toward and insures the welfare and progress of Belleville and conduces to the advantage of every resident.

There is no doubt as to the benefit of agricultural fairs to farmers, and their seems to be as little doubt of the expedience of the Councils' complying with the request of the Agricultural Society.

THE TRADE RETURNS

The Tory press are jubilating over the lately issued Trade and Navigation returns. Certainly they are gratifying as an evidence of the push, energy and industry of the Canadian people, but does it not seem like kicking against the pricks, biblically an unprofitable and vexatious task, that the nation should be working harder, living more economically and still be growing poorer. Ten thousand idle men in Toronto, a city of two hundred thousand is an interrogation mark to the country's present condition that all the vain adulation and fatuous denial of the Tory press and Tory politicians cannot convert into an exclamation point of pleased surprise. The country is struggling manfully in the folds of an octapus that is absorbing and living on the energy and industry of the people. It is variously called the National Policy and the protective tariff but the chief tentacles are the same—monoply and corruption. A host of boodle vampires have for fifteen years been living on the commercial life blood of Canada, and the natural products of Canada, the products of her mines, her fisheries, her forest and her agriculture that makes up $103,776,444 of the $112 420,658 of our exports, are taxed at the rate of 27% to support the eight million and a half of manufactured exports.

THAN US MODERNS.

Just to Prove It, a Professor Imposes a Task on One of His Pupils, Who Gave an Accurate Narration of American History Equal in Length to the Iliad.

A distinguished professor in a New York institution of learning favored a Sun reporter with some interesting ideas upon the power of the memory, bearing especially on the opinion recently given by Dr. Max Muller, "that the memory of man has become something totally different from what it was in ancient times, when reading and writing were unknown.

"I do not agree with Muller," said the New York professor, "in the belief that the memorizing capacity of a man has degenerated in the last three or four thousand years. It is true that the Iliad of Homer was kept in existence for ages by oral tradition, and was memorized by many Greeks. It is true that the Kalevala, the great national epic of Finlend, which is as long a work as the Iliad, was kept in existence by the same means, and was memorized by the Hindoos. The facts given by the Oxford scholar are as intertsting as his inferences are erroneous. I believe that there are plenty of living Americans who are capable of performing as remarkable feats of memory as any that were ever performed by Greek, or Finn, or Hindoo. Not long ago I made two or three experiments which seem to me to support this opinion. It is easy to say that there are not precisely analogous to the memorizing of the Iliad or the Kalevala; but it will certainly be admitted that the test of memory in many cases was about as severe as it could have been in the other cases.

"A young man, who was once a pupil of mine, and who is very well versed in American history and of lively imigination, was my first subject. Having occasion to pass a week in his company at a country place. I told him that I would like him to spend a few hours of every day of the week in reciting within my hearing an account of American history from memory, to an extent about as great as that of four books of the Iliad for each of the six days. My young friend asked me to give him an hour to think of the task thus imposed upon him and to promise him that no one but his old professor should be within sight.

"At noon of the first day we were out in the woods, seated upon logs that fronted each other, and with our backs resting against living trees. He began his task. At first he sat on the log, but within a half hour he stood erect as he spoke and gave evidence of the deepest interest in his theme. He opened with a rapid survey of the maritime adventures of the latter part of the 15th century, recounted sundry tales of the Norsemen and the Portuguese, told of the voyages in quest of the unknown, sketched scenes or incidents of tradition or romance, pictured various characters who had played their parts, approached the times of Christopher Columbus, whose personality he touched upon, and at last got to the point where the Italian navigator has hoisted his sails and set out upon his wondersome voyage. What I may call the first book of my young friend's American offhand epic closed with Columbus upon the stage. He had spent fully two hours in telling that part of the tale, which must have been about as long as the first four books of Homer's Iliad. He got warmed up at times, as he stood upon the ground or mounted his log, as he gesticulated or changed the inflection of his voice to suit the circumstance. His language seems to be rhythmical at places, and he turned his periods well. Now, it may with perfect fairness be said that this young man had, in the course of his studies in previous years, memoralized the whole of the story which he narrated in my hearing that day. How else could he have known it? I recognized as I went along passages a-plenty that were of the nature of transcripts from the books of the historians which he studied. I had to smile frequently as I recognized his reproductions of the opinions or even the words of many a historical writer with whom I was more familiar than he was. His memory had served him as well as that of the ancient reciters of the Iliad had served them. And it did not seem to me that the memory of the latter needed to be any greater than his proved to be when put on trial. Why could he not have learned to recite the Iliad literally by the exercise of the same mental power that enabled him to render the narrative which I had heard? I must think that my old master, Max Muller, would revise at least one of his opinions if I were able to tell him of the experiments that I have made with young men in the use of the memory.

"Our second day in the woods," continued the New York professor, "covered about as much as four more books of the length of Homer's. Now Columbus breasted the waves, descried the sought-for land, met the natives thereof, raised the cross, and got glimpses of things that amazed his soul. My young friend's portion of the epic for that day was even better than that of the previous day, and I encouraged him by clapping my hands at some of his passages as I sat upon the log.

"We proceeded with the appointed task upon each of the ensuing four days. He told of the early French and English navigators who sailed the seas that lave our shores; he ranged over the primitive setlements in Massachusetts, Virginia and elsewhere; ran through our colonial history, stopping here or there to give his fancy a chance to play, and brought up more characters than Homer ever knew. It must have been largely through my young friend's memory—was it not?—that he was able to continue this epic. Our third day's and our fourth day's tales were told within the allowed two hours for each day.

"Our fifth day opened with the great figure of George Washington in the background, and even Homer had not a character to equal him. My young friend portrayed the American hero, recounted his achievments, and described the chief scenes of the revolution, mingling his narrative with incidents not less picturesque than those of the Iliad. He closed the day with the Revolution triumph, with Washington as the first President, and with the young republic preparing for its destiny. It was the best of all our days thus far. My young friend had been broken in. He had gained confidence in himself. His experiences had helped him. He felt more free than he felt at first. Upon this day, as upon all the previous days, I often recognized the sources of his knowledge and could almost put my hand upon the very pages of the volumes from which he had got the language he used. Surely all this was the operation of the memory. I say that his memory was the source of his speech, as he proceeded with his daily task.

"Upon the sixth and last day of our task my young friend gave me our country's record from the Revolution to the War of 1812, from that time to the great Rebellion and along down to recent years. I am sure that when the day's duty of two hours in length was ended he had given me in the course of the week as long a story as that which Homer gave in the 24 books of his Iliad; and though he had not in saying that the ability to memorize does not exist in our day to the extent that it existed in ancien times.

"There are men yet living in Finland who, like the men of old, can recite the Kalevala poems, and men in Hindostan who know the Veda by heart, and I guess there are Americans who have memorized the Iliad. I myself can recite the whole of Milton's Paradise Lost, though I have not an extraordinary memory. I firmly believe that the human memory is as good in the 19th century as it was thousands of years ago.

"I have referred to but one of the many experiments I have made in regard to the power of the memory in our generation. All that is needed for its development is training of it in the young. I wholly disbelieve in Dr. Muller's singular statement that the memory has become something totally different from what it was in ancient times. I have no doubt that it is as good in use, when cultivated, as it was in those of our ancestors who first peopled the world, and I firmly believe that it is far better in us than it was in them, as are all our mental faculties."

Turkish Press Censorship.

The more enlightened and educated classes, finding that the papers in their own country contained no useful information or news, subscribed to the Egyptian journals; but not many of these were allowed to be delivered; they were collected at the various post-offices and burned. A few of the natives subscribed to the English, French, and other European papers. These, being in foreign languages, are allowed to enter, but almost every week telegraphic orders arrive from Constantinople ordering the Governors to prevent the delivery of such and such a paper. Once when the foreign mail arrived at Beyrout the newspapers were not delivered, and soon after the Governor, accompanied by the respective Consuls, visited the British and Austrian post-offices. The doors were locked, and they were closeted within for some hours. The Governor took every copy of The Times, Standard and Daily News and cut therefrom with a pair of scissors half a column, which contained a graphic account of the atrocities committed on the Armenians. This was done in persuance of strict telegraphic orders from Constantinople. The act itself was bad enough, but how the Ambassadors should have so far connived at it is inexplicable; and it is somewhat doubtful whether the Foreign Offices in London or Vienna had any knowledge of the occurrence..

In every town of the Empire there is a branch office called the "Court of Public Instruction." Whenever any European publication arrives it is taken immediately to this court, where it is carefully examined. Those that contain nothing objectionable are delivered; but such as do not meet the approval of the learned council are committed to the flames in their presence. About four years ago an English encyclopedia reached the Custom House at Beyrout. Owing to its enormous size and the impossibility of wading through the whole number of volumes, the one containing the letter "M" was turned up and the article on Mohammed carefully perused. It would have afforded considerable amusement to have been present on that occasion, for as a rule Turkish officials do not excel in linguistic attainments, and the censor himself generally knows no language but his own. Imagination therefore plays a prominent part in the direction of the public affairs of Turkey. The erudite members of the council then assembled solemnly declared that that particular volume of the encyclopedia contained matter unfit for the reading of the subjects of the "Crown of Ages and the Pride of All Countries." It was consequently burned, and the remaining volumes delivered.—Nineteenth Century.

Tale of a Resentful Cat.

Blossom is a big grey cat. She has been in the family for seven years, and her mistress thinks she was fully ten when she came uninvited and took possession. Her charms made her welcome, and visitors, as a rule, pet her to her heart's satisfaction. Still she shows her loyalty to her mistress by many feline felicities. One day a young man came for a short visit. He was an inveterate tease. As there was no one else for a victim, he took Blossom in hand, in spite of pleadings and protestations. Her ears were greeted with the strange terms, "Old rascal," "Scape-grace," "Tramp,' and kindred names, till the astounded cat did not know what had come to her. Her pretty ways disappeared, she fled from his approach, and hid whenever she could till he was out of the house. One morning she was missing for some hours, and was not to be found in any of her hiding-places. A loud cry from the chambermaid revealed her whereabouts. Blossom had revenged herself on the visitor's nightshirt, which lay in tatters on the floor. Pussy was scolded, and everyone was cautioned to keep the door shut. In vain! The cat would find her way in and hide till the chambermaid was through for the day, and then the claws went to work, first on the visitor's own clothes if any could be found, and then on the pillow-cases. The young man tried to soothe her feelings, but she would have none of him, and he was glad to cut short his visit. Blossom quickly recovered her usual demeanor, and has never been known to destroy anything from that day to this.—Boston Transcript.

Poultry manure is usually kept dry mixed with earth, but it will be more serviceable if kept moist (not wet), and collected daily. It may be mixed with an equal bulk of dry earth, adding a peck of kainit to five bushels of the mixture. The hard lumps in the dry droppings are due to silicates which form when it is kept a long while in a dry condition.

A French Physician Declares it Has Cost France the Lives of 6,000,000 Soldiers.

A highly interesting study of what 100 years of war have cost France in human life has just been made public by Dr. Lagneau, member of the Academy of Medicine of Paris, and is found in the Lancet. When the revolution broke out, France's effective army was only 120,000 men For the wars waged during the 10 years in Belgium, on the Sambre, the Meuse, the Rhine, the Alps, the Pyrenees, in the Vendee and in Egypt there were called out 2,800,000. At the last census made in the ninth year of the republic there remained of these only 677,598. In killed and in dead by disease the wars of the first republic cost france 2,122,402 men. From 1801 to Waterloo 3,157,398 men scarcely sufficed to fill the blanks which, in an incessant war against combined Europe, France incurred at Austerlitz, Jena, Auerstadt, Friedland, Saragossa, Smolensk, Moscow, Lutzen, Bautzen, Dresden, Leipzig and Waterloo. Under the restoration, Louis Philippe, and the second republic, in spite of the war in Spain (1823), the conquest of Algiers (1830), and the taking of Antwerp, France passed through a period of comparative calm. The army numbered about 213,748, and the mortality averaged 22 per 1,000. In 1853-5 commenced the epoch of the great wars—the Crimea, Italy (1859-60), China (1860-1), Mexico (1862-6), and the disasters of 1870. In the Crimea, out of 200,268 men 95,615 succumbed; in Italy, out of 500,000 there died 18,673; in China, 950; and in Cochin China 48 per 1,000. The second empire cost France about 1,600,000 soldiers. According to Dr. Lagneau's demographic tables the century from 1795 to 1895 witnessed the death in battle or by disease of 6,000,000 French soldiers.

Living a la Japonaise.

I do not know of anything more simpler and more delightful than housekeeping in Japan—if you live a la Japonaise. I myself determined to try it, and, having found a suitable spot to settle in, on the highest hill in Tokio, I proceeded to engage a native servant, who was also to be my adviser as to how to furnish my establishment in strictly Japanese fashion. The furnishing was completed in les than ten minutes, and here are some of the principal items of which it consisted:—Two foutangs or thin mattresses, between which one lies at night, and a makura, a wooden pillow, or rather an instrument of torture for the first few nights, furnished my bedroom; a hibachi, or brass brazier, with chopsticks to stir the fire with, and a water kettle made the hall cozy; and a little lacquer table, a foot squre and about six inches, with a couple of tiny little plates and a bowl, made the dining-room quite complete and replete with every comfort. Two silk cushions were placed in the sitting-room for distinguished guests to sit on.

"Ah," said I to my servant, "but do you not think that I shall need something more?" as to my European mind what I had purchased seemed somewhat insufficient to furnish a twelve-roomed house.

"No, sir," said he in his broken English, "real Japanese gentlemen has no furniture." Upon which I began to feel rather sorry to have emulated the "Japan gentleman." Still, I thought I would go on for the fun of the thing, and, though I must confess as I went around my new abode my rooms did not look overfurnished, I decided to make the best of what I had got. It is astonishing with how little one can do if one tries, and how much better penury is than profusion. When a couple of days had elapsed I almost began to feel that I had furnished my house too richly! I could certainly have done with a deal less.—Fortnightly Review.

He Smoked 638,713 Cigars

The Paris newspapers tell of a peculiar old man who died at Vienna early in March in his seventy-third year. They call him the most exact man of whom there is record. From his twenty-seventh year he kept accurate account of all he bought and what he paid for it. A few days before his death he made up his books to show just what eating, drinking and wearing clothes had cost him during his last fifty-six years. The totals show that in this period he wore out eighty-five pairs of trousers and seventy-four coats and vests, for which he paid $8,000. He had bought 208 shirts and 306 collars, valued at $300. His omnibus fare was $208. In the twenty-seven years of his convivial life he consumed 28,786 glasses of beer. He gave up drinking in his forty-fourth year, but he continued to smoke constantly, even during his last sickness, raising the number of his cigars to 628,713, or an average of 11,217 a year. Of the whole number some 43,500 were given him; he bought the rest for $12,500, or 2 cents each.

This exact old man took most pride in his socks, which were of the best silk and most expensive make, costing usually $4 50 a pair. He wore out but sixty-two pairs between his twenty-seventh and seventy-third years, or hardly more than a pair a year.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

The Cost of Confetti.

Every one who has been in a Continental city at carnival time has seen the "confetti" which are thrown about in the mimic warfare in the streets. The making and selling of these tiny paper pellets constitutes an industry of some little importance. It is estimated that the Parisians alone spend £24,000 sterling, or 600,000 francs, upon them every year. Great fluctuations take place in the selling price. When the fun is at its fastest, and purchasers are eager, the price is as much as a franc and a half kilogramme, or say eightpence a pound English; but towards the end of the carnival holders are glad to dispose of them at 70 centimes a kilogramme, or less than half the former price. The total weight of confetti sold in Paris this year has been estimated at 500,000 kilogrammes, or over 1,000 tons.—London Daily News.

ITCHING AND PIN WORMS. PILES

No More Misery.

ITCHING PILES is an exceedingly painful and annoying affliction, found alike in the rich and poor, male and female. The principal symptoms are a severe itching, which is worst at night when the sufferer becomes warm in bed. So terrible is the itching that frequently it is impossible to procure sleep. Often the sufferer unconsciously during sleep scratches the parts until they are sore—ulcers and tumors form, excessive moisture is exuded. Females are peculiarly affected from this disease, causing unbearable irritation and trouble. These and every other symptom of Itching Piles or irritation in any part of the body are immediately allayed and quickly cured by Chase's Ointment. It will instantly stop itching, heal the sores and ulcers, dry up the moisture.

DR. CHASE'S OINTMENT

PIN WORMS is an ailment entirely different as to cause than Itching Piles, yet its effects and symptoms are exactly the same. The same intolerable itching; the same creeping, crawling, stinging sensation characterizes both diseases. Chase's Ointment acts like magic. It will at once afford relief from this torment.

A Claim for Economy That Doesn't Hold Water.

COMPARISONS THAT MISLEAD.

The Auditor-General's Report Shows How the Government Press Is Pap Fed and the Cost of the High Commissioner—An Interesting Day at Ottawa

Ottawa, Ont., April 29.—An interesting incident of the sitting of the House today was the introduction by Hon. Mr. Laurier and Hon. C. F. McIsaac of Christopher Alphonse Geoffrion, the distinguished member of the Quebec bar, who achieved such a splendid victory over his opponent in Vercheres. Mr. Geoffrion was greeted with tumultuous applause by the Liberal members, who recognize him as a decided acquisition to the Opposition forces. It was peculiarly appropriate that Mr. McIsaac should act as one of his sponsors, for he, too, come forth victorious in a struggle in which every influence was wrought by the Government to defeat him.

AUDITOR-GENERAL'S REPORT.

Ten months after the close of the fiscal year the Minister of Finance laid on the table the report of the Auditor-General. This bulky volume shows how the public money was expended in 1894.

The Government's advertising account was $44,690, and the printing and lithographing accounts $224,935. Out of these sums there was paid $877 to the Montreal Gazette for advertising, $305 for printing, $583 to La Minerve, $265 to La Presse, $344 to The Montreal Star, $6194 to the Sabiston Litho' Company, Montreal, $750 to E. Senecal & Sons, $171 to Le Monde, $575 to Colonisateur, $376 to The Moncton Times for advertising and $14,175 for printing, $2340 to The Toronto Empire, $720 to The St. John Sun for advertising and $9849 for printing, $821 to The Ottawa Citizen, $356 to The Hull Despatch, $651 to The Quebec Chronicle, $559 to The Courrier DuCanada, $315 to L'Evenement, $369 to The Quebec Mercury, $701 to The St. John, N.B., Gazette, and $1109 to The Toronto World. In addition to this The Empire got $1000 for issuing an illustrated World's Fair number.

WORLD'S FAIR ACCOUNTS.

The Columbian Exposition accounts are $113,937; $89,967 for 1893, $37,038 for 1894, and refund amounting to $12,798. The late Senator Tasse received for his expenses at the Fair $3850, and George R. Cockburn, M.P., $4425. J. S. Larke was paid an additional bill for expenses of $5246. In the Fair accounts is an item of sixteen dozen of ale, for which John Labatt, the London brewer, was paid $14.28.

SIR TUPPER'S COST.

That extravagant luxury in London, the High Commissioner, cost Canada $28,887, divided as follows: Sir Charles Tupper's salary $10,000, office staff $8200, contingencies $10,687. The contingencies include $2000 of an allowance to the High Commissioner.

J. C. Nelson of the Dominion Land Survey charged in his expense account the following items: One waterproof pair of boots, $7.50; one pair of trousers, $3.50; another pair of trousers, $4; one portmanteau, $24. The Auditor-General refused to certify to these extraordinary charges.

STOLE GOVERNMENT LUMBER.

The report contains a letter addressed by the Auditor-General to Collingwood Schreiber in regard to the theft of a million feet of lumber from the Curran Bridge Works. Alluding to the conduct of Superintendent Kennedy and the men Darragh and McConomy, he said: "We relied on the certificate of Messrs Darragh and McConomy, that they received all the materials, and they knew nothing about what they were signing. They argued because they were told to do so by the superintendent. Had a proper examination been made by them before certifying, and a record kept of issues, the commission would not now have to report a shortage of 1,000,000 feet of lumber. For the conduct of these two officers, as described by themselves, I can see only three possible explanations, dishonesty, natural incapacity and ignorance. It is so unlikely that ignorance was the sole cause that your department should prove it if they are continued as certifiers of accounts. Even if the department can take the responsibility of saying that these men will in the future perform their duties efficiently, and if retaining them in their positions, I shall think it unfortunate that the country does not derive the improvement in the performance of the public service, which would accrue from their dismissal."

The lawyers got out of the Government during the year $101,078. The portion of O'Connor & Hogg, Ottawa, amounted to $19,850, and Christopher Robinson of Toronto, $21,783.

The House of Commons invested in 588 pearl knives, 19 sample pocket knives and 48 buckhorn knives. The auditor asks for some explanation as to the object of purchasing this large number, but he neglects to publish the reply.

THE ESTIMATES.

The estimates, which were presented to Parliament to-day, show a total on consolidation fund account of $36,834,458, a decrease of $1,682,693. On capital account the estimate is $4,400,959, an increase of $1,215,498. The grand total of the estimated expenditure is $41,243,417, making a decrease as compared with the previous year of $467,195. These are the figures which appear in the summary statement, but a moment's thought will show that they are entirely misleading, and that the claim of economy which they set up is not borne out by the facts. The Minister of Finance for the purpose of showing a decrease, has made a comparison, not between the original estimates of 1894-5, and the original estimates of 1895-6, but between the original estimates of the latter year and the original and supplementary estimates of the former year, the original estimates of 1894-5 showed an amount chargeable to consolidated fund of $37,321,806.02, while this year the amount is $36,854,458.38, a decrease of $487,347.64, and not of $1,682,693.91, as claimed by the Minister of Finance. Under the head of capital account the increase is stated as $1,215,498.01, principally due to the redemption of debt, but it is actually $1,692,373.01, for, while last year the original estimate was $2,716,586.60, this year it is $4,408,959.61. The total original estimate in 1894-5 was $40,038,392.62, while this year it is $41,243,417.99. It comes down to this, that, instead of there being a decrease of $467,195, there is in reality an increase of $1,205,025.

THIS THE LAST SESSION.

Among the details there is an item of more than ordinary interest, for it dispels the idea held by some people that there will be still another session before the Government appeals to the country. It is an item of $150,000 for the general elections, as against $5000 last year. The sum of $2000 is dropped from the item of sessional indemnities, the membership of the House having been reduced from 215 to 213 by the lasy Gerrymander Act. The Minister of Railways and Canals told the House in replying to a question placed on the paper by Sir Richard Cartwright that it would require about $6,000,000 to complete the improvements now under way on the Dominion canals. Mr. Haggart added that it is not the intention of the Government to deepen the channel and canals of the St. Lawrence to a greater extent than is necessary to complete the improvements now in progress.

In its haste to prepare for an election, which it had not the courage to announce, the Government spent $3415.98 in having the voters' lists for the Toronto and York constituencies printed outside of the bureau at Ottawa. Of this sum The Catholic Register The got a large slice. The money was apportioned among the constituencies in this way, as stated by Dr. Montague in reply to Mr. Casey: Centre Toronto $333.60, West Toronto $886.71, East Toronto $616.29, West York $801.25, East York $495.58, North York $282.55.

RETURNS DELAYED.

Mr. Charlton brought up on a motion for a return a subject of considerable importance to the members of Parliament and to the country. It was the inexcusably late period at which the important annual statements, such as the trade and navigation returns, and the Auditor-General's report, have been laid on the table of the House this year. The trade and navigation returns were not presented to the people or their representatives till 10 minutes after the close of the fiscal year of which it treats. Mr. Charlton and other speakers construed the tardiness of the Government in the presentation of these reports with its haste in preparing the voters' lists for the elections.

Upon a motion made by Mr. Edgar for a return showing the increase of duties which this gentleman has imposed, the Controller of Customs objected to the return on these significant grounds. It would involve an enormous amount of work to prepare the information, it would take three expert clerks three months, and if the present staff were to undertake it they would have to neglect all their own duties. The Opposition punctuated this statement with ironical cheers and laughter. It was pointed out by Mr. Edgar that the return was simply the counterpart of one moved for by a Government supporter the other day asking for the decreases of duties. No objection had been made to that.

CATTLE REGULATIONS.

The Government's negligence with regard to the cattle trade was made prominent by Mr. McMillan, who showed that an arrangement with the United States authorities had been made by the Grand Trunk Railway to convey Canadian cattle to Portland without quarantine. This was a great advantage to the cattle shippers of the country, which had been repeatedly urged upon the Government by Mr. McMillan, who made the significant criticism that the cattle trade should be indebted to private regulations for the benefit they received.

REDUCE LIEUT.-GOVERNORS' SALARIES.

In demanding increased economy in the public service Mr. McMullen has led the way by giving notice of a bill, which if it become law will result in a large saving to the country. He proposed to reduce the salaries of the Lieutenant-Governors of Ontario and Quebec from $10,000 to $6000, and of the Lieutenant-Governors of all the other provinces and territories except Prince Edward Island, to $5000, and of the Lieutenant Governor of P.E.I. to $4000.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell introduced the Insolvency Bill into the Senate. He said the measure was so fully discussed last session that it would not take up much time this. The bill was re-introduced this session in consequence of a distince promise given by the late Premier in the House of Commons last session. There were very few changes or alterations made in the bill as now introduced, and none affecting the principles of the measure. Conflicting clauses and clerical errors comprised the only changes from the bill as amended last session. The bill was read a first time.

Miss Mulock, daughter of the member for North York, is here with her father.

The laboratory branch of the Inland Revenue Department has this spring analyzed 84 samples of agricultural fertilizers, an increase of 24 over last year. A bulletin has just been issued showing the relative value of each fertilizer as required by the act.

The accident to the Duc D'Orleans occurred at Seville, when he was thrown from his horse, sustaining a fracture of the leg.

Riot in St Louis Jail.

St. Louis, Mo., April 29.—Riot, bloodshed and a serious attempt to break for liberty occurred last night in the city jail. The Board of Health has forbidden the removal of condemned prisoners to the penitentiary, owing to appearance of smallpox in the jail, and 47 cells in the institution are undergoing repairs. This forces 300 prisoners into 50 cells. Discontent over this has been breeding, and last night it broke out into violence. Five prisoners and four officers were injured.

No Answer Vouchsafed by Japan

London, April 29.—A despatch to the Central News from Tokyo says the reports that the Russian, French and German Ministers have gone to Kioto for the purpose of having an interview with Premier Ito are unfounded. Japan has not as yet officially replied to the joint note of protest sent by the three powers. The Ministers of the powers mentioned are still inclined to take a pacific view of the situation.

COLLIDED IN THE BLACK SEA.

A Russian Warship Sinks a Mail Steamship

Vienna, April 29.—A despatch from Sebastopol says the Russian warship Penderaklia of the Black Sea fleet, collided this morning with the Russian mail steamer Kotzebu, near Takinhut Lighthouse. The Kotzebu filled rapidly. Most of the passengers and crew were taken on board the Penderaklia from the Kotzebu's deck, and others were picked up after she went down. Five men sank with the ship and were lost. The warship was damaged below the water line. She is an iron vessel, nearly 20 years old.

STRAIGHT ORANGE CANDIDATES.

If Remedial Legislation Passes Orangemen Will Campaign New Brunswick.

St. John, N.B., April 29.—Orange Grand Master Kelly stated to-day that, in case the Government passed remedial legislation, the Orangemen would put up candidates in every constituency. In St. John, he says, Dr. Stockton and Major Armstrong, present military storekeeper, will be Orange candidates; in Alberta, H. A. McKeown of this city will run. In Nova Scotia he says the same thing will be done, and Grand Master Gass will oppose Tupper. Printed pledges are now being circulated and signed promising to support no candidate who favors remedial legislation. Kelly says the Orangemen mean business and to be consistent, and they can do nothing else.

FATAL STROKE OF A WHIP.

A London Teamster Killed by whipping Up His Horse.

London, Ont., April 30.—George Hammond, a teamster in the employ of the London and Petrolea Barrel Co., while driving a load of wood, applied the whip to the horse. The animal started with a jerk, dislodged the wood, on which Hammond was sitting. He fell under the horse's heels. The animal kicked him and the wheels passed over his body, inflicting injuries from which he will die.

"A little more than two years ago my hair began to turn gray and fall out. After the use of one bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor my hair was restored to its original color and ceased falling out. An occasional application has since kept the hair in good condition."—Mrs. H. F. Fenwick, Digby, N. S.

Growth of Hair.

"Eight years ago, I had the varioloid, and lost my hair, which previously was quite abundant. I tried a variety of preparations, but without beneficial result, till I began to fear I should be permanently bald. About six months ago, my husband brought home a bottle of Ayer's Hair Vigor, and I began at once to use it. In a short time, new hair began to appear, and there is now every prospect of as thick a growth of hair as before my illness."—Mrs. A. [illegible], Polymnia St., New Orleans, La.

Temperance People

The Board of Commissioners for West Hastings met in Trenton on Thursday the 25th inst., for the purpose of granting liquor licenses for that town. Following are the names of those who will sell liquor during 1895:

TRENTON.

Taverns—Messrs. A. Parent, Jas. Pelkey, James A. Tompkins, John Callanane, Isabella Bleecker, A. Filion, Mary Sweet, James Stevenson and John Belch. Shops—Stuart Hooey, S. S. Bonter.

SIDNEY.

Taverns.—G. W. Clarke, James Breman, James Sweetman, Mary McCambridge and Stephen Tufts.

A deputation from the W. C. T. U. and the R. T. of Temperance from Trenton waited upon the Board and stated that the council had promised them to cut down the number of licenses and also compel those retaining them to close at nine o'clock. They asked the Board to adjourn until Friday the 27th inst in order to allow the ladies to wait on the town council. The comissioners decided to do this and the ladies waited on the town council and were informed that the licenses would not be curtailed. The ladies then asked the commissioners to act on their behalf, but they felt they could not do so and passed the following resolution:

That whereas the Board of License Commissioners for the West Riding of Hastings met at the town hall in the town of Trenton. On the 25th day of April to consider the applications for licenses for said town and whereas a deputation of the Royal Templars' and W. C. T. U. waited upon the board and requested the Commissioners to adjourn until the 27th inst (Saturday) so as to give the deputation time to wait upon the town council, and ask the said council to reconsider and recommend the closing of the hotels in Trenton at 9 o'clock every night, and whereas the request of the deputation being granted to adjourn till Saturday and the town council failed to make, or ask the license commissioners to make any such restrictions or regulation. We the License Commissioners of West Hastings are of the opinion, considering all the circumstances connected with the matter, that we ought not to interfere with the internal management of the hotels regarding the closing upon every night at 9 o'clock, but would strongly recommend the carrying out of the law during prohibited hours by all the licenses in this riding.—Carried.

A BICYCLE MEET

The Ramblers Arranging With the Regatta Committee for a First Class Event

The committee from the Ramblers Bicycle Club met a number of the members of the Regatta Committee in the Quinte Hotel last night with a view to arranging for a meet here this summer. The Ramblers decided to co-operate with the Regatta Committee and will hold a meet here during the proposed regatta. The Ramblers ask for $50 to put the track in condition, and that the regatta committee put up the prizes which will amount to about $500 or $600. The Regatta committee agreed to put up the prizes and allow the wheelmen a share of the surplus receipts.

A Short Story Illustrative of Kindergarten Methods and Results

The incorporation of the Kindergarten into the educational systems is one of those distinctively progressive steps that have combined to so distinguish the declining years of this century. Within the year it has been introduced into Belleville and though from the first its footing has in no way been precarious, it has thus far been ensconced in the pleasant privacy of a nominal fee. But its promoters purposed for it a more popular existence among our educational institutions. Since, however, Kindergarten literature is not common, and wouldn't be popular if it were, knowledge of Kindergarten methods and purposes is not very widely diffused; and as the Kindergarten may become an issue in educational matters we will give a short story named "Patsy," by Mrs. Kate Douglas Wiggin, illustrative of Kindergarten methods and results. It begins to-day and will run serially for a few days and will prove both interesting and profitable. Mrs. Wiggin is one of the most accomplished and talented of present-day American women and readers of The Ladies' Home Journal will remember a pleasant sketch of her in the April number. She was the founder of the free Kindergarten in San Francisco.

The Kindergarten has re-opened with an additional teacher and a few more pupils may now be accommodated. The price of material for the remainder of the year will be twenty-five cents., with the regular tuition fee of one dollar a month.

MOST INVALUABLE

The new Specfic Remedy is Being Extensively Used in Ottawa

OTTAWA, April 30.—The marvellous recovery of Mr. G. H. Kent of this city from Bright's disease by the use of Dodd's Kidney Pills is still fresh in the memories of Ottawa people, and the remedy is being freely recommended both by druggists and private citizens. The similar wonderful cures of Dr. A. C. McCormick of Richmond, Quebec, and of Mr. Arthur Coley of Somerset, Manitoba, to say nothing of many others, are generally quoted in favor of the assertion that no remedy of modern times has gone so successfully through a severe trial, and been so efficacious in all cases of kidney trouble. It is also proving itself invaluable in the milder forms of sickness which appear during the spring.

The Boyle Players

There was not a very large attendance last evening in the Queen's Opera House to witness the first appearance of the Boyle Players in the very pretty comedy drama Mabel Heath. The playing by the different members of the company was very good. Miss May Bell, who is well known to Belleville audiences sustained her good reputation by her clever acting and sweet singing. Miss Florence Ramsdell was also very good as was Fred Forest, A. B. Butler, J. H. Rowland and W. J. Mack; Messrs. Butler and Perry are clever clog dancers and received round after round of applause. Mr. F. Forest also pleased the audience with a number of popular ballads. To-night the company put on the popular play Jane, and no doubt they will be greeted with a larger audience than was present last evening.

The Evolution

Of medicinal agents is gradually relegating the old-time herbs, pills, draughts and vegetable extracts to the rear and bringing into general use the pleasant and effective liquid laxative, Syrup of Figs. To get the true remedy see that it is manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co. only. For sale by all leading druggists.

A pretty wedding was celebrated in St. Thomas' church this afternoon when Miss Mary S. Clarke, youngest daughter the late Francis Clarke, was united in marrage to Mr. Charles J Boldrick, of Stirling. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Canon Burke, assisted by the Rev. Henry Blacklock. The bride who is one of the most popular of Belleville's belles, was charmingly attired in an ivory white Irish poplin gown, trimmed with antique lace and large picture hat of chiffon and plumes, and carried white roses the gift of the groom. A gold bracelet, the gift of the groom was her only ornament. The bride was given away by her brother Mr. Joseph D. Clarke. The bridesmaid Miss Ida Clarke was handsomely gowned in white, and carried pink roses. Major J. Earl Halliwell acted as best man.

The alter steps and rail were tastefully decorated with flowers and palms, and the church was crowded by a fashionable gathering.

The bridal gifts where numerous and costly among which might be mentioned: complete set of sterling silver spoons and forks, and coffee service, cabinet grand piano, French ormolu clock, cabinet writing desk, Dresden china candelabra, banquet lamb, hand lemoge tea set and a beautiful gift from the bride's Sunday School class.

The travelling costume of the bride was a tailor made gown of fawn tweed. After their return from their wedding trip, during which they will visit the principal American cities. Mr. and Mrs. Boldrick will reside in Stirling.

LITERARY NOTES.

New Light on the Old Prayer, by Rev. John Campbell, LL.D., F.R.S.C., Toronto: William Briggs. Price, 15 cents. This is, as the title indicates, an Exposition of the Lord's Prayer. The author is a distinguished minister of the Presbyterian Church in Canada, and Professor in the Presbyterian College, Montreal. This published lecture gives evidence of much careful thought, and does indeed throw new light on the petitions of that familiar prayer. Prof. Campbell regards the Pater Noster as no mere routine aspiration of the pious soul, but, rightly understood, as the Church's mightiest weapon in the great spiritual struggle of light with darkness. It is worthy of wide circulation.

The 5000 Best Books

When a woman sends her subscription to The Ladies' Home Journal special privileges seem to go with it, besides getting her full money's worth in the magazine. She can take the fullest advantage of a perfect educational plan by which she can educate her daughters or sons at the best colleges in the country free of charge, and now the Journal has arranged it so that she can buy her books—even a single book at a time—at prices heretofore obtained only by large buyers. There comes to us from this magazine a very artistically-gotten-up illustrated booklet of over 250 pages, called "5000 Books," which serves as an easy guide to the best books in any department of reading. This guide is very well done. The best literary experts of New York, Boston and Philadelphia were engaged by the Journal to select the five thousand books which it presents as the most desirable for a home library, and their work has been admirably carried out. Very clear, explanatory comments are given by these men of books and besides there are given not less than 160 portraits of leading authors. No book will, perhaps, do so much to extend good reading as this guide, so carefully gotten up, so beautifully printed, and so generously offered, free of any charge, by the publishers of The Ladies Home Journal. "5000 Books" is unquestionbly the best and easiest guide to a wise selection of books that has been issued for a long time.

CHAPTER I.—THE SILVER STREET KINDERGARTEN

It makes a heaven-wide difference whether the soul of the child is regarded as a piece of blank paper, to be written upon, or as a living power, to be quickened by sympathy, to be educated by truth."

It had been a long wearisome day at the Free Kindergarten and I was alone in the silent deserted room. Gone were all the little heads, yellow and black, curly and smooth; the dancing, restless curious eyes, the too mischievous, naughty, eager hands and noisy, feet, the merry voices that had made the great room human, but now left it quiet and empty. Eighty pairs of tiny boots had clattered down the stairs; eighty baby woes had been relieved; eighty little torn coats pulled on with patient hands; eighty shabby little hats, not one with a "strawberry mark" to distinguish it from any other, had been distributed with infinite discrimination among their possessors; numberless sloppy kisses had been pressed upon a willing cheek or hand, and another day was over. No—not quiet over, after all. A murderous yell from below brought me to my feet, and I fled like an anxious hen to my brood. One small quarrel in the hall, but it must be inquired into on the way to the greater one. Mercedes McGafferty had taunted Jenny Crawhall with being Irish. The fact that she herself had been born in Cork about three years previous did not trouble her in the least. Jenny, in a voice choked with sobs and with the stamp of a tiny foot, was announcing hotly that she was "not Irish, no sech a thing,—she was Plesberterian!" I was not clear whether this was a theological or racial controversy, but I settled it speedily, and they ran off together hand in hand. I hastened to the steps. The yells had come from Joe Guinee and Mike Higgins, who were fighting for the possession of a banana; a banana, too, that should have been fought for, if at all, many days before,—a banana better suited in its respectable old age, to peaceful consumption than the fortunes of war. My unexpected apparition had such an effect that I might have been an avenging angel. The boys dropped the banana simultaneously, and it fell to the steps quite exhausted, in such a condition that whoever proved to be in the right would get but little enjoyment from it.

"O my boys, my boys!" I exclaimed, "did you forget so soon? What shall we do? Must Miss Kate follow you everywhere? If that is the only way in which you can be good, we might as well give up trying. Must I watch you to the corner every day, no matter how tired I am?"

Two grimy little shirt bosoms heaved with shame and anger; two pairs of eyes hid themselves under protecting lids; two pairs of moist and stained hands sought the shelter of charitable pockets,—then the cause of war was declared by Mike sulkily.

"Joe Guinee hooked my bernanner."

"I never," said Joe hotly. "I swapped with him i'r peach, 'n he e't the peach at noon-time, 'n then wouldn't gimme no bernanner."

"The peach warn't no good" Mike interpolated swiftly seeing my expression,—"it warn't no good, Miss Kate. When I come to eat it I had ter chuck half of it away, 'nd then Joe Guinee went t' my lunch bucket and hooked my bernanner."

I sat down on the top step, motioned the culprits to do likewise, and then began dispensing justice tempered with mercy for the twenty-fifth time that day. "Mike, you say Joe took your banana?"

"Yes'm—he hooked it."

"Same thing, you have your words and I have mine, and I've told you before that mine mean as much and sound a little better. But I thought that you changed that banana for a peach?"

"I did."

"Then, why wasn't that banana Joe's? you had taken his peach,"

"He hadn't oughter hooked—took it o' my bucket."

"No, and you ought not to have put it into your bucket."

He hooked—took what warn't his."

You kept what wasn't yours. How do you expcet to have a good fruit store, either of you by and by, and have people buy your things, if you haven't any idea of making a good square trade? Do. try to be honest; and if you make an exchange stick to it; fighting over a thing never makes it any better. Look at the banana!—is it any good to either of you now?" (Pause. That still small voice was busy, but no sound was heard save the distant whistle of the janitor.)

"I could bring another one to Joe tomorrow," said Mike, looking at his ragged boot and scratching it along the edge of the step.

"I don't want yer to, 'f the peach was sour 'n you had to chuck it away," responded Joe amiably.

"Yes, I think he ought to bring the banana; he made the trade with his eyes open, and the peach didn't look sour, for I saw you squeezing it when you ought to have been singing your morning hymn.—I thought you would get into trouble with it then. Now, is it all right Mike?—that's good! And Joe don't go poking into other people's lunch baskets. If you hadn't done that you silly boy," I philosophized whimsically for my own edification, "you wouldn't have been a victim; but you descended to the level of your adversary, and you are now simply another little rascal."

We walked down the quiet narrow street to the corner,—a proceeding I had intended to omit that day, as it was always as exciting as an afternoon tea and I did not feel equal to the social chats that would be pressed upon me by the neighborhood "ladies." One of my good policemen was there as usual and saluted me profoundly. He carried the last baby over the crossing, and guided all the venturesome small boys through the maze of trucks and horse-cars,—a difficult and thankless task, as they absolutely courted decapitation,—it being an unwritten law of conduct that each boy should weave his way through the horses legs if practicable, and if not should see how near he could come to grazing the wheels. Exactly at twelve o'clock, and again at two each day in rain or sunshine, a couple of huge fatherly persons in brass buttons appeared on that corner and assisted us in getting our youngsters into streets of safety. Nobody had ever asked them to come, there chief had not detailed them for that special duty; and I could never have been bold enough to suggest that a guardian of of the piece with an immaculate uniform should carry to and fro a crowd of small urchins with dusty boots and sticky hands.

But everybody loved that Silver street corner, where the quiet little street met the larger noisyone! Not a horse-cardriver but looked at his brake and glanced up the street before he took his car across. And it was a pleasant scene enough to one who had a part in it, who was able to care for simple people, who could be glad to see them happy, sorry to see them sad, and willing to live among them a part of each day, and bring a little sunshine and hope into their lives.

"Good afternoon Mr. Donohue! All safe across?"

"All safe miss! Sorry you troubled to come down Miss. I can be depended upon for this corner, miss, an' ye niver need bother yerself about the children after ye've once turned them loose, miss. An' might I be so bold, seein' as how I might not have a better chance—would ye be so kind as to favor me with yer last name, miss? the truth bein' that ivery one calls ye Miss Kate, an' the policemen of this ward is gettin' up rather a ch'ice thing in Christmas cards to presint to ye, come Christmas, because, if ye'll excuse the liberty, miss, they do regard you as belonin' to the special police.

I laughed, thanked him for the intended honor, which had been mentioned to me before, and gave him my card, not without a spasm of terror lest the entire police force should invade my dwelling.

The "baker lady" across the street caught my eye, smiled, and sent over a hot bun in a brown paper bag. The "grocery lady" called over in a clear, ringing tone, "would you be so kind 'm, as to step inside on your way 'ome and fetch 'Enry a bit of work 'm! 'Enry 'as the 'ooping cough, 'em and I don't know 'ows ever I'm going to keep 'm at 'oms another day, 'm, he pines for school so!"

I give a nod which means, Certainly!

A Perfect Substitute for Natures Food.

Doctors Say: It is the best in the World.

In the study of what constitutes proper infant nutrition, the most eminent medical authorities find there can be no correct theory except it be founded upon the study of the composition of human milk. A perfect infant nourisher has been given to mothers in the form of Lactated Food and the success that has attended its use proves it to be the most successful ever introduced. Lactated Food is the nearest approach, of all infant foods, to pure mother's milk, and possesses every important element found in nature's food.

GENTLEMEN,—In the spring of 1891 I got a bottle of B. B. B. for my mother, who had been troubled with Sick Headache. I got it from Mr. H. Paxton Baird, of Woodstock, N. B., who gave me two other medicines to take home and let my mother take her choice. Fortunately she chose the B B. B., and I returned the other bottles. She used it for three months and has had no headache since. We are sure it was B. B. B. cured her as she took no other medicine.
